Participation high costs down for Rec. Department

Participation in programs sponsored by the recreation commission is as high as ever — the cost is just way down.

Jack Worley, recreation director, explained this week that he couldn't run the programs without volunteers.

"They've become critical," he said looking over the lists of projects on the bulletin boards at town hall.

"We have as many volunteers now as paid staff," he commented. "I'd have to double that part of my budget to pay all the instructors $4 an hour and that's not much."

The recreation program responded to the dictates of Proposition 2½ by seeking out volunteers to supplement the staff and by using fees to generate revenue.

The fall program, which just ended, included 14 programs for 1,225 participants. It generated $3,315.50 in fees. Some other money collected went to pay actual costs — like those of the ski weekend and white water rafting expedition.

Worley said the level of involvement is about the same as it was in past years.

"The difference is the budget," he said. Finding volunteers for the courses and sports is the hard part.

"Once you find them, you're all set," Worley said. He pointed out that in the past referees were paid for arbitrating street hockey and basketball games. This year the referees work one game on a volunteer basis and are paid for the next game.

The fees for the programs are kept to minimal levels. The largest turnout in the fall season was for the only free program offered, according to the statistics available. The open gym program was held over nine weeks and attracted 300 youngsters.

The most expensive program on the list was the white water rafting at $90. There were 12 people who did the work. All of that money went to the vendor.

The fall soccer league, at $6 a person, was a popular project. There were 240 youngsters signed up for the league, bringing the town $1,122. So far 225 have signed-up for the winter basketball teams, bringing in $1,047 to the town at $6 a head.

Other revenue producing programs included: creative dramatics, $6 each with 26 participants yielding $133; and basketball clinics, $5 each and 38 youngsters involved for $152.50.

Other programs run on a revolving account basis were: aerobics, 12 students at $10 each; jazzercise, 15 students at $10 each; skating lessons, 85 students at $15 each; ski trip, 42 participants at $16 each; ski lessons, incomplete figures show 33 students involved at $40 each; magic lessons with also incomplete figures indicate 16 students at $20 each, and the ski weekend with partial results had six taking part at $88.50 each.

Lagrotteria wants to solve problems

By Patricia Desmond

"A family man for a family town," that's Jim Lagrotteria's campaign slogan.

He plans to take that campaign for a seat on the board of selectmen house to house, talking about the issues in town and why he wants to contribute to solving them.

Among those problems at hand are: the dump question, the successor to the fire chief, the state of development (or lack of it) along Route 3A, expansion of the tax base through attraction of light industry, lack of business procedures in governing the town, the second year of Proposition 2½.

Long dump lines irk residents; commercial ban is rescinded

Long lines are becoming the weekend rule at the Cedar Street dump and residents are registering their dissatisfaction with the operation.

Meantime the board of health has temporarily — at least — rescinded the order banning commercial haulers from using the landfill.

The decision to prohibit commercial trash collectors from dumping in the town landfill was made at the board's regular meeting at the end of December.

Since then the selectmen voted to ask for reconsideration, encouraging the board of health to set up a public hearing on the issue.

Right now that public hearing is scheduled for Monday, Jan. 11, at the regular health board meeting at 43 Elm Street.

Selectmen last week talked over the situation with some local business people and the commercial haulers. None of them have seemed pleased by the health board actions.

The point the haulers have been making is that the lines at the dump will grow far longer with increased traffic on site and people won't be willing to pay the cost of trash collection if a private dump is the ultimate resort since the cost of collection would double.

The cost of collection for haulers unable to use the municipal dump would be about $8 a week for a household.

"People just won't pay it. They'll take their own trash to the dump and the place will fill just as quickly but the traffic will be worse," one of the local haulers said last week.

The lines lengthening at the dump are not created by the recent commercial hauler decision but by the need to change the dump operation.

Town meeting was called in mid-December to deal with a state mandate to provide money for capping the dump with clay plus providing movable bins for dump goers. The article was not acted upon for lack of a quorum. The bins would then be moved by a worker to the lower level where filling is now underway.

One woman complained she ruined a tire by picking up broken glass while taking her trash to the lower level of the dump.

More of the complaints were about the wait to take trash to that lower level. The number of cars that can be emptying out trash has radically decreased under the new plan.

Officials say the special town meeting now scheduled to reconvene on Monday, Feb. 22, may

Revaluation nears the finish line

By the end of the week, the assessors hope to finish their part in the process of revaluation.

Assessor Warren Pratt guesses their figures may indicate a tax rate of less than $25.

The '81 tax rate was $54.75.

The board is meeting this week in special session to discuss individual assessments.

"We're going over the figures (worked out by the consultant Thomas Mahoney)," Pratt said. "Some we think are too low or too high."

He said the 5,000 or so parcels, which indlude about 2,000 households, need to be checked by the board before being sent on to the state Department of Revenue.

It will be 12 weeks before the state certifies the figures, he said. Some of the figures may be changed by the state.

"It disturbs me," Pratt said about the process. "We used to have local autonomy. The town was able to do things like this before on its own. Now the new valuations have to be certified.

"We did it (revaluation) 10 years ago; that time we did it and it was so."

He said the total valuation figure, as worked out by the consultant and approved by the assessors, will be available when the figures are ready to go to the state.

"That doesn't prove it won't change," Pratt said.

In the meantime the assessors will look into when they can send out impact notices to property owners detailing the new valuation figures.

Meetings will be set up for anyone who disagrees with the assessment figures.

Cable TV committee

The cable television study committee planned its first meeting for this week.

The meeting will be basically organizational. It is expected a chairman will be elected and some material from the state cable commission distributed amongst the members.

The committee, appointed by selectmen last month, includes: Donald McAllister, David Chittim, Joseph McCool, Terrence Farrell, Ann O'Malley, Robert O'Hayre and Joseph Mercurio.

Warrant closes Feb. 3

The warrant of the annual town meeting closes on Wednesday, Feb. 3. The annual town meeting is scheduled for Saturday, April 3, this year.

Mail does get through

The post office seems to be doing an incredible job delivering the mail even through all the holiday traffic.

Greg Derr, the Mariner photographer, was able to pick up a package in Post Office Box 71 (our in town address) recently. The package was addressed to Greg Derr, Mirror Foto man.

The Mirror (for anyone who does not know) is another weekly paper in town. Greg doesn't work there.

And close on the heels of the package which arrived in timely fashion was a letter from a subscriber marked Cohasset Mariner (our name), MPG Communications was crossed out on the second line (owner of the other paper in town) and the third line said Box in drugstore or Curtis.

Our dropspot is at the Colonial Pharmacy in the Village, but that isn't where our mail goes.

Again the misaddressed envelope was put into old P.O. Box 71 by some considerate postal worker.

T. Gerard Keating, postmaster, was asked how his people managed to track down that sort of mail in the midst of the holiday rush.

He laughed and said, "Well, we try. Somebody must have realized who the mail was for and placed it in the Mariner box.

"It's nice to get a compliment."

Public hearing Jan. 6

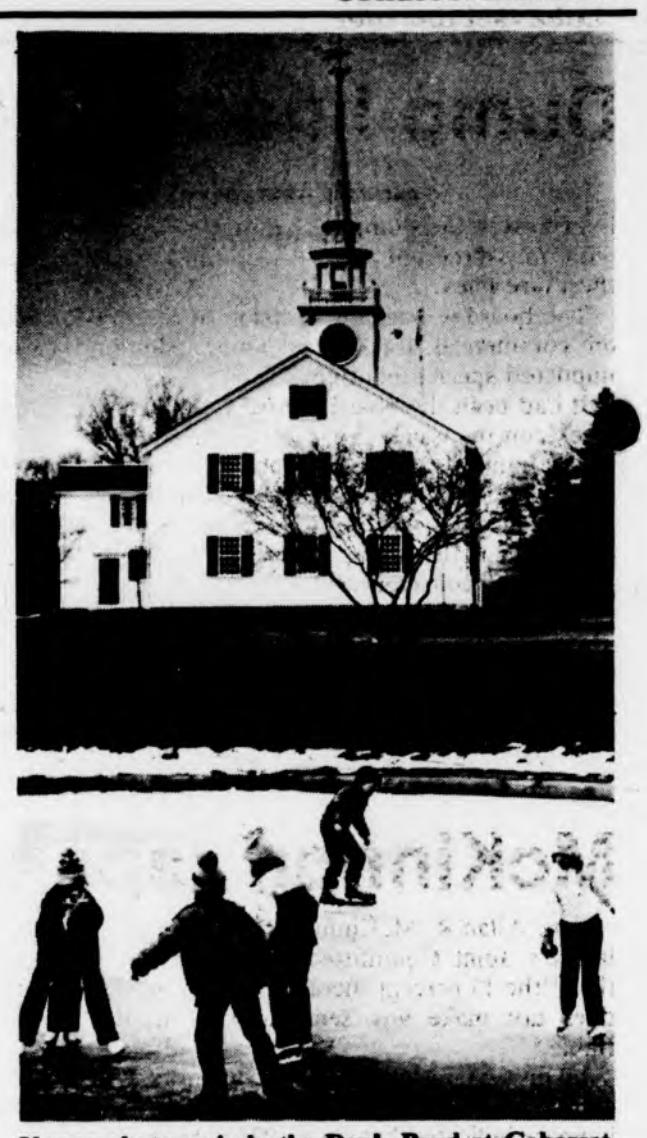
The planning board will hold a public hearing tonight (Wednesday, Jan. 6) at 8 p.m. to discuss the definitive plans for a cluster development proposed on Pond Street.

The plans submitted to the planning board by Frederick Thayer call for 27 single homes and four three-unit buildings in a cluster off 100 Pond Street.

Unfounded bus fears

Fears expressed at the start of the school year about the state of the school buses seem to have proven unfounded.

The buses on the seven regular routes are in the 10-year range. Two of the buses were purchased for a total of $2,000 at the start of the school year from a former bus contractor for the town, Charles Pape.



Officials and parents alike agree there have been no major or even noticeable problems with the buses. All the buses on the school runs were used in past years by the town.

Solar permit granted

The zoning board of appeals recently granted Jane White permission to build a passive solar sunporch at 99 South Main Street.

The sunporch will provide heat for the kitchen in her home.

A hearing on the application had been held in November and no one appeared in opposition to the variance. Several abutters spoke in favor of the construction which will be on an existing platform.

Dump lines irk residents ...

help hasten the dumping process of residents. But with only three bins, there will still be times when there are lines.

The board of health's decision to rescind the ban on commercial trash was made Monday at an unposted special meeting.

It had been the board's third meeting in as many weeks on the issue.

The haulers say there are about 550 residents who use their services. That's about a fourth of the homes in town and enough to make a significant difference in the traffic, according to one of the still upset trash collectors.

The disposal area study committee doesn't plan to meet again until after the adjourned session of special town meeting.

Some of the members of that committee felt strongly that the town should consider paying Jim Tyerar of the Cohasset Heights dump to take the town's trash rather than trying to prolong the life of a dump the state is pressing to close. The state's rational is the possibility of polluting Rattlesnake Run. The present operation is at about water table level, according to engineering data.

Members of the disposal area study committee, who are charged with coming up with a long term solution, think the figures will work out about the same whether the trash is hauled to a private dump or whether the engineering plans are implemented at Cedar Street.

Members of the board of health want a longer range commitment on the price of disposing of the trash, if that is to be considered.

The dump at Cohasset Heights is scheduled to be sold and the price quoted the town was for a one year option.

McKinnon raps insurance hikes

Sen. Allan R. McKinnon, Chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Insurance reports that "the 15 percent increase in auto insurance rates does not make any sense and is totally unjustifiable."

"This is outrageous," McKinnon said. "The Commissioner himself in his statement relative to this increase indicates that since 1976 auto insurance rates have increased a total average of 16 percent; and now they are going to equal that increase in one year. It is just a give away, pure and simple."

Governor King just vetoed the "as is" bill which would allow used cars valued at less than $750 to be sold without guarantees. While that action gives the impression that the King Administration is consumer oriented, it pales to insignificance compared to what they are giving away to the auto insurance companies with this rate increase," McKinnon said.

In his statement the Insurance Commissioner also mentioned that the auto insurance industry suffers inflation like everyone else. McKinnon said, "I would point out that the latest figures show that inflation is dropping below double digits. Yet, the Insurance Commissioner can file for this 15 percent rate increase and say that it projects a double digit inflationary picture for the future.

"The companies have just enjoyed one of their best years ever due to money market investments where interest rates are running 15 percent to 20 percent," McKinnon said.

"I would suggest that the Commissioner send out a message to the auto insurance companies that they do just what government at all levels has been forced to do — cut the costs of their operations," he said.

The South Shore Senator went on to say that the Attorney General has suggested an auto insurance rate increase less than 10 percent. "I have a lot more confidence in the Attorney General's rates than in those suggested by the present administration. Evidently, the King Administration has decided that the way to win next year's election is to build a political war chest, and elements of the auto insurance industry will surely be in the forefront of those generous contributors."

A series of eight classes, aimed at preparing parents specifically for alternative birth experiences, will begin Jan. 13.

The classes are given under the direction of Homebirth, Inc., a non-profit organization of parents interested in reclaiming control over the birth of their children at home or in the hospital.

The classes are taught by a trained Homebirth leader and supplemented by a lending library, educational reprints, guest speakers, birth films and slides.

Responsible birthing is the main objective of the course. Interested expectant parents may call Kate Caldwell, 383-1498, or Kim Gilden, 224-4360 for further details.

Acid rain is more than a threat to Cohasset

By Bucky Yardume

At the moment, acid rain has affected only one pond in the six Mariner communities — Norwell, Hingham, Hanover, Cohasset, Marshfield and Scituate — with Old Oaken Bucket Pond in Scituate showing signs of impact. But the danger is drawing closer steadily to area water supplies.

A recent report from state agencies indicated that 10% of the over 1,000 ponds in the Commonwealth are impacted seriously by the outfall from industrial and other sulphuric emissions emanating principally from the Midwest to the Northeast and Canada.

In discussion with both the Division of Fisheries & Wildlife and the DEQE (Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering) it was revealed there are two areas of concern.

Richard Keller of F&W explained that so far, impacts of acid rain on Massachusetts ponds have taken their toll principally on fish.

Alan Van Arsdale of DEQE revealed lesser but nonetheless existing effects on the state's drinking water supplies.

Both cited levels of concerns as 5 to 10 parts per million or more as not yet serious. Five or less parts contamination, however, are of definite concern in Barnstable, other Cape water bodies, those in Lakeville and as close as Plymouth where several ponds in that community's public water supply reflect danger levels.

"Old Oaken Bucket Pond in Scituate has 5-10 part levels which isn't that bad yet," revealed Keller, who said water bodies in Plymouth and on the Cape "are not completely dead yet."

"But it's just a matter of degrees of susceptibility," Keller continued. "We deal only with impacts on aquatic life. The results are reduced stock and elimination of certain fish species."

Keller said standard water testing probing for PH and alkalinity levels reveal acid rain impacts and freely predicted. "It probably is going to get a lot worse."

Keller said the South Shore is lucky that the ocean provides a buffer protecting inland ponds.

"One pond can be adjacent to another, yet escape impacts due to geological conditions," Keller explained. "It's hard to impossible to make firm predictions."

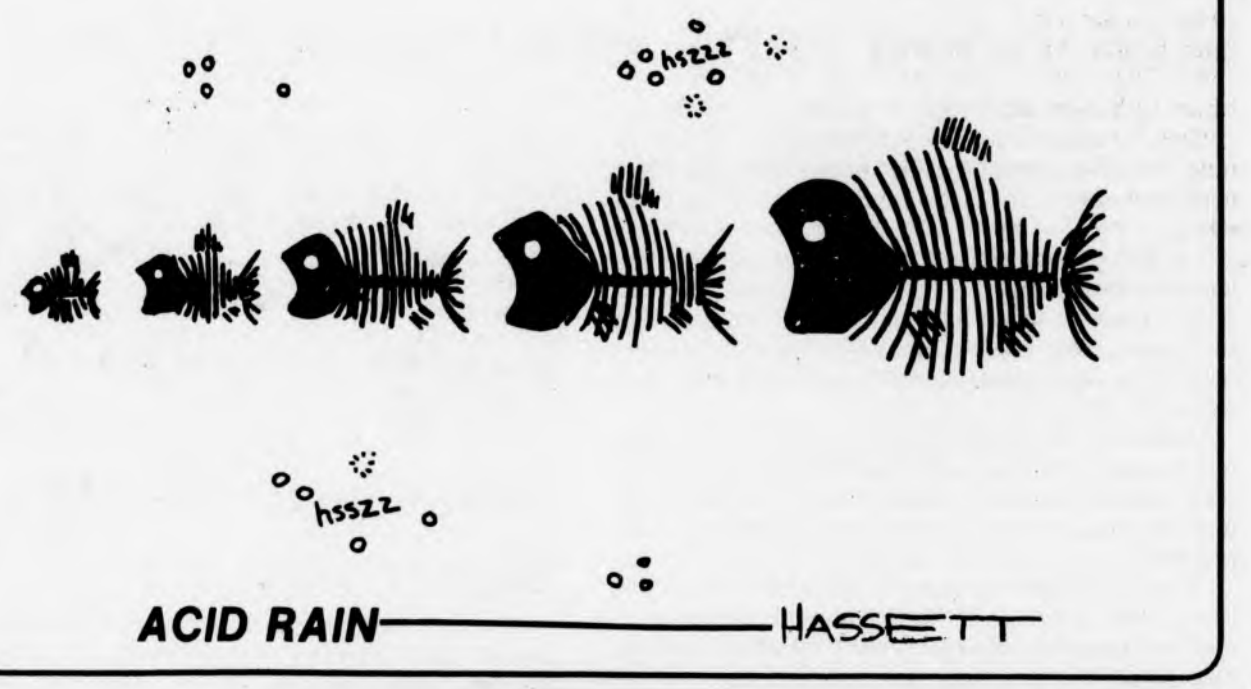
Asked if impacted fish life can be helped, Keller said, "You never can restore aquatic life completely. Evolvement over a long period has eliminated certain life systems. They're gone."

He sees in preliminary assessments all ponds to be vulnerable, around 47%.

Acid rain emanates principally from use of fossil fuels of high sulphur and nitrous oxide emissions which reduce alkalinity in water bodies.

Reservoirs, the experts said, began to show a drop in alkalinity in the 1950's and 1960's as well as in PH readings.

Van Arsdale warned levels are cumulative.



Neither he nor Keller blamed conversion to coal, commonly designated as the culprit.

"You can use almost any kind of fuel so long as pollution devices are utilized," Van Arsdale maintained. "It's when little or no pollution controls are used that you get large pollution of acid rain. In New England, we have the best of emission controls. We have used low sulphur fuels at considerably more expense and equipment like precipitators to reduce sulphur further. But in the Ohio belt there's little or no control. That's where the pollution is coming from. It's pollution on the Northeast from outside the area."

Van Arsdale thinks the Washington Administration will be forced to come around to retaining Clean Air Act regulations because of public pressure,

Bellotti to speak to area Democrats

Gregory R. O'Meara, Chairman of the Hingham Democratic Town Committee, announces that Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti will be the guest speaker at the January brunch of the Coop-5.

The Attorney General will speak on Sunday, Jan. 10, at a brunch to be held at the Whiton House, 1217 Main Street, Hingham. The brunch will run from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and the price per ticket is $5.

The Coop-5 consists of the Democratic Town Committees of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield and Scituate and it sponsors a series of brunches, which rotate from town to town, to bring candidates for, and incumbents of, constitutional offices to the five communities so that a dialogue can be established between the speakers and the residents of the Coop-5 communities.

The general public is invited to attend this and all Coop-5 brunches, but it is necessary to purchase tickets in advance. To purchase tickets please contact the following people: Cohasset, Donna McGee, 722-2140; Hingham, Margo Cartwright, 749-4958; Hull, Anne Scully, 925-0888; Marshfield, Phil Johnston, 722-2140; Scituate, Joan Hefner, 545-1593. For further information concerning this brunch please contact Gregory R. O'Meara, 749-1155.

Acid rain is more than a threat ...

something not so far evident and, in fact, quite the opposite with Reagan efforts to reduce or even eliminate protective regulations. "Tampering with protective regulations means politicians simply won't get elected," Van Arsdale said.

He also says there are methods to help affected water bodies. Liming raises ionic strength and increases PH content rendering water resources more robust with more ability to neutralize the acidity.

"But," he warns, "it's a treatment system that must be repeated because water flow carries off treatment materials."

It also doesn't come cheap. Van Arsdale estimates cost at $50 to $150 per water acre, with cost dependent on accessibility.

"If there's easy road access it's cheaper obviously," he said. "If you have to go to helicopters, while more effective, it's also more expensive."

Addressing Jacobs Pond in Norwell as an example, Van Arsdale said heavy development in that watershed tends to increase chemicals in the water and raise the ionic strength and reduce susceptibility to acid rain.

"But," he hastens to add, "that's a two-edged sword. We prefer underdevelopment in watersheds wherever possible because of other pollutants just as damaging."

By the year 2,000, Van Arsdale calculates, acid rain could hit the local area harder unless something is done soon.

"That's not as far off as some think," he adds.

Winter, Van Arsdale says, can be particularly damaging in acid rain.

"Snow melting creates a problem," he explains. "The pollutants accumulate on snow. Then when there's a melt, extremely toxic materials run off into aquatic areas impacting organisms."

He says a steady decline in alkalinity has been observed for over 40 years. There was a beneficial rise due to the drought, but vigorous rains again reduced alkalinity needed in water bodies.

Nor'easters aren't the area problem. Winds from the West and Northwest bring in the sulphuric acid poison.

Of sample, 17% of 850 Cape ponds of five acres or more reflect vulnerability and impact.

Regular Board of Health testing of water supplies should reveal problems, Van Arsdale said.

Long range, he sees 60% of Mass. reservoirs to be vulnerable.

"In the end, it becomes a political problem," Van Arsdale concludes. "It's important that legislators, both at the state and Federal levels, be made to understand what we're facing."

around town

☐For the first time in many years, the skiing up country is great and many families have already taken advantage of it.

The Kirdendall family of Cedar Acres Lane had their first taste of New England downhill skiing in New Hampshire. At the other end of Cedar Acres, the Gormans headed for the mountains of Vermont to Killington. Bill Kelley and his family had a great time at Kings Ridge in New Hampshire. School superintendent Eugune Crowell planned to take a couple of days from his busy schedule to ski at Waterville Valley.

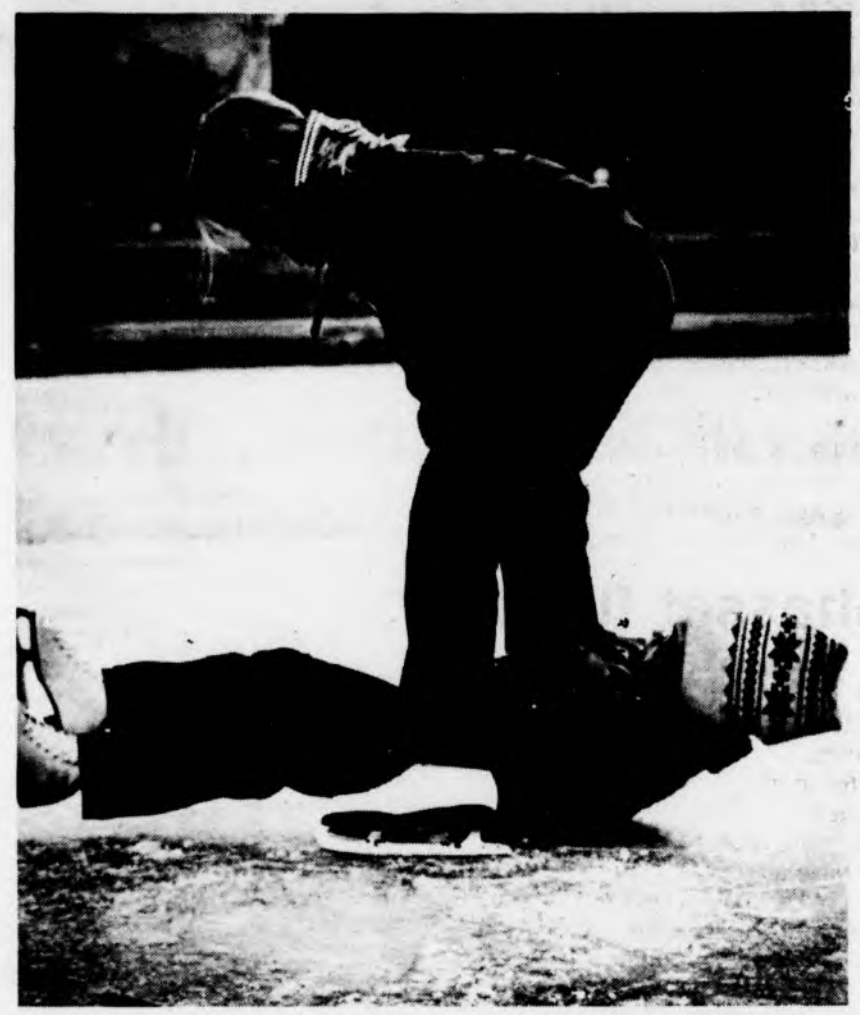
☐Jerry Reed headed North to Maine as did the Gearys of Hillside Drive. Both families said the conditions were perfect to enjoy a variety of winter sports.

☐While the wind chill factor and trail conditions were an important topic of conversation for many, others, such as the Terry McCarthy family headed for the Florida sun and that main attraction — Disneyworld.

☐Jim Leonard and his family traveled to New York for the holidays where, in the city, he found the potholes had been steadily growing since his last visit. My sister, Stephanie Mendelson, can agree to this. She says she was afraid that she's lost her little Datsun in one while on her way up from West Virginia to spend the holidays with us.

☐The many customers that Rene Chaisson has served over the past 26 years in the plumbing and heating business have now been notified of his January retirement. We all wish both him and his family a happy life in their new home in Florida. In the meantime, Bill Higgins of Harbor Mechanical Contractors will now be answering Mr. Chaisson's old phone number at 383-1041. In the business for over 12 years, Bill's company offers a range of services from minor repairs to complex plumbing and heating installations.

☐Vacation time is the worst of all possible times to be sick, especially with the Chicken Pox. Ask Mika-Marie Laugelle, Tara Volungis and Julie Manns, who, at least, had their many new Christmas toys to occupy their time.



☐David Myers of the David Myers Traveling Road Show addressed a group of Cohasset residents during a recent stop of the Road Show at Cohasset Town Hall. The program, sponsored by Gallery 360, was developed to help the potential home buyer understand today's changing real estate market, and to show him how he will benefit financially by purchasing a home now. The David Myers Traveling Road Show is available free to groups on the South Shore. If you would like to schedule a program featuring the Road Show, contact Pamela Blevins at 837-0600.

☐The Plymouth County Board of Realtors has elected Robert J. Mullin of Scituate President for 1982.

Before assuming his new post, Mullin of Dwyer and Mullin ERA Real Estate of Cohasset, completed a term as vice president of the board in 1981.

A graduate of Boston College, where he majored in accounting, Mullin was associated with Johnson and Johnson Company for 15 years. He is a former Marine First Lieutenant.

The Cohasset businessman has been in the real estate business since 1970. He is a graduate of the Realtors Institute (GRI), a Certified Residential Specialist (CRS), and is recognized as a Certified Appraiser/Senior from the American Association of Certified Appraisers.

Colby Lawrence, 6, gets a free slide from Kris Ellinger at the Duck Pond.

☐The ice was just right for skating, before the rain, and many Cohasset children and a few of their braver parents have been taking advantage at various areas about town. Paula Almeida was out for a spin with her children, recently, and when last seen all seemed to be enjoying themselves very nicely.

☐I have a friend in Cohasset who has been more than a bit enthusiastic about electronic games to the point where, if she doesn't already, she soon could have her own video center. Having received the dubious distinction of receiving the lowest score in mechanical ability ever recorded in the history of my high school, it took a good deal of encouragement from my friend to convince me of the value of these games. Concentration, strategy, eye-hand coordination were some of the positive factors, my friend, who was also a teacher, listed.

And so we have now installed Atari in our family room and it has been, as predicted, an instant success — with everyone except me and it's not that I haven't tried. Having dutifully sat down with the rule book and, even to the surprise of my family who are well acquainted with my deficiency, managed to learn to manuever those strange little objects on the screen. I have yet to discover why everyone in the world (or at least it seems that way) finds these games so fascinating.

It's been said that such activities are great for family togetherness but here is one family member who now spends most of her time in the farthest part of the house trying to get away from that awful sound of obliteration which appears to be the main object of the game.

Auto insurance

What ever happened to the merit rating plan that was supposed to save so much money for the "good" drivers?

We hear they'll be getting $17 a piece back in 1982. That will be more than wiped out by the rate increases.

The problem with the insurance industry is that they aren't regulated enough.

It seems their lobbyists control the governor's office and most of the rest of the world. It's a wonder the plan they had for so-called reform (namely, to let them set their own rates without going through the pretense of regulation) didn't pass the legislature. The insurance industry spent enough of our money on it.

People just shrug and pay the bills. And that's a mistake. At least let Sen. Allan McKinnon and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray know the increases are unfair. And let them know that letting the fox set the price for chicken is not the only or an acceptable alternative.

Something is wrong when auto insurance cost more than state taxes.

In our territory, which is called #6, people with minimum coverage will find their premiums increasing only 1.4 percent, according to the state insurance commissioner who came up with the plan.

That's not bad. But we happen to think the cost of insurance for drivers who haven't had an accident in the past few years should be going down, not up. Especially when minimum coverage provides so very small a return in the event an accident happens.

For people with maximum coverage, the jump in cost will be 11.4 percent. State officials say that's because the cost of repairs and medical care is increasing so rapidly. We wonder. We hear accident claims have decreased in the past few years.

For an inexperienced Cohasset driver (meaning drivers with less than three years of a license) the rates will increase 11.5 percent for minimum coverage and 18.1 percent for maximum coverage.

It's unfair. Undemocratic. It smacks of a political conspiracy.

We're not so sure mandatory insurance is the best way to protect the public. It seems if the state were to abolish the system of mandatory insurance and set up a special fund to pay the victims wronged by uninsured drivers, the public at large would save a bundle.

Dump the dump

Lines at the dump are becoming a weekend occurrence.

The traffic problems there weren't mentioned, as we remember it, during the discussion of the plans for prolonging the life of the dump.

Maybe the idea is that if the board of health makes it annoying enough for people to bring their trash to the landfill and too expensive to have private contractors pick it up, recycling will take hold.

More thought should go into the landfill plan as far as the tie-ups are concerned. And perhaps more thought should go into abandoning the dump in favor of paying to be rid of it.

What's happening up on Cedar Street just isn't working.

Lagrotteria wants to solve ...

The way Jim sees the town's present operation, the selectmen respond on a crisis basis to one issue after another.

"There's no consideration given to planning," he said sitting inside the administrative office at Glastonbury Abbey just over the line in Hingham.

Jim is business manager for the abbey. He's also vice chairman of the advisory committee, a position he plans to keep as long as possible.

"It's important for the advisory board to maintain close and solid contact," he explained. "It's not the time to bring in a new member. We set up priorities last year that have to be carried through."

That decision — to stay on the board of advisors — will keep him in the thick of decision making throughout the development of the '83 budget.

The guidelines for the budget have alreay been set. Expenses town-wide must be kept to the level of last year's spending. And then there will be (approximately) enough money left to provide regular raises without the need of cutting manpower in general government further.

Last year the manpower level was cut here and there. But no one was actually laid off. The cuts were made by attrition. There was a CETA worker who wasn't picked up by the town and there were school department workers cut — partly due to declining enrollment.

One firefighter who was scheduled to be laid off, when an expected retirement didn't happen, as the chief believed, has been kept on due to an advisory board transfer. The department's manpower level will decrease to 24 this year.

Lately there's been some talk of appointing a public safety commissioner after the fire chief retires.

Jim placed a resolution before town meeting several years ago asking that the idea be studied.

"But it's too late for that now," he said. "The Fire Department can't be left without a head for six months while the town is making up its mind."

That doesn't mean he thinks the idea should be shelved. He still thinks it's something that could be done in the future since both police and fire departments are so small and located in the same building.

"But there are a number of problems," he pointed out. Among the difficulities are the fact that the police work 40 hours a week and the firefighters work 42 hours. Police work 8 hour shifts. Firefighters shifts alternate between 14 and 10 hours.

On the dump, Jim said that the issue clearly lies within the jurisdiction of the board of health.

"The leaders of the town should lead, not just appoint a study committee and walk away from it."

He thinks the idea of paying a private contractor to truck away the trash should be presented to the town as an option.

Jim said he is anxious to bring his business knowledge to the selectmen's office.

He wants to see the board working to anticipate problems before they reach a crisis stage.

He talks about the lack of chain of command in general government. He wants town counsel present at selectmen's meetings when a sensitive issue is being discussed because he thinks the lack of immediate legal advice leaves the town more vulnerable to law suits from disgruntled residents.

Town counsel's presence would be to help the board "avoid poor judgment or misunderstandings."

He stands behind the decision to reduce street lighting in town.

"I was one of the people who voted to cut expenses and I still feel it's important to cut any expense as opposed to relieving a man of work."

The advisory board — in its decision to go after level funding of town budgets — is still working within that framework.

"I'd rather cut street lighting than lay off a person."

Jim says if the advisory board is able to hold the line as it set it, the levels of manpower will not need to be further reduced.

He believes the town can get by adequately with the current manpower levels.

"I wouldn't want to see further cuts," he said.

He would like to see an industrial development commission appointed to work on attracting light industry to town.

"Route 3A over the long run is the only potential source for a broader tax base," he said. "There are enough intelligent people in town to be able to actively seek small businesses and provide jobs for our kids."

He doesn't think the distance from the highway or the space between Cohasset and Boston would affect the effort, pointing out that towns further away than Cohasset are able to lure industry.

"I'm not talking about a Raytheon or a Hingham Industrial Park," he added. "I don't think we have the land for that anyway."

He said Cohasset people would be the workers.

"I'd like to see more happening on 3A than gravel banks and trees being cut."

He talks about issues, concerns, management techniques of town government.

He's been thinking about running for selectman for the past year.

"I made the decision a week before Christmas," he said.

"I talked to people and asked them point blank whether they thought I had enough ability to get in there and do something. They were all for me. Once I made the decision to go, I decided to announce quickly.

"The decision wasn't something arbitrary."

Jim and his wife, Dorothy, are the parents of 11 children from 24 to 8 years. All the children are either graduates of Cohasset schools or are still attending them.

He said he has the support of his family.

He began thinking about getting into the race because he personally, as a taxpayer, had questions about what was being said and done.

One of his questions is about the Bell tennis court case.

Another question is why the town is in the rental business on Government Island.

"The rent (of the two houses there) isn't paying enough to maintain the houses. It doesn't make sense."

He thinks the town should put those buildings up for sale before a roof starts leaking.

He also thinks the old fire department property ought to be sold to whoever will pay something for it. Let the new owners worry about the problems with the buildings.

Jim will be facing Rocco Laugelle in the April election. Rocky has yet to announce his candidacy for reelection but is expected to say the word soon.

"I think I can do more," Jim said when asked why he decided to run. "The town is facing some important decisions."

I sing the body neglected

By Paul Steven Stone

I was asleep. The world was dark, the bed was soft, and the smile of Christmas contentment was waging a peaceful war with the muscles of my bloated face. Suddenly a groaning sound pulled me from my slumbers, my first thought being that one of my daughters was troubled.

With surprising lightness I sprang from the bed. Halfway to the door of the bedroom I stopped when the mournful cry repeated itself, imitating with startling perfection the lowing of a calf that had lost its mother. The sound arose to my rear, causing me to turn with curious concern. I noticed that my wife's slumbers were undisturbed, her usual symphony of freight train noises passing full steam through both nostrils. Thus I was left in total confusion as to the source of the plaintive and pathetic cry.

It issued again; a more sincere portrait of torment I had never before witnessed. But how, I asked myself, could it be coming from my very own bed? Cautiously, I tiptoed back to see.

"I'm dying," a pained voice exclaimed. "And it's your fault. You've done this to me."

The voice arose from a figure lying on my bed that strangely enough, appeared to be no one but myself.

"Who are you?" I asked — I stuttered actually. "What are you doing in my bed?"

The figure laughed, but the effort seemed to throw him into deeper realms of misery and, finally, once the pinnacle of pain seemed to subside, he rasped out with undisguised irritation, "I'm your body, little that it matters to you."

I quickly grasped the import of his remarks, understanding now the special feeling of lightness that I had experienced since arising from the bed.

"Oh dear," I said weakly."What's wrong? Can I help?"

"Help?" he laughed. "Oh, you've helped, all right. I found that third helping of rocky road fudge particularly helpful this evening. It did so much to balance off the two turkey sandwiches, the three glasses of wine, the two cups of coffee, and the frozen pizza you had for dessert. I couldn't ask for more help than that."

"I guess I did overdo things just a bit," I said sheepishly. "But after all, it's the holiday season. One tends to overindulge..."

"To the point of gluttony?" he interposed, the words ending in a shuddering spasm that crystallized into a groan more pained and elongated than any that had preceded.

"You'll have to get up," I said anxiously. "We'll take something to make you feel better."

"What would you suggest?" he asked bitterly. "Some more cold mashed potatoes?" Then to himself, he remarked wearily, "I could understand the pizza, but cold mashed potatoes?"

"It's a thing from my childhood," I tried to explain. "I always liked cold mashed potatoes."

"I remember," he said with a disgusted wave of his hand. "And cold spaghetti, and cold macaroni and cheese, and cold turkey stuffing, and cold vegetable soup, and..."

"Well, look" I said, cutting off a list that could have trailed off into infinity, "you have to do something about this. You can't just lie there in pain."

"I have done something," he answered. "I've given up."

"Given up?" I repeated nervously. "What do you mean, given up?"

"You're a writer. You understand English. Given up. I've had enough. I'm pulling out."

"You can't do that," I protested. "What will I do?"

He smiled for the first time.

"I hadn't thought about that," he answered with joyful malice. "Cut down on your eating, I suppose."

"But that's not fair," I argued. "This is all so sudden. You haven't even given me a fair warning."

"Hah!" he exclaimed. "I've been warning you for days, and what good has it done?"

"You've been warning me for days?"

"What did you think all that stomach rumbling was, Christmas caroling? Why do you think it took so much effort to lift yourself off a chair, to get out of bed, to eat half a dozen Christmas cookies?" His tone of voice turned bitter as he added, "Hey listen, when you've come to the point where you have to wear all your pants unbuttoned at the top, I figure you've been warned enough!"

"But you can't do this to me," I pleaded. "Think of her. Think of the kids. And, besides, it's still the Christmas season..."

"That's what I'm thinking of. Your Christmas season lasts until the last bowl of popcorn on Superbowl Sunday. I'm just not up to it anymore. Lord knows I've tried."

"But what if I make a promise?"

"What kind of promise?"

"To watch what I eat, to think about you in all that I do?"

"And that cherry cheesecake downstairs in your mother-in-law's refrigerator?"

"I'll treat it like poison," I promised.

I could see he was weakening in his resolve.

"Come on," I prodded him. "Let's go take something for your distress."

"Well, I don't know," he answered uncertainly.

"I know just the thing," I said confidently. "You'll feel like a new body in no time. I promise you will."

"All right, Paul Steven. I'll give you one more chance. You don't deserve it, but we've been together a long time."

"That's right," I said, helping him to painfully rise off the bed. "After all, Christmas comes but once a year."

"I'll show you," I said, helping him stagger through the dark bedroom.

Just then my wife woke up, her freight train commotion coming to an abrupt halt halfway up the nasal grade.

"Where are you going?" she called out sleepily.

"Downstairs to take something for my stomach."

"Don't bother," she said, already searching for the dream she had moments ago abandoned. "I finished off the cheesecake."

"That's okay," I answered lightly. "I think there's still some butter-nut ice cream left."

Family counseling begins with questions

By a Psychologist at the Center

Mrs. Jones was nervous and angry when the family arrived at the Coastal Community Counseling Center for the first appointment. Angry because her 15 year old daughter, Linda, had given her a hard time about coming to the Center just because Linda's little brother, Billy, age 11, wasn't doing his schoolwork. Nervous, because she also did not know what to expect from counseling.

Mr. Daley, (not his real name), a social worker at the Center for over 6 years, explained the Center's procedures. The evaluation of the problem usually took two or three sessions, after which Mr. Daley would make recommendations about counseling. He also explained that the Center accepts health insurance and medicaid; a sliding scale fee based on income and family size is also available and no one is turned away because of finances.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones were still feeling confused about the evaluation and counseling process. When Mr. Daley invited them to ask questions they shared some of their concerns:

1. Do you have any experience with kids who have similar problems? (The Center works with children of all ages who come about a variety of school and family problems.)

2. Will you contact school personnel? (The Center has worked in close cooperation with the schools for many years and, if the family gives permission, will contact the school and work with them to help the youngster having difficulty.)

3. If we begin counseling, how long will it take before Billy is straightened out? (That can be better answered at the end of the evaluation; most families average 6 to 10 sessions, though some come as long as a year or more.)

4. Do we all have to come to the counseling sessions? (Again, that can be better answered at the end of the evaluation; usually, all come for some of the sessions and various members for others. Sometimes the child having problems and/or the parents are seen in counseling groups. Other times the child might be seen individually or the parents seen so that they could learn to help the child themselves. It all depends on the nature of the problem.)

5. Will you be able to offer specific techniques for how we can help Billy? (The evaluation and counseling have two main goals: to understand the problem and how it makes people feel; and to work out techniques to help.)

Mr. Daley encouraged the family to let him know when they thought of other questions they wanted to ask; Mr. and Mrs. Jones felt a little funny about asking questions, but agreed that they would try.

Next week — "So what's the problem?"

Peace Coalition opens 1982 season

The South Shore Peace Coalition is beginning its 1982 season by conducting a program in Quincy entitled "Can Quincy Survive A Nuclear Attack?" Based on the assumption that Fore River Shipyard is one of the areas targeted by the Soviet Union as part of its deterrent or retaliatory strategy, the program will show the extent of affected areas and describe the effects of a nuclear blast on the populace.

The speaker will be Dr. Robert L. Paterson, a member of Physicians for Social Responsibility and the Steering Committee of the South Shore Peace Coalition. He spoke recently at a meeting in Hingham which was co-sponsored by the Hingham Clergy Assoc. and REACH and at which he described what the targetting of Fore River Shipyard would mean to Hinghamites as the radius of blast effects from Quincy spread out over Weymouth and Hingham Bay.

The film "Paul Jacobs and The Nuclear Gang" will be shown at this meeting. This film uses actual footage of a nuclear blast on the Nevada Proving Grounds and its effects on personnel and civilians in the area. Paul Jacobs was the reporter who spent 20 years investigating the short and long-term effects of radioactive fall-out and interviewing victims. According to Arthur Unger of the Christian Science Monitor, this film is "a tribute to the determination and integrity of one investigator...also a testament to the determination of the average American to regain some control over his environment."

All concerned citizens are invited to attend this program. It will be held on Thursday, Jan. 14, at 8 p.m. in the hall of Quincy Centre United Methodist Church on the corner of Granite and Fort streets.

This program is part of a series being conducted for the public in South Shore towns by the South Shore Peace Coalition using a variety of speakers, film and subjects. The Coalition provides current literature on nuclear weapons, the arms race, economic impact of military spending, national security concerns, and international peace.

Art Center sponsors workshop

Winter watercolors are fun to do and there will be a good opportunity for beginners to advanced painters at the one-day workshop with Virginia Avery of Marshfield at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

Enrollments must be made in advance to participate in the Saturday, Jan. 16 class that will meet from 10 to 3 p.m. with a break for lunch.

If it is a bright day with snow on the ground the group will board a heated bus where each participant will have a comfortable seat by a window from which they will paint the snowy landscape. If weather does not permit, the class will meet in the Center studio. There will be a small additional fee if the trip is taken in the bus.

The workshop will begin with a demonstration by the teacher and instruction will be given on an individualized basis for all levels of abilities. Ms. Avery has had her work exhibited at Boston City Hall, Prudential Center and Boston Symphony as well as in the South Shore galleries and Festivals. She has had one-woman shows at the Westwood Gallery and the Providence Watercolor Club. She received her degree in Art Education from Boston University and did further study at the Boston Museum School in Massachusetts College of Art.

S.S. Conservatory begins spring semester

The Spring semester at the South Shore Conservatory of Music, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham will begin Monday, Feb. 1.

A non-profit community school of the arts, the Conservatory has been giving private and class lessons in music, dance and drama for the past 11 years. Registrations for next semester for new pupils will be taken the week of Jan. 18 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Continuing students may re-register the week of Jan. 11 to 15 in order to hold their present lesson time.

Private lessons will be available on all instruments for pupils of all ages and levels of ability. Music Theory classes are free for all private lesson students.

Classes for children will include: Ballet, Guitar Fun, Recorder Class, Creative Dramatics and Kinderchor (Children's Choir). The "Joy of Music" class involves little children in the creative process of making music using the Orff philosophy; a perfect background for more formal lessons later. Both piano and violin lessons taught by the Suzuki method will be offered this spring. Children, with parent participation, learn to play without reading notes at first. Concentration is on proper use of the instrument and ear training, learning by rote and imitation with teacher/parent support and encouragement. Note reading is added when the child is comfortable with the instrument.

Adults may enjoy: Voice, Ballet, Guitar Workshops, Jazz Workshops, or Adult Acting Workshop. Two courses in Music Appreciation will be offered. Jazz buffs may study the history of Jazz in "Jazz Throughout the Years" which will be instructed by pianist Tim Kelly on Tuesday evenings. The music of "Haydn and Stravinsky" will be explored in David Witten's Thursday evening class. "Music and Movement" (Dalcroze Eurythmics) will give students and parents of music students a feeling for rhythm and music by using the whole body. Martha Rogers will conduct this fun class at 12:30 on Wednesdays...try it instead of lunch.

For further information about the spring classes at the Conservatory contact the office at 749-7565. The Conservatory also has two branch schools; one in Duxbury at the First Parish Church on Route 3A (923-2731) and one in Brockton at the Universalist Unitarian Church on 325 West Elm Street (583-8593).

AFS plans special international weekend

The Cohasset chapter of the American Field Service has planned a special international weekend on Jan. 7 to 9.

Beginning Thursday afternoon, several Cohasset families will welcome to their homes seventeen AFS students in the South Shore area, as well as some of their host brothers and sisters.

This event will provide a new experience for the students and will give interested Cohasset families a chance to learn more about the AFS program.

The gala weekend includes dinner with the families; a dessert party given for all the young people by Cohasset's own AFSer Holly Grant, who leaves soon for Uruguay; a full day of classes at Cohasset High School; and a rousing after school basketball game between Cohasset and Rockland.

Then, on Friday evening the families and their young guests — some in native dress — will gather at the school for an international potluck supper. Each AFSer will be introduced by Area Representative Marge Farrell, and all will be invited to show slides of their home countries.

The weekend promises to brighten the new year with international flair — and perhaps to open new worlds for other students.

Southern Mass. Cablevision to apply

Southern Massachusetts Cablevision, owned by the Alda Group of Connecticut, plans to file an application for the Cohasset cable license should the town seek applicants.

Peter Pratt, who represents the Alda Group locally, said the company is seeking licenses in about 50 towns in Massachusetts.

The company won the Marshfield license last year, only to have the award put aside on a technicality. Pratt said the company will file applications in January in Marshfield, Pembroke, Scituate, East Bridgewater and Norwell.

In February, the company will apply in Bridgewater. In March applications will be filed in Rockland and Whitman. In April an application will be filed in Hull.

Two applications are pending — one in Hanover and one in Abington.

Just last month the company was selected in Foxboro by the cable advisory committee there as the top choice for the town franchise.

Gourmet-Decorator Club

"Window Dressing" will be the topic for the Tuesday, Jan. 12, meeting of the Scituate Arts Association Gourmet-Decorator Guild.

Marge Benson, a Cohasset decorator, will discuss the many window treatments suitable for the variety of homes in Scituate and present samples of the different fabrics used in decorating today. Mrs. Benson has done rooms in the Junior League Show Houses in years past and will show pictures of the window designs she has used there.

The meeting will be held at Rice Hall, First Congregational Church, Country Way, Scituate, and will begin at 8 p.m.

Painting critique

Registration must be made in advance to enjoy a rare opportunity to have a painting critique with well-known artist Rosalind Farbush.

Beginners, intermediates and advanced as well as professional artists are welcome for the half-day session to be held at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset on Saturday, Jan. 23. Painters may bring five paintings that are either finished or still in progress for expert and helpful guidance.

Ms. Farbush works in acrylics, oils and watercolors but is best known for her acrylic landscapes and studies of people in a landscape or interior setting.

Her most recent one-woman exhibit was at the Duxbury Art Complex and her most recent award was given to her New Year's Day at the Copley Society in Boston. She has exhibited in Boston at Boston Visual Artists Union, Symphony, Boston City Hall and Prudential Center. She was an award-winning exhibitor at the Salamagundi Club in New York. Ms. Farbush teaches at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston in addition to classes on the South Shore.

For further information on registration telephone 383-9548.

'766' topic of talk

"766 — New Regulations and Their Meaning For Your Child" will be the topic of a talk and discussion by Ms. Marcia Stevens Monday, Jan. 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Scituate High School Library.

Ms. Stevens is an educational consultant for the Massachusetts Department of Education. The Scituate Chapter of the Association For Children With Learning Disabilities invites parents and teachers of children with all special needs to explore ways to improve Educational Plans.

Formation of a local Parent Advisory Council (PAC) for special needs will also be discussed by Mrs. Vita Gavin, Scituate's new Director of Special Education.

Demonstration class

The South Shore Conservatory of Music will given an open demonstration class in Music and Movement for Adults (also called Dalcroze Eurythmics) on Wednesday, Jan. 13 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. There is no charge for this class. The Conservatory is located off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham.

Martha Rogers, a Dalcroze specialist and member of the Conservatory piano faculty, will conduct the class.

She explains the idea behind this method, "What is Dalcroze Eurythmics? It is a way of studying music while having fun at the same time. Students join in a wide variety of movement games which depend on musical cues. One must listen to play the games and the listening builds musicianship in rhythm, melody and harmony. Students discover how to use movement so that it clearly outlines a phrase or characterizes a rhythm pattern or builds a musical crescendo. Learning musical principles in the body reinforces the listening skills as well as actual playing at an instrument. Music comes alive as an active, dynamic experience."

This class will be offered during the spring semester at the school on Wednesdays from 12:30 to 1:30 beginning Feb. 3. A great help for any music student, it is also good for parents of children who are taking lessons. It gives them better understanding of what their children are doing. One has to try it to understand it. Come to the open class on Jan. 13 at 12:30. Call the Conservatory at 759-7565 for further information.

Chorale openings

The Fine Arts Chorale will begin rehearsing for its spring concert Wednesday, Jan. 6. There will be openings in all voice parts for those interested in singing with the Chorale.

Rehearsals are held each Wednesday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Old South Union Church in South Weymouth. Two open rehearsals will be held starting Jan. 6.

The major work, sung with professional orchestra and soloists, will be the very exciting "Creation" by Joseph Haydn. If you enjoy singing, plan to attend the first two open rehearsals to see if you would enjoy the Chorale.

Obituary

Paul Blackmur

Paul Blackmur, 88, of Cohasset, a retired insurance agent with the Mutual Life Insurance Co., died Sunday at the Scituate Ocean Manor Nursing Home.

Born in Quincy, he lived in Cohasset for 51 years.

A graduate of Harvard, he was a member of the Pi Eta fraternity and a member of the glee club.

He was active in many town and civic activities, including the Cohasset dramatic society and the Hingham and Cohasset yacht clubs. He served in both world wars.

He leaves his wife, Martha Dickinson (Snow) Blackmur, a daughter, Paula B. Young of West Bridgewater; a son, Thomas French Clark Sr. of Amherst, N.H.; a brother, Richard Blackmur of Hingham; a sister, Virginia B. Rice of Dennis; three grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

E.F. Hutton on how the new tax law affects IRA

All IRA's may look the same. Until you retire.

What makes an IRA from E.F. Hutton different?
Hutton offers a wide range of investment opportunities to help your money work harder. It's a difference you'll see when you retire. When you need it most.

Because your investment grows tax free, it can grow rapidly. Chart based on a 12% annual assumed rate of return. Your results may be more or less depending on the actual rate.

The new tax law makes the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) available to everyone. Even people who belong to company pension plans.

Thanks to this legislation, not only is everyone eligible, but the benefits have been increased.

An IRA gives you the tax break you need now. With allowed tax deductions having risen from $1500 to $2000. If husband and wife both work, the deduction can total up to $4000.

Because taxes are deferred, your money grows faster. And it can provide the added income you'll need later. But how much added income there'll be depends on when you open your IRA and the results of your investment program.

The IRA that changes with the market.

With many IRA's, your investment choices are limited. But with E.F. Hutton you have access to a vast array of investment opportunities. Including money-market investments. Growth stocks. Mutual funds. Annuities. Treasury Bills. C.D.'s, and more.

Your E.F. Hutton Account Executive is there to assist. He or she can help you change your investment strategy as the market changes. So you have a better chance of getting the highest possible return each year.

No one can forecast the future, but we believe the more investment opportunities you have available the better chance you have to achieve more than average performance.

Retire on your terms, not just your company's.

The new tax law gives you more control over your retirement than ever before.

If you don't have a company pension plan, an IRA is essential. As we all know, Social Security benefits just aren't enough anymore.

If you have a company plan, an IRA could mean the difference between simply retiring, and retiring well. It's never too early to start planning. Just fill in the coupon or call

The Murray report

"Several bills important to the Women's Legislative Caucus have been sent to the Governor's desk for his signature," remarked Caucus Chairperson Representative Marie Howe (D-Somerville).

One of the new laws provides for continuing health insurance coverage for divorced or separated spouses.

"This is a significant issue especially for those who are newly divorced or widowed who frequently face difficult financial problems," explained Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset.

"The potential disruption of health insurance coverage can be frightening: this change in the law meets a real need."

She is a co-sponsor of a bill that members of the Caucus also worked effectively to pass which assists mothers and offspring exposed to the widely disseminated drug, DES.

"Thousands of expecting mothers were given diethylstilbesterol between the years 1940 and 1971 to prevent miscarriage," explained Rep. Murray who represents Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull.

"However, the drug proved ineffective in that regard and is now connected with many abnormalities in the offspring of DES exposed mothers." The new law will provide much relief to the DES exposed by protecting them from health insurance discrimination and encouraging them to seek preventive health care.

Two other pieces of legislation co-sponsored by Rep. Murray and sent to the Governor are: a bill allowing elders to attend the state's higher education institutions, tuition free.

"I have long been concerned with the isolation many elders suffer and believe access to the Commonwealth's community colleges will help break down the crippling results of loneliness," she said.

Also, a bill designed to help widows and widowers was sent to the Governor for his signature. As Rep. Murray explained, "This bill provides a surviving spouse easy access to the family car upon the death of the spouse because joint ownership will be presumed, unless the will designates otherwise."

A status quo school budget may be an impossible dream

By Patricia Desmond

The school budget for the coming year will cut out a half-time Kindergarten teacher, a third grade teacher at Osgood and a fourth grade teacher at Deer Hill, all due to declining enrollment.

If the town's valuation increases as much as officials expect, there will still be $30,000 to be cut somewhere else from existing programs.

If the town's valuation remains at the level approved by the state last year, the amount school officials must cut — to come within the Proposition 2½ guideline — is $101,609.

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell released his budget to school committee Monday. He does not want to cut any more programs or increase class size further.

Without adding any money to offset inflation, but by providing enough extra money to cover already negotiated raises, his budget for the next year is $3.8 million. Assuming a two-and-a-half percent increase on last year's townwide valuation, the school limit would be $3.7 million.

School committee members made no comment on the numbers except to thank the superintendent for an excellent presentation.

Crowell maintains whatever cuts could be made were made last year.

He talked about the possibility the town's valuation will be more than the figure used in last year's computations, revaluation being finished now. The state will take about three months certifying the figures.

"This is my nightly prayer," Crowell commented.

If the town's valuation increases to $230 million, the school system would be allowed to increase its budget $74,938 on top of the scheduled increase of $77,766.

He said he could find ways to absorb the remaining $30,000 difference.

If the town's valuation increases beyond $230 million, it will not make any greater difference under the regulations of 2½.

"These are hard facts," Crowell said in his summary.

"Special interest groups must face the reality that the only way to restore or expand these activities will be by taking from something or someone else, or by utilizing a fee system, or further fund raising programs.

"Our dilemma is further compounded by the cutbacks at the federal level, for as Washington's spending is rolled back such programs as Title 1, lunch subsidies, etc., the local communities have no choice but to eliminate or reduce those services to their children."

Local unemployment rate is 2.7 percent

The unemployment rate in Cohasset is climbing, according to the state department of Employment Security, but the number is still extremely low.

The unemployment rate for Cohasset in the month of November — the last month available on a town by town breakdown — was 2.7 percent.

An official of the DES office seemed more than pleased to be asked for that number.

The state unemployment rate is at 7.6 percent now. The November statewide rate was 7 percent.

The rest of the nation is faring far worse with a rate of 8.9 percent for the past month, up from 8.4 percent for November.

A year ago November the Cohasset unemployment rate was 2 percent.

One state official commented with a laugh that he didn't know whether living in Cohasset kept people from finding themselves on the unemployment rolls or whether unemployed people couldn't afford to live in Cohasset.

Eaton defends his MBTA stance

Louis Eaton, the town's representative to the MBTA, sat before selectmen last week explaining his attitude toward public transit systems and obstructions.

The Boston lawyer will not go along with Rep. Philip Johnston of Marshfield in voting down any and all expenditures for the T.

Johnston is trying to force the 23 communities without T service to vote as a block against any appropriation.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur had taken a phone call for Johnston recently complaining about the way Eaton has been voting.

Eaton began by saying he understood Johnston had said he ought to be removed as the town's MBTA representative. He said Arthur Clark, the board's secretary, had suggested he should write a letter explaining his position to selectmen.

"But my wife had choir practice across the street and it would probably take me two pages, so here I am," Eaton said.

Eaton said Johnston had had an excellent representative from Marshfield thrown off as T representative. Johnson now represents Marshfield.

Since that coup, Marshfield has had no representative at the executive board although the town is entitled to a seat.

"Johnston in conjunction with Sen. (Allan) McKinnon has been acting to organize the 23 towns without MBTA service," Eaton said.

"He thinks that means they should vote against any and everything. Although he apologized at a meeting of the full advisory board, he properly

Meet water meter reader Diane O'Brien

Someone called the water department last week wanting to know why that girl was riding in a town truck.

That curious resident and many others will realize soon the water department has a new meter reader — her name is Diane O'Brien.

"I've been doing secretarial work for 10 years," Diane said, taking a few minutes out of her route to stop at the water treatment plant.

"It's great to get outside."

Of course she was talking before the Arctic winds settled over Cohasset.

In the past Diane has worked some helping out with clerical work for the water department. So she's well versed on the work she'll be doing every third month — which is processing the information collected during the other two months.

But for now Diane is getting acquainted with spiders that live in crawl spaces, finding out where low cellar beams might be, and tossing dog biscuits to four-legged house pets.

Cohasset's week ...

Chicken pox here

Chicken pox is going around — but so far there appears to be no great epidemic.

The pox develops 11 to 19 days after exposure, according to the veritable Dr. Spock.

Calls to Osgood School principal John Cramer and Deer Hill principal Kenneth Ekberg show attendance in the schools is average for this time of year, maybe even better than average.

Both principals say there have been some calls from parents saying their children would be out with chicken pox.

Ekberg said he thinks there have been six kids out over the past few months with chicken pox. In all Monday there were 28 students absent for the day at Deer Hill, that's eight percent of the enrollment.

Cramer echoed the same sort of results. There have been just a few cases.

For anyone wondering, chicken pox is hard to misdiagnose but call your doctor anyway. Pimples are all over the body, with little blisters on many of them.

Allow a trickle

It's a wise idea to leave a faucet trickling while this spell of ultra cold weather continues.

Ben Curley, water department superintendent, said there were four families in town on Monday that were without water because of cold related problems. Those problems all happened on private property, Curley pointed out. In one case a cellar was left open to the winter freeze. (Let that be a warning to check doors and windows.)

Curley suggests tying a string to the faucet left open to avoid the dripping sound.

He said he hopes people who had problems with freezing water pipes last year will remember to keep their water running.

The present cold snap hadn't broken any mains by Monday.

However water department crews had to work in the chilly weather over the holiday to repair two recent breaks. One was on Border Street and one on Atlantic Avenue. Both happened in places where the old water main is slated for replacement — if federal funds come through.

One of the breaks happened two days before Christmas. The other happened New Year's Eve.

Curley said he hasn't heard anything yet on the grant application. He pointed out that some water mains in town date back to 1889.

Tax payments

By Monday 94.6 percent of the taxpayers had paid their bills for the first half of the fiscal year.

The other 5.4 percent owe the town the tax money plus interest at the rate of 14 percent.

Treasurer-collector Gordon Flynt explained that although the bills sent out were estimated ones, they were due under pain of interest accumulation on Dec. 18.

He said the collections have been coming in still.

"Some people just didn't have the money," Flynt said. The overall tax levy was $2.71 million. Bills amounting to half of last year's tax were sent out in November.

Meanwhile the assessors are ready to send all the new valuation figures in to the state. Certification is expected to take 12 weeks.

Clam flats closed

The Whitehead clam flats are closed in Jan. and Feb.

Selectmen have gotten a few complaints of clamming on the closed flats.

Early release day

Thursday, Jan. 21, will be an EARLY RELEASE DAY in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, 12:20 p.m.

Deer Hill School, 12:45 p.m.

Joseph Osgood School, 12:55 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee. The program at the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools will deal with Special Needs students. Secondary teachers will receive training on the issue of child abuse.

Police Chief contract

Last week the selectmen met in executive session to discuss the employment contract for Police Chief John DeBassio.

The contract allows an opener in the third year on wages.

All-year license

Cohasset Golf Club can turn its seasonal license in for an all-year license without spending any more money.

Selectmen last week granted the golf club permission for a one-day liquor license on Super Bowl Sunday (Jan. 24, for the unsportsminded).

The license will be good from noon to midnight. Accompanying the request for the one-day license was an inquiry on the going rate for a year-round all alcoholic club license.

Arthur Clark, the board's secretary, pointed out that the American Legion pay $500 a year for its club liquor license. There are only two club liquor licenses in town.

Restaurants pay $750 a year.

"It seems fairly obvious what they ought to do," commented Henry Ainslie on the price.

REFLECTIONS — The Pangalia Greek Orthodox Church casts a slightly blurred image into Straits Pond off Jerusalem Road.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle pointed out that the club only recently got winter water service, making it possible for the clubhouse to be open in cold weather months.

Vacation granted

Harry Ritter, harbormaster, was granted vacation time by the selectmen at their meeting last week, as requested.

Auto rates petition

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and other legislators have sent a petition on to the attorney general's office, seeking his help opposing the recently set auto rates for 1982.

The legislators want Frank Bellotti to appeal the rates set by the insurance commissioner.

On another matter, Rep. Murray is seeking mandatory sentencing for drunken drivers.

As she put it, judges already have the authority to punish these offenders but the usual procedure has been to continue cases without a finding which in the end means licenses are not pulled.

The mandatory sentence for a first offense under the bill Rep. Murray is backing would be a fine of $200 to $1,000 plus two weeks to two years imprisonment.

Dump remains open to haulers ... for now

By Mike Berger

"Taxation without dumping" was the common message among Cohasset businessmen who attended Monday night's Board of Health meeting.

It proved successful as the board extended permission for six commercial rubbish collection firms to dump at the Cedar Street landfill until Jan. 25.

Joe Laugelle, landfill manager, will supervise the study of how much and what kind of rubbish is being dumped by the commercial haulers. Business owners are asked to tell the board how much rubbish is being sent to the dump.

In addition, businessmen are asked to voluntarily recycle their rubbish, separating paper, glass and aluminium. This could be a mandatory procedure after Jan. 25.

Haulers were asked to only deposit rubbish from Cohasset businessmen and residents.

Residents are strongly urged to follow recycling procedures at the landfill.

On Jan. 7, the board rescinded the Dec. 21 decision on dumping by trash collectors until Jan. 15. The ban was proposed to extend the life of the Cedar St. landfill until a Feb. 22 special town meeting.

The board is awaiting approval for a $240,000 expansion of the landfill which could ensure its use as much as 10 years.

The ban, legally approved as an emergency by town counsel, prompted criticism from the haulers who have said they would have to raise rates for about 500 customers to haul trash to a more expensive landfill farther away.

Haulers have said the lines at the dump will grow longer with increased traffic but Board Chairman Charles Bliss said longer lines may be a result but not a definite conclusion.

When Ed Figueiredo of Cedar Street said 500 people would bring their trash to the dump creating, "quite a bit of rubbish and a mess," Bliss replied, "That might or might not happen. We don't know."

The meeting or public hearing was called to solicit comments about the proposed dumping ban on the town's 150 businesses in addition to commercial dumpers.

The prevalent message heard by the 37-member audience at Town Hall was it was unfair to tax businessmen and not allow them the same dumping privileges as houseowners.

Many asked why businessmen were picked to receive the biggest impact of the ban.

John Haggerty of Cohasset Colonial said he understands the landfill must reduce intake but "why pick on the businesses?"

"We provide jobs for people who live in town. If the company pays taxes, why is the business denied access," he asked.

Haggerty suggested the town reflect some compensation on the tax bill.

Bliss said the board had two choices: to limit trashing by residents and or businesses or close the dump altogether.

He said the firms, on a per business basis, created more trash than the average household. Kevin O'Brien, health agent, said an engineering study estimated the average person contributes between 2 and 3.2 pounds of rubbish per day.

Bliss said a study was needed to convince the board that businesses generate less waste than an average household.

One hauler, Tony Sestito, said about 42 cubic yards of weekly non-compacted waste weekly is collected from his business and resident customers.

If the study could prove that businesses generate less waste, Bliss said the need to ban commercial hauling and or business from dumping would be "economically unfeasible."

When told the problem at the landfill was known in 1977, Robert Davenport of 135 Sawyer Street asked why the board hasn't done anything until now?"

"And everytime there is a problem in town, it usually comes out of the business people. If we ran our businesses the way the dump is run, there would

Hawker charged in pension case

Robert Hawker, a Cohasset developer, is free on bail after pleading innocent in federal court to a charge that he converted to his own use $199,587.18 from a pension plan for a group of Worcester doctors.

Hawker was unavailable for comment on the charge. Calls to the telephone listed to his home at 92A Beach St. went unanswered. Someone with an accent answered the telephone listed on Stagecoach Way to Robert Hawker Developer. The person repeated the Mariner's inquiry asking for Hawker and then hung up the phone.

U.S. Atty. Nelson Dong said the case was continued for hearing on March 8 before U.S. Magistrate A. David Mazzone.

Dong is handling the case for the government. Hawker is represented by Atty. Theodore Welburn of Boston.

Hawker, 38, was indicted secretly last week by a federal grand jury. He was arrested Thursday by the FBI. The indictment says he did business in his own name as Robinhood Associates, a Maine company.

The indictment does not go into more detail.

Dong confirmed there is a pending civil suit filed by the Worcester doctors.

According to someone representing the doctors, known as Orthopedic Associates of Worcester Inc., Hawker is accused in the civil suit of selling the group land he owned in Maine at a price $130,000 beyond what he had paid for it.

The civil suit on the case was filed two years ago and has not yet gone to trial.

The maximum penalty facing Hawker is a $10,000 fine and five years in prison.

Cohasset Police Chief John DeBassio said his department was not contacted by federal authorities in the matter.

Dump remains open ...

be no business left," he said.

Marilyn Sweeney said she was elected in 1979, Dr. Bliss was elected in 1980 and Barbara Kern was elected in 1981.

For the past six months, the board has worked with a Landfill Study Committee. "Until that time, there wasn't enough interest or feeling that the state would move against the town."

Bliss said if it were not for the board and "representatives and senators, the dump would have been closed Oct. 1."

The state is concerned about the possibility of polluting Rattlesnake Pond; contaminating ground water which feeds into the ocean.

Bliss said the long range plan is to extend the dump's life between five and 10 years if the town meeting article is granted, "maybe more if recycling is done. Also we would be charging commercial haulers the same as Mr. (Jim) Tyerar of the Cohasset Heights Dump.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said Tyerar told him to inform the board and residents, and haulers, "don't depend on them."

The Cohasset Heights Dump is scheduled to be sold.

The board is also studying the legal ramifications of a dump limit or a ban of rubbish from town offices and the schools.

Regarding recycling Joe Laugelle said it was hard to recycle in sub-zero weather but said it was important for residents to recycle newspapers.

Sestito said it could be possible for him to separate bottles, papers and cardboard.

Rollo Laugelle said it would be difficult for haulers but something residents should do.

The board will also investigate before the Jan. 25 meeting borrowing Registry of Motor Vehicle weight instruments to measure the commercial hauler's load and Duxbury's system of recycling.

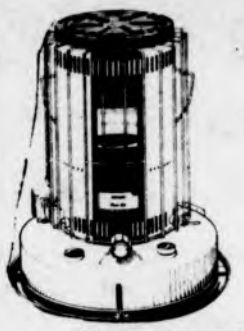
characterized this as obstructionism."

Eaton went on to say the metropolitan area has to have a transit system.

"Those in the area do owe something. Many use the facilities. The problem is as Rep. Johnston points out, the mode of the assessment is definitely an unfair system. But I'm strongly at odds with his point of view that because you don't have direct service you shouldn't pay anything."



He said he resents the fact that Johnston doesn't attend the executive board of the advisory board.

Eaton said he voted for the budget of $344 million for the T, which was the figure approved first by the executive board. Eaton sits on the executive board. He has been the town's T representative since the town was first assessed.

Eaton voted against the $368 million budget sought by T management.

The board thanked Eaton for coming in.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board, said Eaton has always kept the selectmen informed.

Auto rates petition

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and other legislators have sent a petition on to the attorney general's office, seeking his help opposing the recently set auto rates for 1982.

The legislators want Frank Bellotti to appeal the rates set by the insurance commissioner.

On another matter, Rep. Murray is seeking mandatory sentencing for drunken drivers.

As she put it, judges already have the authority to punish these offenders but the usual procedure has been to continue cases without a finding which in the end means licenses are not pulled.

The mandatory sentence for a first offense under the bill Rep. Murray is backing would be a fine of $200 to $1,000 plus two weeks to two years imprisonment.

Dump remains open to haulers ... for now

By Mike Berger

"Taxation without dumping" was the common message among Cohasset businessmen who attended Monday night's Board of Health meeting.

It proved successful as the board extended permission for six commercial rubbish collection firms to dump at the Cedar Street landfill until Jan. 25.

Joe Laugelle, landfill manager, will supervise the study of how much and what kind of rubbish is being dumped by the commercial haulers. Business owners are asked to tell the board how much rubbish is being sent to the dump.

In addition, businessmen are asked to voluntarily recycle their rubbish, separating paper, glass and aluminium. This could be a mandatory procedure after Jan. 25.

Haulers were asked to only deposit rubbish from Cohasset businessmen and residents.

Residents are strongly urged to follow recycling procedures at the landfill.

On Jan. 7, the board rescinded the Dec. 21 decision on dumping by trash collectors until Jan. 15. The ban was proposed to extend the life of the Cedar St. landfill until a Feb. 22 special town meeting.

The board is awaiting approval for a $240,000 expansion of the landfill which could ensure its use as much as 10 years.

The ban, legally approved as an emergency by town counsel, prompted criticism from the haulers who have said they would have to raise rates for about 500 customers to haul trash to a more expensive landfill farther away.

Haulers have said the lines at the dump will grow longer with increased traffic but Board Chairman Charles Bliss said longer lines may be a result but not a definite conclusion.

When Ed Figueiredo of Cedar Street said 500 people would bring their trash to the dump creating, "quite a bit of rubbish and a mess," Bliss replied, "That might or might not happen. We don't know."

The meeting or public hearing was called to solicit comments about the proposed dumping ban on the town's 150 businesses in addition to commercial dumpers.

The prevalent message heard by the 37-member audience at Town Hall was it was unfair to tax businessmen and not allow them the same dumping privileges as houseowners.

Many asked why businessmen were picked to receive the biggest impact of the ban.

John Haggerty of Cohasset Colonial said he understands the landfill must reduce intake but "why pick on the businesses?"

"We provide jobs for people who live in town. If the company pays taxes, why is the business denied access," he asked.

Haggerty suggested the town reflect some compensation on the tax bill.

Bliss said the board had two choices: to limit trashing by residents and or businesses or close the dump altogether.

He said the firms, on a per business basis, created more trash than the average household. Kevin O'Brien, health agent, said an engineering study estimated the average person contributes between 2 and 3.2 pounds of rubbish per day.

Bliss said a study was needed to convince the board that businesses generate less waste than an average household.

One hauler, Tony Sestito, said about 42 cubic yards of weekly non-compacted waste weekly is collected from his business and resident customers.

If the study could prove that businesses generate less waste, Bliss said the need to ban commercial hauling and or business from dumping would be "economically unfeasible."

When told the problem at the landfill was known in 1977, Robert Davenport of 135 Sawyer Street asked why the board hasn't done anything until now?"

"And everytime there is a problem in town, it usually comes out of the business people. If we ran our businesses the way the dump is run, there would

Hawker charged in pension case

Robert Hawker, a Cohasset developer, is free on bail after pleading innocent in federal court to a charge that he converted to his own use $199,587.18 from a pension plan for a group of Worcester doctors.

Hawker was unavailable for comment on the charge. Calls to the telephone listed to his home at 92A Beach St. went unanswered. Someone with an accent answered the telephone listed on Stagecoach Way to Robert Hawker Developer. The person repeated the Mariner's inquiry asking for Hawker and then hung up the phone.

U.S. Atty. Nelson Dong said the case was continued for hearing on March 8 before U.S. Magistrate A. David Mazzone.

Dong is handling the case for the government. Hawker is represented by Atty. Theodore Welburn of Boston.

Hawker, 38, was indicted secretly last week by a federal grand jury. He was arrested Thursday by the FBI. The indictment says he did business in his own name as Robinhood Associates, a Maine company.

The indictment does not go into more detail.

Dong confirmed there is a pending civil suit filed by the Worcester doctors.

According to someone representing the doctors, known as Orthopedic Associates of Worcester Inc., Hawker is accused in the civil suit of selling the group land he owned in Maine at a price $130,000 beyond what he had paid for it.

The civil suit on the case was filed two years ago and has not yet gone to trial.

The maximum penalty facing Hawker is a $10,000 fine and five years in prison.

Cohasset Police Chief John DeBassio said his department was not contacted by federal authorities in the matter.

Dump remains open ...

Marilyn Sweeney said she was elected in 1979, Dr. Bliss was elected in 1980 and Barbara Kern was elected in 1981.

For the past six months, the board has worked with a Landfill Study Committee. "Until that time, there wasn't enough interest or feeling that the state would move against the town."

Bliss said if it were not for the board and "representatives and senators, the dump would have been closed Oct. 1."

The state is concerned about the possibility of polluting Rattlesnake Pond; contaminating ground water which feeds into the ocean.

Bliss said the long range plan is to extend the dump's life between five and 10 years if the town meeting article is granted, "maybe more if recycling is done. Also we would be charging commercial haulers the same as Mr. (Jim) Tyerar of the Cohasset Heights Dump.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said Tyerar told him to inform the board and residents, and haulers, "don't depend on them."

The Cohasset Heights Dump is scheduled to be sold.

The board is also studying the legal ramifications of a dump limit or a ban of rubbish from town offices and the schools.

Regarding recycling Joe Laugelle said it was hard to recycle in sub-zero weather but said it was important for residents to recycle newspapers.

Sestito said it could be possible for him to separate bottles, papers and cardboard.

Rollo Laugelle said it would be difficult for haulers but something residents should do.

The board will also investigate before the Jan. 25 meeting borrowing Registry of Motor Vehicle weight instruments to measure the commercial hauler's load and Duxbury's system of recycling.

Eaton defends ...

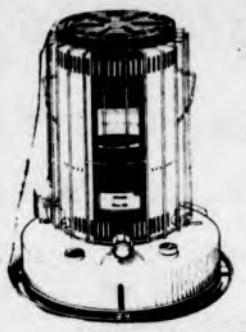
characterized this as obstructionism."

Eaton went on to say the metropolitan area has to have a transit system.

"Those in the area do owe something. Many use the facilities. The problem is as Rep. Johnston points out, the mode of the assessment is definitely an unfair system. But I'm strongly at odds with his point of view that because you don't have direct service you shouldn't pay anything."



He said he resents the fact that Johnston doesn't attend the executive board of the advisory board.

Eaton said he voted for the budget of $344 million for the T, which was the figure approved first by the executive board. Eaton sits on the executive board. He has been the town's T representative since the town was first assessed.

Eaton voted against the $368 million budget sought by T management.

The board thanked Eaton for coming in.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board, said Eaton has always kept the selectmen informed.

Murray defends her insurance bill vote

By now almost everyone knows that the Auto Insurance Reform Bill passed the House. There has been considerable misinformation about this legislation deseminated through some radio talk shows and ads placed by opponents of the bill.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray issued a statement on her reasons for voting for this bill.

First the amended bill that passed in the House and defeated in the Senate called for the reform package to be implemented more than a year before the competitive rating part. Until Jan. 15, 1983 the rate structure would stay as it currently is.

"The key reforms concern the treatment of bad drivers. Today, you pay between $70 and $100 in your premium to subsidized bad or high risk drivers because under the current law, insurance companies cannot charge a driver who has repeated accidents more than someone with a clean driving record. Under the reform bill, these high risk drivers could be denied collision insurance. Now regardless of driving record, everyone must be insured at the same rate. If signed by the Governor, this bill means that the bad drivers will pay more for their insurance, you will not be subsidizing them," Rep. Murray said.

After Jan. 15, 1983, companies would be able to set their own rates. However, if the Commissioner of Insurance believes any given company's rate is too high, he would have the authority to disallow that rate and set the rate that he feels is competitive with other rates on the market.

There are several advantages for this, according to Rep. Murray. First, there are a number of large insurance companies that provide lower cost auto insurance in other states that are willing to compete. Secondly, competition will mean that insurance companies would have to actively vie for business. Agents will have to provide more services than they do today in order to keep business.

In Massachusetts, insurance companies make their money on life, property insurance and investments. They are losing money on auto insurance. There is now a pool in which bad drivers are placed and the companies share losses according to the amount of the market they control.

For example, if a bad driver is insured by company X, a small insurance agency with 3 percent of the market, and that driver has an accident, the claim is divided among all companies with the company that actually insures this driver paying only 3 percent of the claim. Your company pays a percentage out of your premium. The hitch in this system is that not only bad drivers are in the high risk pool. Because of the costs, many good drivers are also put in the high risk pool to subsidize the costs of the bad. And, insurance companies do not have to tell you whether you are in a high risk pool. Currently 40 percent or more drivers in this state are in the high risk pool.

Rep. Murray continued, "The bill recently sent to the Senate also contains a high risk pool, called the Joint Underwriters Association. But companies have to bring this pool down to 20 percent in four years. If this didn't happen the program would be stopped and insurance returned to the present system. Clean drivers in the JUA would not pay the high risk premium, they would have paid the average for their community. Furthermore, the insurance companies were obligated to inform any driver assigned to JUA. And the bill called for the Commissioner of Insurance to create incentives for the insurance companies to keep clean drivers out of the JUA."

When competitive rating was implemented in 1977, safeguards were not included and the process created a monster. In 1977, there was only a three month period for implementation. This 1981 legislation called for more than a year for implementation. And would have been a consumer information program including a hotline to help people understand the changes and how to select an insurance company.

"Realistically, the rates would not have gone down with the start of this new program. But, costs would have been more fairly distributed so that you and I do not have to pay for the bad driver," concluded Rep. Murray.

If you have any comments or thoughts, please contact Rep. Murray at 722-2400 or write to me at Room 134, State House, Boston, 02133.

Modern Greek language classes

By J. A. Marshall

Ilos ός λέve: If you are in a quandry as to the meaning of that phrase, and you wish to learn, it is not too late to sign up for classes in Modern Greek Language. On Jan. 5, at 7:30 p.m., the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association held its first session. The classes are to be held Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Nantasket Library, on Hull Street, North Cohasset. The teacher is Louisa Veletza of Cambridge who has her masters degree in Education from Harvard, and is currently studying for her doctorate at that school. She has had much experience in teaching language. In Athens, Greece, she taught English as a second language. Thanks to the South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association, some of us in the surrounding area will be now learning Greek as a "second language;" conversational as well as written.

Greek, like Latin, is a base language for many English words. Οέατοο — theatro or theater; Οικονομία — ikonomia or economy, and so forth. For additional information on this course please feel free to call Mrs. John Sedell, 545-6963 or Mrs. Jeanne Syrmopoulos, 383-9071.

☐Cohasset's first full health spa will be opening, next week, according to Mary Doherty, owner-manager of Peridot, which will offer this additional service.

An area adjacent to Peridot on Rte. 3A which had been used for Riddles Bargain Annex, will be the location for the new spa. A whirlpool therapeutic tub, exercise machines and showers will be available on a membership basis for $25 a year with $1.50 the fee charged for each use.

The hours have been set to meet a wide range of needs according those of working people. They will be from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Further information is available at 383-6066.

☐Martha Gjesteby has been reappointed by the Selectmen to a three year term as Cohasset's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC). In a letter to selectmen, Don Megathlin, Executive Director of MAPC, noted his boards appreciation of Mrs. Gjesteby's effort in bringing the town's perspective to the council.

As a member of MAPC, she will review projects with local boards for which federal funding or environmental permits are being sought. She will also vote on such matters as budget, work programs, assessments, executive committee elections and legislation.

☐The sign in Mrs. Marie Price's classroom window at the Joseph Osgood School reads, "Here comes Kathy, Poet in Residence," which is an obvious indication of the excitement with which both the students and staff have looked forward to their participation in the residency program which started this week.

For four weeks, poet Kathy Aguero will become a temporary staff member of the school and during the full week program will share her skills both as a poet and a teacher with the students.

☐Herb Crehan's acrobats and determination are becoming well-known on the tennis courts with Cohasset players. "There is nothing he won't go after," said one observer recently.

At a recent party to celebrate the new year, Herb's pursuit of the ball led him right into the net which may have affected his game for a bit but certainly not his enthusiasm. Along with Karen Crehan, Stan and Debbie Bates, Steve and Teesha Bryant and Jayne and Dan Nussdorfer were there.

SKIERS ALL — Jim Gallagher, Tim Pierotti, Mark Donahue and Brian Schadhauser are all smiles as they head for the slopes during the recent Introduction to Skiing Trip sponsored by the Recreation Department. The trip was arranged through the Massachusetts Ski Club, a youth ski program which takes local youngsters skiing in New Hampshire each week.

☐Not one to be daunted by a cast up to his hip, Jim Drysdale still managed to go snorkeling on a recent trip to Puerto Rico with sons Douglas and Eric.

Jim chuckles as he describes wrapping it all up in baggies and when not under water, he says, he used the whole thing as a sail which surely would have to have been seen to be fully appreciated.

☐Everyone who attended the recent AFS pot luck supper said it was a most enjoyable evening. Some of the exchange students wore their native costumes and all of them spoke for a bit in their native language. What a worthwhile experience for the exchange students, their host families and all who are involved in this excellent program.

Unitarian orientation course

Many people who have joined the First Parish or who may be interested in becoming members have come from other religions and have little knowledge of the history and traditions of this religious movement.

For these persons, or for anyone interested in learning more about Unitarian Universalism and the First Parish, an orientation course will be held on Unitarian Universalism on three consecutive Monday evenings, Jan. 18 and 25 and Feb. 1.

The sessions will begin at 8 p.m. and conclude at 9:30 p.m. and will be held in the Parish House living room. The format will include time for questions and discussion. No. 40 Aaron River

Will the numbering of houses on Aaron River Road end up costing the town as much as the fight over the Bell's tennis court?

Selectmen are backing Lili and Jack Richmond who own one house at 40 Aaron River Road.

Andrew and Linda Krueger who also live at a house (not owned by the Richmonds) which bears the number 40 Aaron River Road have engaged a lawyer who has asked the selectmen what authority they think they have to change street numbers.

Common sense indicates it is unwise for two houses to bear the same street number. Afterall the reason the houses are numbered is to distinguish them.

So who's right and who's wrong is of little importance at this juncture. What is important is taking steps to resolve a situation that never should have happened.

We doubt the taxpayers in town want to see the town counsel spend even a few hundred dollars prosecuting the family with the wrongly numbered house.

We've heard politics is the art of compromise. Let's hope there's a politician in town who can handle the case of the problematic street numbers.

Last week the Richmonds went to the selectmen for the second time, seeking a resolution. They have had to ask the post office to hold their mail since some of it wasn't coming their way.

The post office has also stopped mail delivery to the Kruegers.

In the meantime the assessors have told the Kruegers they may have either 67 Aaron River Road or 46 Flintlocke Ridge. The assessors, who have responsibility for numbering houses, back the selectmen in picking Richmonds as the appropriate owners of number 40.

The Kruegers have lived in the relatively new development for about four years. The Richmonds moved into their new home in August.

The selectmen want an opinion from their legal counsel on what to do next.

We offer them a free opinion.

Of course there is a safety hazard with two houses of the same number. The town's street listing has the Krueger's at 46 Aaron River Road, let that be their official number. But since there's little reason to believe they will take down the #40 sign, reassign the Richmonds something, hopefully from the ranks of the unused numbers. Does anyone have #38?

Afterall isn't the idea to promote public safety and the smooth delivery of government services?

College costs

There are five or more Cohasset High School seniors who could have counted on Social Security to help them through college.

But regulations which change as of May 1, end the help for children of widows, retirees and disabled.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell decried the program change this week as unconscionable.

He said the changes, already approved by Congress, have gone without widespread notice.

The Recreation Director reports

By John M. Worley

It is with distinct pleasure that the Report of the Recreation Department is submitted to the Citizens of Cohasset.

During the Fiscal Year 1981, July 1, through June 30, 8,609 residents participated in various Recreation Department programs, activities, and special events. This is an increase of 1,666 people from last year representing a 13.5% increase in the level of participation. A wider spectrum of programs and activities for all age levels remains the essential factor in the increased participation.

Most programs require a minimal registration fee ranging from $5 to $20, depending on the specific program, its content and duration. Fifty percent fee discounts are allowed for most children's programs where more than one sibling from a given family registers at the same time, hence, retaining affordability for larger families.

Collected registration fees are turned over to the Town Treasurer's office for depost in the Town's General Fund. Monies collected may not be used by the Recreation Department, rather, they are applied to the tax rate during the next Fiscal Year, helping to offset the tax rate as it is applied. During Fiscal Year 1981, the Recreation Department collected $8,034 via program registration fees. An additional $2,106 was taken in through the Revolving Accout Fund, a special account established to conduct specifically designed programs on a 100% self-supporting basis. State mandated restrictions on the Revolving Account Fund preclude general use of the fund for most programs and activities.

Monies collected during Fiscal 1981, $8,034 represent allocation of $34,051 total monies. Excluding the Director's salary fee collection reimburses the total expenditures at the rate of 50.6%.

Each year more and more volunteers, of all ages, step forward to assist with various programs and activities. We extend our most sincere thanks and gratitude to these volunteers for the donation of their efforts and time. Many programs could not be conducted if it were not for the fine performance of volunteers.

Volunteer hours are plentiful. If each volunteer were paid at the rate of only $4 per hour, the Recreation Department salary budget for programs would have to be more than doubled. We all owe thanks to the men, women, girls and boys who have donated their time and help.

Many thanks should go to various Town Departments, Boards, and Committees for their continued interest and help in our programs and activities. Special thanks to the School Committee, administration, and staff for the use of their facilities and their willingness, at all levels, to provide space and support for many programs.

Also, gratitude should be recognized for the Recreation Commission members for their continued donation of time, work, and direction. Current members are Richard P. Barrow, Chairman, Nancy E. Sladen, Vice-Chairman, Alna L. Ekberg, Secretary, Gerard A. Buckley, James L. Gallagher, Eugene K. Price, and Hamilton T. Tewksbury, Members.

Artist-in-residence program

[Editor's Note: This letter was read at school committee this week.]

Dear Superintendent Crowell and Members of the School Committee:

The second phase of this year's two month artist-in-residence program began today with poet Kathi Aguero's four week residency at the Joseph Osgood School. Our confidence in the success of her program has been further raised by the positive impact of Lewis Hyde's work at the Deer Hill School.

One of the results of Lewis' work at Deer Hill is the enclosed poems, "Others Croak Back." The poetry in this book is an equal representation of student work from core groups, regular classrooms, and a Saturday writing workshop. It demonstrates the students' enthusiasm for, and confidence in, their ability to express themselves creatively.

The artwork in the book, while only a small sampling of all the illustrations drawn for the poems by students, is indicative of the creative effect of the program. Art teacher Mrs. Jean O'Malley, said she was impressed with the increased imaginativeness of the students' work; she feels it is a direct result of Lewis Hyde's residency.

In addition to the book, there is, for the first time at Deer Hill, a poetry club this winter under the direction of Mrs. Whitley. Teachers will, we hope, teach more poetry to their students and the language arts curriculum will reflect a greater emphasis on poetry. Most important, perhaps, students are writing poetry and reading each other's work. We expect that they understand that their school places value on poetry and on the arts.

Ms. Aguero's tenure will be similar to Mr. Hyde's, except that due to the age of the children, she will teach five core groups which will meet fewer times per week. There were three core groups at Deer Hill. Because of the small enrollments of both schools, we have been fortunate to have the poets accommodate more core groups than the usual one or two per school residency.

Based on our observations at other schools with residency programs last year and the experience at Deer Hill, we feel that the core group concept is effective and sound. The organization of core groups at both schools has ensured that a cross-section of students from every grade level and classroom has been involved in more intensive lessons with the artist. Since teachers and all other students are being introduced to the techniques of writing poetry at the same time, the core students' experiences with the artist become an added stimulation within

Crowell's budget assumptions

By Eugene Crowell
School Superintendent

At the beginning of our budget preparation, my budget managers and I faced the statewide reality of limited funds for the third year in a row. Reluctantly they agreed that still further substantial reduction was necessary to retain existing overall quality of education.

We are primarily an academy school system and as such we must keep our standards high. This year the secondary school went through its ten-year evaluation for re-certification. While we are confident of certification from the New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, the preliminary report made some recommendations that have budgetary implications. We will not receive their final report in time to consider these recommendtions for this fiscal year, and in all candor, any extensive additions are impossible under the present economic constraints.

What we must do is to re-allocate our available funds. Our educational priorities are constantly being re-assessed and new balances being achieved by reducing or eliminating sections of programs which are not producing.

There are few "sacred cows" left in education and we must all constantly remember to ask ourselves the question: What are we willing to cut or curtail to provide an extra coach, an extra bus stop, or a comprehensive program in art or music?

After much soul searching we have assembled the following bench marks for our budget request. If the reader does not accept them as the budget's foundation, then he/she must expect to be challenging sections of this document. If the assumptions are not palatable to the community, they must be changed, remembering, however, the bottom line of what is available to the Town for revenue to operate its total responsibilities to the taxpayer, of which education is but one part. Our FY'83 budget assumptions are:

That the School Department's last year's FY'82 budget totaled $3,634,475.00.

That an additional $20,000 was subtracted from this amount for Town emergency situation due to the Proposition 2½ crisis.

That the School Department's FY'83 budget limit will be $3,712,241.00 based upon a $225 million dollar assessed value of total Town property and that this will represent a $77,766 increase, the 2½% increase allowed at present under Chapter 580 (Proposition 2½).

When did the problem begin?

Editor's Note: This is the third in a four part series.]

By a Psychologist at Coastal Community Counseling Center

"What is the problem?" "How have you tried to solve it?" These are two important questions that begin an evaluation at Coastal Community Counseling Center. If a child has a school problem, the counselor will want a thorough description of the problem. When did the problem begin? How did you find out about it? How do the school problems affect family interactions at home? What have you done to try to solve the problem? Has your child been in counseling before or had other evaluations? Has your child been recently examined by a physician? In addition, a family developmental history will be taken, so as to help the counselor understand the context of the problem.

The Jones' talked about Billy's problem and their attempted solution. Billy had started doing poorly in school about two years ago and the parents decided that they might be pressuring him too much to do well. So they decided to stop "bugging him" about doing his work, but as time passed his school performance continued to deteriorate and the parents felt frustrated. No one could figure out why Billy started doing poorly in school except that in the second session Linda said that ever since Billy had his tonsils out (he has missed school for several weeks), Billy hadn't cared about school anymore.

After consulting with school personnel and finding out that testing had shown Billy to be of above-average ability, with no apparent learning disability, the counselor, Mr. Daley, began to put the puzzle together and devised a counseling plan for the Jones family. He decided that Billy had never really adjusted to coming back to school (even though two years had passed). The Jones' attempted solution had only made matters worse — what Billy needed two years ago and needed now was a clear and consistant parental and school structure for getting his work completed — something he lacked when trying to re-adapt to school two years previously.

Next week — the counseling plan — goals and techniques.

the school.

Mr. Aguero will teach in regular classrooms, hold teacher training workshops, and plans to do a program with the special needs classes.

Both poets will return to Cohasset on the evening of March 9 to give a poetry reading of their work, their students' work, and comment about their residencies.

Our committee first became interested in a residency program for two reasons. We wanted to bring an arts enrichment program into the schools that would have a lasting impact and consequently, give a better return on investment than the many excellent, but expensive, "performance-type" programs. We wanted a program where children became active participants rather than passive observers. It was also an important criteria that the program supplement and ultimately affect curriculum.

The residency program has met all of these goals. It has benefited not only our school system, but also the artists. And, our schools, as residency sites, express our support of the arts.

We continue to support the educational goal of providing opportunities for students to learn more about art and, with the full support of the administration, we will endeavor to bring more residency programs into the schools in the future.

Superintndent's budget...

That the school's portion of the 1982-83 tax rate will be 55.3% for FY'83 calculations of limits.

That with a 7½% increase already contracted for with all the School Department bargaining units, and with a 10% average inflation estimate in the cost of all supplies and services, the department will again face a substantial decrease in the amount of monies it has to operate its programs. This deficit will amount to $149,465.

That the estimated 10% inflation increases will have to be absorbed in our base budget.

That capital outlay requests must be curtailed if not eliminated.

That no new programs can begin nor can few pre-Proposition 2½ programs be restored.

That projected student enrollment for September of 1982 (the period covered by the FY'83 budget), is expected to be 1414. This represents a 55-pupil decline between September of 1981 and October of 1982. (Please see enclosed enrollment projection sections.)

That this document will contain all of the foreseeable fiscal needs of the department but that no contingency for any emergency situation has been included.

That if such an emergency arose (roof problems, fire, or drastic utility cost increases), appropriation would have to come from a special warrant article placed before the Town.

That the impact of Proposition 2½ has had many subtle and unexpected results on the quality of Cohasset education and that those problems, where possible, have begun to be addressed by this document by reordering our priorities.

That our goal is to maintain the high quality of our highly academic standards which will mean continued focus on the post secondary school preparation of our students.

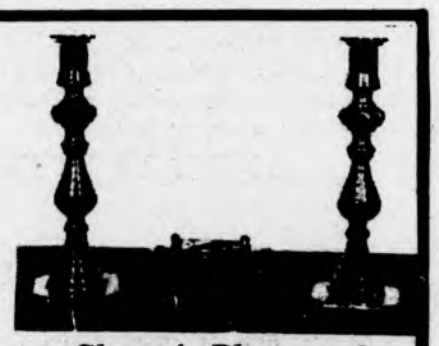
School briefs

Richard Thurston was appointed as a high school custodian by school committee this week. Mary Sullivan was appointed as a halftime instructional aide at Deer Hill.

School committee this week authorized the hockey team to play a scrimmage in Plymouth, N.H. on Sunday, Feb. 14, with a private school.

The cost of the trip will be paid by the hockey boosters.

Officials plan to make sure the game with New Hampton Prep goes by rules of the state hockey association to insure player eligibility.



School committee met in executive session this week to discuss negotiations for non-union personnel. Teacher and other contracts already mean $200,000 more next year to maintain the status quo.

Girl hoopsters fighting back

By Donna Cogliano

It seems as though the girls' varsity basketball squad contracted a mild case of the post-holiday blues last week as they lost three consecutive league games.

Last week the Skippers were defeated by Abington, 42-26, East Bridgewater, 38-35 (OT), and Rockland 49-39. Cohasset has a record of 3-5 overall and 2-4 in the South Shore League.

At the end of regulation time versus East Bridgewater on Wednesday, the score was tied 33-33. The Skippers were outscored 5-2 by Easties during the three-minute overtime period and were defeated 38-35.

Cohasset held the lead for most of the game but East Bridgewater hit on several free-throws in the fourth period to ice the game. Coach Bill Fallon said his team "shot poorly from the foul line" and sunk only 7 of 28 free-throws.

Senior forward Katie Salerno had an excellent game defensively for the Skippers said Fallon. She has been averaging eight rebounds and ten points a game said Fallon. Against Easties, Salerno collected 11 rebounds.

Another defensive standout on the Cohasset squad is senior forward Madeline Roy. Fallon said Roy is a strong rebounder and captain of the team.

Senior Laurie Sandblom is the starting center for the Skippers while classmate Karen Froio controls action at point guard.

Junior guard Gia Barresi has led the scoring so far, and averages 12 points a game.

Last year under the direction of Coach Fallon the girls finished 3-13. This season the Skippers jumped out 3-2 before losing three straight last week. Fallon predicts a winning season for his team.

E.F. Hutton on how the new tax law affects IRA

All IRA's may look the same. Until you retire.

What makes an IRA from E.F. Hutton different?
Hutton offers a wide range of investment opportunities to help your money work harder. It's a difference you'll see when you retire. When you need it most.

Because your investment grows tax free, it can grow rapidly. Chart based on a 12% annual assumed rate of return. Your results may be more or less depending on the actual rate.

The new tax law makes the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) available to everyone. Even people who belong to company pension plans.

Thanks to this legislation, not only is everyone eligible, but the benefits have been increased.

An IRA gives you the tax break you need now. With allowed tax deductions having risen from $1500 to $2000. If husband and wife both work, the deduction can total up to $4000.

Because taxes are deferred, your money grows faster. And it can provide the added income you'll need later. But how much added income there'll be depends on when you open your IRA and the results of your investment program.

The IRA that changes with the market.

With many IRA's, your investment choices are limited. But with E.F. Hutton you have access to a vast array of investment opportunities. Including money-market investments. Growth stocks. Mutual funds. Annuities. Treasury Bills. C.D.'s, and more.

Your E.F. Hutton Account Executive is there to assist. He or she can help you change your investment strategy as the market changes. So you have a better chance of getting the highest possible return each year.

No one can forecast the future, but we believe the more investment opportunities you have available the better chance you have to achieve more than average performance.

Retire on your terms, not just your company's.

The new tax law gives you more control over your retirement than ever before.

If you don't have a company pension plan, an IRA is essential. As we all know, Social Security benefits just aren't enough anymore.

If you have a company plan, an IRA could mean the difference between simply retiring, and retiring well. It's never too early to start planning. Just fill in the coupon or call

Cast selected for winter production

By David Wadsworth

Director Rosanne Ring of the Cohasset Dramatic Club has chosen the cast members for the Club's winter production of Robert Bolt's English Renaissance tragedy "A Man For All Seasons."

This powerful drama, set in the early 16th century, is the story of the life and martyrdom of Sir Thomas More, the famous ecclesiastical scholar and later Lord Chancellor of England during the reign of King Henry VIII. Voted as one of the Best Plays on Broadway for the 1961-62 season, Bolt's masterpiece has starred such eminent actors and actresses as Paul Scofield, Emlyn Williams (himself a playwright), Faye Dunaway, and Lawrence Luckinbill. This winter's production by the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present a cast of fourteen local area performers.

The cast includes:

"The Common Man," Bob Schultz of Scituate; Sir Thomas More, Ben Duffy of Cohasset; Richard Rich, Carl Slotnick of Cohasset; The Duke of Norfolk, Wayne Miessner of Scituate; Lady Alice More, Ellen Kelly of Weymouth; Lady Margaret More, Julia Jordan of Cohasset; and Cardinal Wolsey, David Wadsworth of Cohasset.

Also, Thomas Cromwell, Bob Julian of Cohasset; Signor Chapuys, John Rice of Scituate; Chapuys' Attendant, Fred Koed of Cohasset; William Roper, Stanley Campbell of Weymouth; King Henry VIII, Scott Ketcham of Cohasset; "A Woman," Sidney Browne of Wollaston; and Archbishop Cranmer, David Barrett of Cohasset.

A true story about famous personages and his historic events in Renaissance England, the play allows modern audiences to become spectators of the tumultuous events surrounding the young Henry's decision to divorce his wife the Queen Catherine and marry another women in order to produce a male heir to the throne. The act of divorce not being permissable in Catholic England, King Henry saw no alternative but to sever the connection between the English Church and the Pope in Rome.

Among the English clergy, nobility, and intellectuals, only Sir Thomas More stood fast against the heresy and schism produced by Henry's action. Sir Thomas, for his moral strength and devotion to religeous principles, became first a traitor in the eyes of his countrymen, then a martyr in the cause of his religion. "A Man For All Seasons" depicts a social upheaval centuries old, but its theme is distinctly modern. The diverse problems faced by Renaissance men and women have not all been solved, only the identities of the characters are different. The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be presenting this powerful commentary on human nature at 8 p.m. the evenings of Feb. 25, 26 and 27 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Women's Van ... loaded

"Where can I find day care?" "How do I get my street repaired?" "Is there a senior citizen's group in my neighborhood?" "How can I find out if I'm pregnant?"

These are just some of the questions that have been asked by visitors to the Women's Van, and not all of the askers have been women.

The Women's Van is a mobile information center which goes where women live, work, and shop to provide information about human service organizations in the greater Boston area. The van will be parked at the Information Booth at South Shore Plaza in Braintree Jan. 25 through 29.

On the outside of the 24-foot long van it says, "Gotta Question? Maybe we can help." On the inside is an array of over 1,500 free pamphlets and brochures from organizations which provide services for everything from adult education and career planning to drug abuse and child/parent problems.

This "supermarket of services" is a project developed by the WIRE (Women's Information, Referral and Education) Service of the Junior League of Boston, a volunteer organization made up of 1,500 women interested in promoting volunteerism and initiating projects to meet community needs. In addition to the Van, WIRE Service sponsors seminars and workshops on topics of general interest as well as on subjects of special concern to women.

Anyone unable to visit the van may call the program's 24-hour telephone at 247-4078. Questions will be answered on the next business day if received after normal business hours.

Auto allowances bring complaints

Just last week two town workers were put on a pay as you drive mileage system at the rate of 18 cents a mile.

Both of them were in to complain to selectmen last week and ask for increases in the auto allowance.

Building Inspector James Litchfield wants either a flat $2,800 a year in the next budget or use of a town car for his inspections.

Superintendent of wires, Steve Wigmore, asked for 24 cents a mile.

Selectmen took no action on either request.

"Today I drove to Heather Drive, that's 6 1/4 or 6 1/2 miles. That's $1.08. Gas is $1.39 a gallon. My car didn't even get warmed up. Where's Litchfield coming out?"

Board Chairman Henry Ainslie said that when the budgets were drawn up, the selectmen talked about 18 cents a mile because that was the same rate used by the state and county.

Now the county is up to 20 cents a mile, Ainslie said.

Litchfield complained that drivers of town-owned vehicles are not being asked to fill out the mileage sheets as he is.

Before last week he was paid for the use of his car at the annual rate of $1,900.

He said he believes the cost of operating a car is higher than the town's payment.

"I prefer the town provide a vehicle," Litchfield said. "I could pick it up in the morning and leave it at the police station or wherever at night, when there were repairs the town would pay for it.

"There's no way I'm going to be the goat for 18 cents a mile."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle told him not to expect the town to buy anyone a car this year.

Litchfield said the budget he submitted for the coming fiscal year is the same as this year's budget, except he has asked for $2,800 for a car allowance.

Litchfield said his present concern over the payment rate is heightened because he needs to buy a new car. He was driving his wife's car that day.

Wigmore, was getting $1,200 a year before the new system took effect, asked for 24 cents a mile. At a later point in discussion he agreed to settle for 21 cents a mile.

Selectmen say the new per mile rate could give either man more than the current allowance "if they can justify it."

"The point is accountability," Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said.

Mendes promoted

Miss Ruth Mendes of Scituate, a member of the original staff of the Bound Brook Office of Cohasset Savings Bank in North Scituate, has been promoted to manager of the office, succeeding John F. Kelly who has left the bank's employ.

Miss Mendes has been assistant manager of the Bound Brook Office since 1979. She is a graduate of Scituate High School and earned an Associate Degree at Quincy Junior College in 1976. She joined Cohasset Savings Bank in 1977 when the bank was assembling a staff for the opening of the office in North Scituate in June of that year. Since then she has taken part in a number of courses offered by the banking industry and last year was awarded a certificate of Achievement by the Savings Bank Life Insurance Council for successful completion of a practice and application course conducted by the Council. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernesto Mendes of Scituate.

Liberman to speak

Dr. Lawrence Liberman, educational consultant to the Cohasset school system, will speak to the combined Communications Council of the Osgood and Deer Hill schools at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 20, at the Unitarian parish house.

He will talk on child development issues relating to the primary school and intermediate school age child.

Free babysitting is available.

Discriminatory change

Members of the school committee seemed reluctant to approve of a requested state rule change for girls' soccer to allow players to wear casts with a doctor's letter.

School officials say there are no similar rules in boys' sports and the clause is discrimatory. Several school committee members indicated the future use of a student's arm, leg, hand or whatever was more important than playing high school sports.

Youth hockey league roundup

The Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset-Hull Seahawks Youth Hockey Teams shifted their "Scoring Machines" into high gear during the week ending Jan. 3, and posted seven victories out of nine encounters, including several by very lopsided margins.

The Bantam A's put on a devastating display of firepower as they blasted Randolph 11-1. The leading gunners in the A's awesome attack were Steve Remedis with a "hat-trick" and two assists, Jeff O'Neill with two goals and a like number of assists, and Matthew Glennon with a pair of tallies. Christ Tatum, Bobby Salvador and Joe Finn also dented the nets for the Seahawks while additional assists were registered by Mike DiLorenzo (2), Bobby Weisslinger, Charlie Lersch, and Philip Thomas.

The Bantam B's moved into a tie for third place with a 4-2 victory over Brockton. Michael Cooney figures in all the B's scoring as he knocked in a goal and added three assists. Teammates David Flaherty (2) and Russ Goulart accounted for the other Seahawk scores.

The Pee Wee A's "Express Train" was derailed again this week when they were administered a 6-1 defeat by Randolph. Center Jeff Hartwell notched the lone Seahawk goal.

The Pee Wee B's exhibited a well balanced offensive unit as they steamed past Brockton 7-2. Jamie Hoffman, John Meschino, Brian McGovern, Danny Pompeo, Craig Mulcahey, John Goffar, and Todd FitzPatrick, all smashed the bullseye for the victorious Seahawk team. Contributing assists to the attack were Andy Johnson, Jimmy Connolly, Jason Clark, James Misakian, Fitzpatrick, Pompeo (2), and Brian Curran.

The Pee Wee C's raced out to a 3-0 first period lead in their game against Plymouth. However, the localities couldn't stand prosperity, and eventually were overtaken 8-5. Denting the nets for the home team were Paul Ahern (twice), Mike Leighton, Jamie Langmaid and John Walsh. Receiving credit for assists were Colin Keating, Leighton (2), Walsh, Chris Gong, Stephen McCoy and Carmine Cimetti.

The Squirt A's bested Randolph 3-0 behind the combined shutout cage-minding of Jamie Bridge and Joshua Goulart. Jeffrey White, Erik Steverman and John Galluzzo took care of the scoring for the A's while Michael Richardson (2) and Chris Olivieri received credit for assists. Eric Meschino played a solid game at his defensive position.

Tom Hingston's Squirt B's garnered all of the awards this week. They received designation as "Team of the Week" by virtue of their 11-0 annihilation of Brockton and Center Michael Dundon took home the "Marksmanship" badge by blasting four rockets past the shell-shocked Brockton goalie. Winger Mark Resnick walked away with the "Playmaker" title with three assists, and goalie Damon Parsons picked up a "Shut-out" patch for his efforts in front of the nets. Other goal scorers during the on-slaughter were Chris Ventolieri, Michael Moog, Paul Norton, Dennis Peacock, and Billy Lincoln. Additional assists were metered out to Lincoln and Brian Pompeo (2).

The division-leading Squirt C's bushwacked Bridgewater 6-1 as winger Sean Noonan notched a "hat-trick." Winger Steve Boardman added a pair of goals for the offense and Terence Shea closed out the scoring. Assists were dealt out to Tony Muzzi (2), Eric Fitzpatrick, Brian Burke, and David Orpen.

The Mites ended the week on a winning note as they clobbered Duxbury 8-1. Goal-scorers for our young skaters were Kevin Townsend (2), Sean McGowen, Pat Henderson, Gregg Salmaine, Barry Ehrstien, Paul Frey, and David Lambie. Assists were given to Salmaine, Tony Getto and Alfie Rogers (2).

Icemen win two, still unbeaten

The varsity ice hockey team earned two victories from South Shore League opponents last week to improve their record to 8-0-1 overall.

The Skippers remained undefeated by clobbering Rockland, 11-2, and edging past Abington, 4-3. Cohasset has a record of 2-0 in the league.

Junior center Danny Bowen scored a hat-trick for Cohasset in the Rockland contest, while teammates Andy Pottenger and Don O'Neill added two goals each.

Despite the slow start, with only a 2-1 Cohasset lead at the end of the first period, coach Tom Burnell said the game was over early.

Against Abington, the Skippers scored twice in both the first and second periods with the winning goal scored in the third period by Jack McNeill on a pass from Danny Bowen.

The Green Wave scored once in the second period and twice in the third to threaten Cohasset's undefeated streak.

Senior defenseman Domenic Compedilli contributed two goals toward the Skipper victory while junior defenseman Richard Evans scored once and assisted on a Campedelli goal.

Coach Burnell has three goalies to choose from this year: seniors Steve Bowen and Scott Ripley and junior Mark Brown.

Last year Cohasset finished 10-5-2 overall and 6-3-1 in the league. Burnell said he is pleased with his team's start and hopes that they continue to win.

60 Plus opens new year

Cohasset 60 Plus Club will meet for the first time in the new year, Thursday, Jan. 21, in the Unitarian Parish House.

Coffee hour at noon. Business meeting at 1 p.m., followed by bingo games.

For school delays, listen for the fire horn

School will be postponed one hour instead of being called off automatically on some storm days still on the way.

A signal from the fire horn — still to be determined — will indicate all schools and buses will run one hour late. Dismissal time will not change on those days. There will be no morning Kindergarten.

Eugene Crowell, School Superintendent, told the school committee this week that if the winter keeps up as it's been, the staff and students could be looking at each other on July 1.

Several years ago school committee approved the concept of a delayed start on storm days for the previous superintendent. The system has never been used.

Crowell said he almost tried the postponement last Thursday but decided it would create too much confusion if put into effect before all students and parents are notified.

"It is vital that we lose no more school days," Crowell said. He pointed out that the school parking lots were all cleared by 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

But his decision on school cancellation is made in pre-dawn hours.

He said he would still be forced to cancel school if a storm were still falling heavily at 4:30 or 5:00 a.m. when the decision needs to be made.

But many storms are over or petering out by then, Crowell said.

Town crews keep the roads cleared throughout a storm and don't begin sanding and plowing sidewalks until later.

Crowell said he thinks the extra hour would be enough time for the crews.

The signal for school cancellation is one long blast and two short blasts on the fire horn. The fire chief is responsible for creating a new signal indicating school will be delayed.

Girls win despite wayward bus

By Donna Cogliano

Though the team school bus had trouble driving up the snowy hill at Routes 228 and 3A, the Cohasset varsity girls' basketball squad had little trouble defeating opponents last week.

After beating Hull, 39-28, on Monday the only difficult part was a snowbound drive home from a 48-19 victory at Holbrook on Wednesday night. The coaches and teenaged girls were stranded aboard a disabled bus on 3A in Hingham until almost midnight.

Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon said the bus died on the way up the hill.

Fortunately, the Skippers' spirits did not die over the weekend and they managed a 37-34 victory over Norwell at home on Monday. The win puts the girls above water with a 5-4 record in the South Shore League (6-5 overall) and marks the beginning of a three-game winning streak.

Angela O'Brien was high scorer with 15 points at Hull last week. Madeline Roy and Laura Hines had strong games defensively for the Skippers while junior guard Gia Barresi contributed nine points.

Cohasset led at the half, by two points, 18-16. Fallon said his team pulled away from the Pirates in the third quarter, which ended, 31-22. And at the final buzzer Cohasset found themselves ahead, 39-28, for their first victory after three consecutive defeats.

The Holbrook game was a "runaway' said coach Fallon. Cohasset led 18-0 at the end of the first quarter and 32-6 at halftime.

The entire Skipper squad got to compete against the Bulldogs and 13 of 15 Cohasset players scored.

Junior guard Kristen Wilkin had eight points as did junior forward Beverly Mullaney. Fallon said Mullaney had an excellent game and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Coach Fallon said the Norwell match-up was, "a close game all the way". A tough defense and free throws made the difference in the final minutes of play, he said.

Senior guard Stacey Thompson made a crucial contribution toward the win, by holding the Clipper's high scorer to zero points in the fourth quarter.

Though the Norwell player had scored 12 points during the first three quarters, she was held scoreless in the fourth, when Thompson was assigned to guard her.

Barresi, who had nine rebounds, sunk three foul shots in the last minute said Fallon. Senior Laurie Sandblom scored 12 points and had a very strong game, he said.

Cohasset was ahead 19-16 at the half and 30-28 after the third. Norwell stayed within reach right up until the last minute of play, but lost 37-34. The Clippers slipped to 4-5 and Cohasset improved to 5-4 in the SSL.

BEST YET youth program successful

In the past few years a dozen of the town's young troublemakers have gotten help through a state funded project coordinating community services operated out of the Norfolk County District Attorney's office.

Grant money for the program has dried up. But the program will continue, according to David Hayes, who heads up the juvenile division for D.A. William Delahunt.

Hayes is proud of the project, called BEST YET, which he says is 100 percent successful 78 percent of the time, meaning the youth in the program do not find themselves back in trouble over a three year period.

"Ninety-six percent of the time, we do what we say we'll do," he said, meaning a more limited success.

"And then there is a small percentage of failures," he added. The project began four years ago as a pilot for the Quincy school system. Since then, with money from the State Department of Education, the program has gone county-wide.

The grant was to provide $60,000 a year for three years but government spending cuts left only $30,000 for last year's budget and nothing for this year.

Hayes said his people will continue to provide the service despite the lack of money.

"The only problem could be if the district attorney's budget is also cut," he said.

Police Chief John DeBassio said he feels the program has worked well.

Hayes said the basis of the program is that his office demands responsibility from the parents and youth.

He said a criminal charge is the beginning of the

Cochems arrested on mail fraud charge

Robert Cochems of Jerusalem Road was arrested on a charge of mail fraud last Thursday afternoon.

U.S. Postal inspectors out of Pittsburg, Penn., made the arrest along with Patrolman Richard Abbadessa.

Cochems was held overnight at the Cohasset police station and then released to postal inspectors from out of state.

The Boston office postal inspectors knew nothing of the case when contacted this week.

Cochems was the subject of a police search last year when he was listed as missing and possibly drowned. About six weeks later he turned up in another state.

Pittsburg authorities are processing a large-scale mail fraud case and have also seemed to lose track of information around the arrest.

Calls to the U.S. Attorney's office in Pittsburg as well as to Pennsylvania's postal inspectors have found little data is available.

Meanwhile local police are wondering what will happen on the prosecution of a burglary that happened recently at Cochem's home. A man was arrested on that break. The case was scheduled for the end of the month.

Postal Inspector William Evans said there will be a removal hearing this Thursday in U.S. District Court at Boston on the case.

"He was being held on $15,000 bail with surety when we left," Evans said.

The indictment filed in district court was against a John Doe, also known as Robert Johnston. Postal

Icemen win two, still unbeaten

The varsity ice hockey team earned two victories from South Shore League opponents last week to improve their record to 8-0-1 overall.

The Skippers remained undefeated by clobbering Rockland, 11-2, and edging past Abington, 4-3. Cohasset has a record of 2-0 in the league.

Junior center Danny Bowen scored a hat-trick for Cohasset in the Rockland contest, while teammates Andy Pottenger and Don O'Neill added two goals each.

Despite the slow start, with only a 2-1 Cohasset lead at the end of the first period, coach Tom Burnell said the game was over early.

Against Abington, the Skippers scored twice in both the first and second periods with the winning goal scored in the third period by Jack McNeill on a pass from Danny Bowen.

The Green Wave scored once in the second period and twice in the third to threaten Cohasset's undefeated streak.

Senior defenseman Domenic Compedilli contributed two goals toward the Skipper victory while junior defenseman Richard Evans scored once and assisted on a Campedelli goal.

Coach Burnell has three goalies to choose from this year: seniors Steve Bowen and Scott Ripley and junior Mark Brown.

Last year Cohasset finished 10-5-2 overall and 6-3-1 in the league. Burnell said he is pleased with his team's start and hopes that they continue to win.

On a cold & snowy morn

For school delays, listen for the fire horn

School will be postponed one hour instead of being called off automatically on some storm days still on the way.

A signal from the fire horn — still to be determined — will indicate all schools and buses will run one hour late. Dismissal time will not change on those days. There will be no morning Kindergarten.

Eugene Crowell, School Superintendent, told the school committee this week that if the winter keeps up as it's been, the staff and students could be looking at each other on July 1.

Several years ago school committee approved the concept of a delayed start on storm days for the previous superintendent. The system has never been used.

Crowell said he almost tried the postponement last Thursday but decided it would create too much confusion if put into effect before all students and parents are notified.

"It is vital that we lose no more school days," Crowell said. He pointed out that the school parking lots were all cleared by 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

But his decision on school cancellation is made in pre-dawn hours.

He said he would still be forced to cancel school if a storm were still falling heavily at 4:30 or 5:00 a.m. when the decision needs to be made.

But many storms are over or petering out by then, Crowell said.

Town crews keep the roads cleared throughout a storm and don't begin sanding and plowing sidewalks until later.

Crowell said he thinks the extra hour would be enough time for the crews.

The signal for school cancellation is one long blast and two short blasts on the fire horn. The fire chief is responsible for creating a new signal indicating school will be delayed.

Girls win despite wayward bus

By Donna Cogliano

Though the team school bus had trouble driving up the snowy hill at Routes 228 and 3A, the Cohasset varsity girls' basketball squad had little trouble defeating opponents last week.

After beating Hull, 39-28, on Monday the only difficult part was a snowbound drive home from a 48-19 victory at Holbrook on Wednesday night. The coaches and teenaged girls were stranded aboard a disabled bus on 3A in Hingham until almost midnight.

Cohasset Coach Bill Fallon said the bus died on the way up the hill.

Fortunately, the Skippers' spirits did not die over the weekend and they managed a 37-34 victory over Norwell at home on Monday. The win puts the girls above water with a 5-4 record in the South Shore League (6-5 overall) and marks the beginning of a three-game winning streak.

Angela O'Brien was high scorer with 15 points at Hull last week. Madeline Roy and Laura Hines had strong games defensively for the Skippers while junior guard Gia Barresi contributed nine points.

Cohasset led at the half, by two points, 18-16. Fallon said his team pulled away from the Pirates in the third quarter, which ended, 31-22. And at the final buzzer Cohasset found themselves ahead, 39-28, for their first victory after three consecutive defeats.

The Holbrook game was a "runaway' said coach Fallon. Cohasset led 18-0 at the end of the first quarter and 32-6 at halftime.

The entire Skipper squad got to compete against the Bulldogs and 13 of 15 Cohasset players scored.

Junior guard Kristen Wilkin had eight points as did junior forward Beverly Mullaney. Fallon said Mullaney had an excellent game and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Coach Fallon said the Norwell match-up was, "a close game all the way". A tough defense and free throws made the difference in the final minutes of play, he said.

Senior guard Stacey Thompson made a crucial contribution toward the win, by holding the Clipper's high scorer to zero points in the fourth quarter.

Though the Norwell player had scored 12 points during the first three quarters, she was held scoreless in the fourth, when Thompson was assigned to guard her.

Barresi, who had nine rebounds, sunk three foul shots in the last minute said Fallon. Senior Laurie Sandblom scored 12 points and had a very strong game, he said.

Cohasset was ahead 19-16 at the half and 30-28 after the third. Norwell stayed within reach right up until the last minute of play, but lost 37-34. The Clippers slipped to 4-5 and Cohasset improved to 5-4 in the SSL.

BEST YET youth program successful

In the past few years a dozen of the town's young troublemakers have gotten help through a state funded project coordinating community services operated out of the Norfolk County District Attorney's office.

Grant money for the program has dried up. But the program will continue, according to David Hayes, who heads up the juvenile division for D.A. William Delahunt.

Hayes is proud of the project, called BEST YET, which he says is 100 percent successful 78 percent of the time, meaning the youth in the program do not find themselves back in trouble over a three year period.

"Ninety-six percent of the time, we do what we say we'll do," he said, meaning a more limited success.

"And then there is a small percentage of failures," he added. The project began four years ago as a pilot for the Quincy school system. Since then, with money from the State Department of Education, the program has gone county-wide.

The grant was to provide $60,000 a year for three years but government spending cuts left only $30,000 for last year's budget and nothing for this year.

Hayes said his people will continue to provide the service despite the lack of money.

"The only problem could be if the district attorney's budget is also cut," he said.

Police Chief John DeBassio said he feels the program has worked well.

Hayes said the basis of the program is that his office demands responsibility from the parents and youth.

He said a criminal charge is the beginning of the

Cohasset's week ...

Hearing scheduled

Selectmen will hold a hearing during the regular meeting scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 3, at town hall on a beer and wine license for Cohasset Pizza House.

The pizza place is located at Jonathan Livingstone Plaza on Route 3A.

The Pizza House is also seeking a license for another video game. The establishment already holds a video game license.

Papa Gino's is also looking for a game license.

Long range plans

The Village and Harbor Association wants to have a street fair next summer when South Shore Art Center holds its summer show.

Selectmen are thinking it over.

Docking fee suggested

Charles Fink, chairman of the harbor study committee, discussed the idea of having the town institute a docking fee for small boats at last week's selectmen's meeting.

The boats now tie up without a fee.

Fink suggested a $25 fee would be appropriate.

No decision was made.

Jan. 27 meeting cancelled

The selectmen will not be meeting Wednesday, Jan. 27, since the last vote on the county budget is scheduled for this evening.

The next meeting of the board will be tonight, Wednesday, and then Wednesday, Feb. 3, at town hall.

No ledger accounts

School officials don't plan to keep a ledger by account and item summing up the expenses of the past year.

Financial records will be available in the business office but the special accounting would have cost $600 which is not included in the budget.

John Raftery told school committee members this week he would make the book of expenditures available to them if they are interested.

Chief seeks waiver

The police chief is trying to get a waiver to allow the town's newest police officers to go on the road by themselves before undergoing police academy training.

Chief John DeBassio explained that the state's requirements are strict about police training.

Right now both Patrolmen Richard Yocum and Robert Small are limited to desk duty or observation, according to the state.

Both were auxiliary officers before their appointment and Chief DeBassio wants to have full use of the officers until they can be trained by a police academy. He said it may be a few months before they are accepted into an academy.

He said their help is still cutting down the problem he has had with overtime in the recent past.

The department has been shorthanded for six months. There are 17 members of the department.

Wrestling coach named

James Sullivan was appointed as junior high school wrestling coach by school committee this week. The position pays $400 a year. The money will come from the fund raised by the booster clubs last summer.

Hugo's sale delayed

The sale of Hugo's Lighthouse from the estate of John Carzis to the Gulerserian brothers of Cambridge has been slightly delayed.

While details about the passing are being worked out still, it seems the problems are on the way to being solved.

Police budget

The police chief has put together a budget that's basically the same as this year's - it provides for a computer, cruiser replacement, some building maintenance and a clerk for the department.

Police Chief John DeBassio told selectmen last week he would like to see records computerized for efficiency. It is unlikely the computer purchase will go through with the problems of Proposition 2½, selectmen said.

The budget as proposed contains $404,546 for salaries and $49,325 for contracted services plus the capital outlay items.

Selectmen last week lined out some wording on the clerk/dispatcher item which has been a matter of controversy between the board and the police union.

Position open

The job of dog officer is open since the last dog officer was appointed to the police department recently.

To date the only applicant for the job is Diane Cogill. She will be interviewed by selectmen during the meeting scheduled for tonight, Wednesday, at town hall.

Insurance study

The town is thinking about dropping its insurance coverage in some areas at least and becoming self-insured.

The cost of insurance is rising faster than the 2 1/2 percent cap may allow. Both property insurance and health insurance (partially paid) for town employees is jumping at rates well above 20 percent.

The advisory committee plans to ask the selectmen to set up a study committee on the matter.

Cochem arrested ...

authorities say they determined that man was Cochems.

So far seven other people have been indicted on the mail fraud case. Cochems was the most recent arrest.

A Pittsburg grand jury is continuing the investigation. The indictment details a scheme involving the sale of coal contracts for future sale.

Democrats to caucus Feb. 6

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus on Saturday, Feb. 6, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1982 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

The Convention, which will be held in Springfield on May 22, will be the first Party Convention to endorse candidates for statewide office in ten years. Candidates for the following offices will be endorsed: U.S. Senator, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary, Attorney General, Treasurer and Auditor.

Cohasset will be electing four delegates and two alternates equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for Governor and President.

Donna J. McGee, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, will call the caucus at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of December 31. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected. Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas. Slate-making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus, although donations may be solicited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic State Committee, 11 Beacon Street, Suite 502, Boston.

Richard, McGee head Dukakis campaign

Sen. Allan McKinnon, coordinator of the Dukakis Committee for the region has named Mary Richard and Donna McGee as the Cohasset Dukakis co-coordinators for the town.

Mary, a five year resident of Cohasset, and Donna, who has lived in the town for eighteen years, will coodinate the Democratic campaign effort in preparation for the Feb. 6 Democratic caucus in that town.

Mary Richard, of 703 Jerusalem Road, is the mother of six children and has taught in the Boston Public Schools for the past 14 years. A member of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, she has been actively involved in politics during her residency in the town.

Donna McGee, of 27 Hill Street, is the mother of three and is employed as an administrative aide to Phil Johnston, State Representative from Marshfield and Scituate. Chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, she was a delegate to the 1978 mid-term convention in Memphis and a delegate to the National Convention held in New York in 1980.

On the South Shore, Senator McKinnon also named coordinators in nine other cities and towns.

Both Cohasset Coordinators agreed that Dukakis has demonstrated the commitment, integrity and ability to provide the leadership that will be necessary to maintain an acceptable quality of life in the commonwealth during the coming years.

Residents interested in joining the Cohasset Dukakis Committee and supporting Michael Dukakis in his campaign for governor are encouraged to call Donna McGee at 383-9114 or Mary Richard at 383-6435.

Legislation aimed at fake signatures

Rep. Thomas Brownell, D-Quincy, is sponsoring a bill to create penalties for forging signatures of legislative petitions in the aftermath of the casino falsehoods.

Brownell found he had received a number of fake signatures from the pro-casino people last fall. He asked the attorney general to investigate but Frank Bellotti couldn't find a law with appropriate penalties. He threw the ball back to Brownell asking for new legislation.

The Brownell bill would give a $1,000 fine or one-year prison term for anyone convicted of faking names in a petition drive or letter campaign to a state legislator.

Williams exhibit at the Art Complex

Opening at the Duxbury Art Complex Museum on Jan. 22 with a reception with the artist on Jan 24, 2 to 5 p.m., will be the acrylic stain paintings and watercolors by Cohasset artist, Claffy Williams.

Working in abstractions as well as from nature, Mrs. Williams majored in fine arts at Sweet Briar College and continued her studies at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. She has received numerous awards in juried shows in the South Shore and Boston area. Her recent exhibitions include the Staircase Gallery at the South Shore Conservatory of Music, the Curtis-Saval International Center in Boston, the Plymouth Five Cent Savings Bank and the Copley Society in Boston.

She is currently exhibiting at the Greenwich Studio in New York City.

An Educational Instructor at the Museum of Fine Arts, she lectures on Asiatic, Egyptian, Classical and American art, as well as Contemporary Painting. As Director of the Prison Art Project from 1973 to 1976, she served as President for the first year, playing a major part in establishing the program. She served for four years on the Board of Directors at the Copley Society and is now a member of the Long Range Planning Board at the South Shore Art Center.

On exhibit in the Bengtz Gallery will be the Duxbury Art Association's Winter Juried Show. Both exhibits continue through February 28. The museum is located at 189 Alden St. and there is no charge for admission. Call 934-6634 for more information.

program. And it is the stick, waived when necessary, to provide motivation.

A teenager to qualify must agree to work with the BEST YET staff in the D.A.'s office.

"Either they can end up in court the next morning, or they can be referred to us. It gives a kid and his family a chance to take responsbility.

"Restitution is always required and there's at least a short group process to make sure the kid understands the meaning of the word responsibility. Kids have a hard time with that word today.

"The kid and his parents sign a contract, if the parents won't cooperate or the kid abuses the program, then the police proceed with the original complaint."

As Hayes described the program, some of the participants are deeply troubled and require long term supervision, others are basically normal kids who get into trouble as a one-time happening. The second group are supervised for a relatively brief period.

Studds cool on casinos

Proponents of casino gambling should not count on Congressman Gerry Studds being in their corner.

Although he dodged a yes or no on the question before the Scituate Chamber of Commerce this week, he did wax unenthusiastic about the idea of casinos, saying he was "profoundly grateful I don't represent Atlantic City.

"Nor have I the foggiest desire to represent anything that looks like Atlantic City."

He termed the casino issue a local concern and advised his listeners that they should be "extremely grateful that Congress has nothing to do with casino gambling."

☐Several Cohasset artists were winners of the South Shore Art Center's recent Winter Show. Honorable mention in the oil category went to Robert Wilson for Nude and to Tom Lucas for Smoker-Memories in a Greek Museum. Kerstin MacNeill received an Honorable Mention in Watercolor for Off Cohasset. A black and white photograph titled Sexuality Series No. 5 by Gail Bryan was awarded a first.

An opening reception next Sunday from 2 p.m until 5 p.m. will open the exhibit of Cohasset artist Claffy Williams at the Duxbury Art Complex Museum which will feature her acrylic stain paintings and watercolors.

☐They may have had a few tumbles and some found their skates were too big and others too small but everyone seemed to enjoy the first in a series of skating lessons sponsored by the Recreation Department at Cohasset Winter Gardens.

Sarah Atherton, an old pro on her second series of lessons at the rink, took everything in stride. Jarred Graves was just beginning but nevertheless was more than willing to lend a helping hand to his fellow skaters. John Kinchla really enjoyed his lessons and helpfully explained that "the jumping was the hardest part." For all the beginners, the status achievement of the lesson was being able to get to the other side without falling.

Overheard in a conversation between two high schoolers, "This is the first time I've ever been on skates." to which her friend promptly replied, "It's been three years since I've skated. Stick with me and we can help each other." And, they did.

☐Has the Cohasset school system lost public support as intimated in a recent article in Boston magazine which lists Cohasset, along with Wellesley, Cambridge, Boston and other areas as having lost their popular constituency because the public no longer thinks the system is serious about education. Several residents have been discussing the December article.

The opinion is that of David Finnegan, lawyer and radio host and former member of the Boston School Committee, who says the problem is hardly unique and "unless there is a dramatic reversal, the situation will only get worse and unless the system wins back public support, it is doomed."

As a solution for Boston, Finnegan recommends that the school superintendent "seize the initiative, institute procedural reforms and show that a diploma from a public school, today, is not a worthless document."

☐The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association is now conducting its annual membership drive. Anyone interested in joining this worthly organization may send a check made out to the association to Ellen Morrissey, 3 South Main Street.

Association members are now planning several exciting events for upcoming months, says Ellen. There will be an open meeting and cocktail party at the Lothrop House at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 2. Anyone wishing further information may call her at 383-9623.

☐The following shopping list was found at Curtis Market by Karen Bartow who is still trying to figure out whether it was the result of a teenager bribing a younger sister or brother or a thoughtful parent: Pepsi - 2 liters, a quart of orange juice, jello and a snicker...for yourself.

☐It's not surprising at this time of year to find an occasional snowman or fort in various front yards around town but the Bill Clapp family have gone a step forward and recently managed to sculpt an amorphous mound of white stuff into a truly delectable dinosaur complete with gay scarf and candy canes in between its scales. The result provides a definite point of interest to the front yard of their home on Beechwood Street.

☐A gathering of friends and neighbors is always fun and when there's a chance to sample various wines and cheeses at a tasting party, there's an added pleasure. The Roy Manns provided just such an opportunity, recently, and just about everyone discovered a new cheese or wine they hadn't had before. Keller Geister, a dry white German wine made a big hit and a cheddar cheese and horseradish spread on carrots was a zesty new taste sensation.

☐While the rest of us were digging ourselves out and doing whatever possible to keep warm during what has turned out to be one of the coldest winters in recent years, Kay and Frank England were out in sunny Las Vegas and on a side trip to the desert at Death Valley.

They were out visiting their daughter, Kathleen, a 1971 graduate of Cohasset High School who having graduated from Suffolk University Law School, is now a city attorney for Las Vegas. Kay was especially impressed by the Jubilee show at the MGM Grand Hotel which she says has certainly improved since the last time she saw it when it was a burned out shell. Now, she notes, it's probably the safest place to go in Las Vegas with all the safety equipment they've installed since the fire, a year ago. With a cost of over 100 and the sinking of the Titanic on stage, the show which is a tribute to the country, is always a sell out, according to Kay.

When it came time to return home, Kay discovered that the airlines had oversold their flight so she volunteered to remain behind as Frank and their daughter, Terry, both of whom had to return to work, went on ahead.

The next day when she returned to the airport, she found that she was bumped again. "I really could have stayed on indefinitely," says Kay with a chuckle. After two extra days, she finally managed to make it home just in time for a visit from Frank's brother, George England, who came on from San Francisco.

Plaque for service

The school committee awarded Student Representative Holly Grant a plaque for her service this week.

Holly, a senior at Cohasset High School, will be leaving early next month to attend school in Uruguay under the American Field Service program.

She thanked the committee, high school staff and Richard Streeter, high school principal, for giving the AFSers a chance to see a day of the school in action. The AFS students from the South Shore attended classes two weeks ago.

Irene Brown, committee chairman, presented the plaque.

School bus problems

Standees on the school buses need attention, according to Nancy Clapp.

She said some school children on the buses will not let others sit with them, adding to the problem. She asked school committee to see that a meeting of bus drivers and students is held to talk about the problem.

"I think some sensitization would help," she said.

Next year the school buses may end up on town property. School committee member Richard Conley wants to know whether a fence could be installed either at Osgood or Deer Hill to keep the buses away from passersby.

The school system now pays $3,000 a year for storage to the Papes. The buses are stored off Route 3A.

Several other committee members seemed concerned about the possibility of vandalism if the buses were kept at the schools.

Conley said the fence would take care of it.

Counseling goals were realistic

[Editor's Note: This is the last in a series about Coastal Community Counseling Center.]

By a Psychologist at the Center

Mr. and Mrs. Jones were relieved to find that the goals for counseling were manageable and realistic. They agreed with the counselor that the goal of counseling would be Billy's completion of his daily homework assignments. It was assumed that this would also improve Billy's performance in the classroom.

The counseling plan involved six weekly family meetings and consultation by the counselor, Mr. Daley, with Billy's school. Parents were asked to work together on structuring a system which would insure Billy's completion of assignments. The first family meetings would be used to decide on this system with all family members present.

Mr. Daley, trained in both child development and communication skills, acted as a professional advisor and mediator in these family discussions. He helped them institute a way of monitoring and checking up on Billy's homework that involved Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Billy and school personnel. Billy knew both the positive and negative consequences that would result from whether or not he followed through on his part of the bargain.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, like many parents who enter counseling, found that doing things differently was difficult for them as well as for Billy. For example, Billy accused his parents of being unfair, and Mr. and Mrs. Jones disagreed about how to respond to Billy's complaints. In addition, Billy's sister, Linda, felt left out. The family found that they were able to use the counseling sessions to find solutions to these and other difficulities.

This series of four articles on the Jones family was a fictionalized account of one family's contact at Coastal Community Counseling Center. Coastal Community Counseling Center offers counseling services for children, families, adults and couples. The Center is located at 90 South Street, Hingham. For further information call 749-9306.

Wompatuck Park

The town has been sending representatives to the Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council for about a year now.

Yet there is no firm policy on what the town hopes to accomplish there.

The state park includes a large number of acres in Cohasset. But the only entrance is through Hingham. There are roads leading into the park through Cohasset up in Beechwood. They are blockaded off.

Hingham wants a second access built to the park. Its representatives on the committee have been working for that access to be built in Norwell. Norwell officials complain that a road there might endanger the town wellfields.

Time has come for selectmen to take a stand on the park access.

Time to decide whether Cohasset might want to insist on opening one of the old roads — or, as has been suggested at the council, allow a new road to go in off Route 3A by Winter Gardens.

Arthur Clark, the selectmen's secretary, points out that the people on the committee haven't been too interested in a road from Cohasset.

"It wouldn't solve the traffic problem," Clark explains. But the people on the committee haven't been able to come up with a solution everyone will accept anyway.

If the selectmen have no interest in what happens — or doesn't happen on the second access — they should at least let their representatives know so they don't have to waste time attending meetings that are no concern of the community.

Video games

Back a while ago, the police chief put forth his ideas on video games and the selectmen went along voting against a new license in a place that sold alcoholic beverages.

The concept of Chief John DeBassio being that the games attract young people and public policy is to discourage young people from congregating in or around liquor selling establishments.

At the time he said he had nothing against the games but he did not want to see young people hanging around liquor stores.

Now the selectmen are faced with two applications in the same line. Papa Gino's and Cohasset Pizza House both would like to become places dealing in video games and liquor.

Selectmen plan to reconsider the guidelines.

Reconsideration of any policy is something that is always appropriate. Thinking things through is a valuable exercise.

But we have to say we liked the original stand and don't see any new factors. In our opinion both new applicants should be given a choice of which license they are most interested in — video games or liquor.

The problem of under-age drinking in this small town is probably no worse than anywhere else. It probably just shows more because of the closeness of the community.

The idea of keeping video games away from the purveyors of alcohol was wise on the part of the chief and the selectmen. It's still a wise idea.

The driver alcohol education program

Letters

To the Editor:

As directors of Driver Alcohol Education programs, we wish to share with the public our concern re: the present system of dealing with the drinking driver problem in Massachusetts.

The strengths of the program when applied only to first-time offenders are many, but it is the failings of the system which have rightfully caused public concern. From our vantage point we see the following weaknesses and suggest appropriate remedies:

1. The system presently lacks the ability to screen out repeat offenders consistently.

2. Legal sanctions against repeat offenders are vague and too lenient.

3. The general public does not have a sense of a high degree of probability of arrest if one drinks and drives.

4. The legal consequences for any drinking and driving arrest are not strict enough.

We see the remedies for these weaknesses as follows:

1. The probation system in Massachusetts needs to be able to determine more consistently if an offender is in fact a first offender or has had a previous offense in another area of the state.

2. The definition of a repeat offender and legal consequences need to be clearly stated legislatively. Such legislation should require a judicial finding (thus avoiding further continuance without finding), mandatory jail sentence, significant fines and license loss and lengthier period of probation. Over and above these, treatment as a condition of probation should be a judicial option. Legislation is presently pending which includes many of these changes.

3. A significant increase in arrests over time will impact the public attitude regarding the probability of arrest.

4. Fines, fees and surcharges for first offense should be at such a level that they serve as a strong deterrent to drinking and driving, not just drunk driving. An aggressive educational campaign should be launched to make the public aware of these deterrents.

We appreciate the attention that the press has brought recently to the most serious problem of drinking and driving and hope that we can work together in finding solutions.

Selling the joys of the T

By Claire McDonough

Isn't the executive mind wonderful? The big brains at the MBTA are considering spending a million dollars on a public relations campaign in an attempt to increase ridership.

Now that just shows why they're them and I'm me. Silly me, I probably would have been scurrying around improving service or cutting fares. It takes someone with vision to look at the big picture and decide that you don't have to give people something great. You just have to tell them they're getting something great. And I'll bet the recent front page story about crime in the T and the muggings that go on in the parking garage aren't going to deter them one bit, either.

I can see it now. Full page ads in all the major newspapers, "PLAY DUNGEONS AND DRAGONS FOR REAL. Pit your skill against pickpockets, thugs, muggers and dope dealers. For a mere 75 cents ($1.50 if you're going to Boston) you can attempt to elude creatures of the night. Plasma and bandages extra. All players participate at their own risk."

They can capitalize on the crowded conditions, too. Charge more for standing than sitting, and tout it as a traveling exercise machine - "Wiggle Your Weight Away While You Wend Your Way to Work-Attempting to keep your balance while being thrown from one side of the car to the other uses up three times as many calories as sitting and reading a newspaper. Traveling with your spine bent at an improbable angle is not recommended for beginners, but can do wonders for the seasoned rider. And while you're moving at that improbable angle, may we suggest you read some of the ads for chiropractic medicine placed conveniently upside down on the sides of the car?"

The T's failure to keep to anything resembling a schedule can be turned to their advantage, too. When people enter a station, they will hear a stereo recording of Julius LaRosa singing that everyday can be Winsday, and prospective riders will be invited to choose the hour and the minute at which the train will pull into South Station. The one who comes closest gets a free taxi ride home.

And there can be t.v. commercials. A gorgeous blonde model in a gold evening gown will dab some 24-hour perfume on her throat. (Believe me, in the T she's going to need a gallon of the stuff) and look seductively at the camera.

"I've given up limos and Leer jets," she'll purr. "The real action is on the T. If I only have one life, let me live it on the red line."

Then a bunch of people dressed like Guardian Angels can dance out singing, "Someone to Watch Over Me." They will be chased off screen by other people wearing stocking masks, carrying switch blades, and singing "Strangers in the Night."

The soaps can be utilized too. I'm sure General Hospital can be pursuaded to have Luke and Laura break up, only to run into each other on the T and renew their committment. Laura can murmer, "A disco was so tacky. The T is where it's really at."

There's just no limit. I'm planning to use the Madison Avenue approach in all aspects of my life. For example, do you think the Dragon will buy it if, instead of rolling his socks up in those neat little matched balls I invite him to search through the subterranean recesses of the laundry room in a quest for hose?

I might even try leaving a note telling him that pink underwear is "mod" and "groovy" — not another example of my ineptitude with a washer.

'Dallas' is worthless junk, but she loves it

By Suzanne Diaz

The T.V. critic

One Friday night as I lay in a stupor on the couch watching Jock and Miz Ellie and J. R. and Sue Ellen and Bobby and Pam, my husband ambled in and said, "Why do you watch that worthless junk?" Whereupon he proceeded to plunk himself down on the sofa and stare at the set until the Lorimar signature had curled itself on and off the screen.

Why do I watch DALLAS? It's very simple. I have never seen any lives so different from mine, yet still masquerading as reality.

Look at Miz Ellie, Sue Ellen, Pam, the late Kristin, and even Donna Culver Krebs, whose way of saying goodbye is, "tyke keer." They do not wear elastic-topped dungarees with a Cohasset Youth Soccer sweatshirt. They do not carry bags of trash down the basement stairs, nor do they crack their elbows on cupboard doors or their heads on the car while they heave a toddler in and out of the back seat. No, Miz E., Pam, Sue Ellen and Donna are always elegance personified. So are the men. They all look good in cowboy clothes and they sit around the library at South Fork having before- or after-dinner drinks, while insulting and smiling at each other.

You will notice that, until recently, the South Fork kitchen was mercifully invisible, the way all kitchens should be. You knew only that it existed, since the silent and ever-present Raul and Teresa must produce drinks, coffee and meals on the terrace from somewhere. Now that it has been shown as a cavernous room, and Miz Ellie and Donna have appeared in aprons making chili, some of the illusion has gone. But only some.

My jaw drops as I follow the South Fork ladies through their typical days (and nights). Miz Ellie waters the plants and goes to Daughters of the Alamo meetings, while actually keeping a tight fist around the Ewing men. Sue Ellen Ewing drinks coffee in bed, sits in the library, and plays with her son and heir, John Ross, in the nursery. (Would you believe that boy is not two years old and he already has a phone in his room?)

Pamela Ewing does have a job: she works as a fashion coordinator in "The Store," an elegant clothing establishment in downtown Dallas. There she hobnobs with other modishly dressed cohorts, gets away from the opulent boredom of South Fork, and gives a rich, handsome publisher a chance to pursue her relentlessly when Bobby is too busy with business and senatorhood to pay attention to her. She is not troubled with sexist discrimination in the office, nor with deductions from her paycheck.

Of course, now that she has had a nervous breakdown and is on the way to adopting J.R. and the late Kristin's love child, she will perforce be spending much more time at home.

When Jock, J.R., Punk Anderson and other oil bigwigs got together for drinks at the Cattlemen's Club, they never talked about double digit inflation, the second mortgage on their homes, or the effects of Proposition 2½. No, they dealt almost exclusively with a phenomenon known as "Ewin' Oil," a subject which had endless seven-figure possibilities. However, now that Jock unfortunately died, it is hard to say just where Ewin' Oil will go. Oh, well. J.R. will think of something.

When the phone rings at South Fork, it is never a wrong number. You can bet it is not a soft drink survey from Atlanta, nor is it the president of the PTO calling about the annual fund raiser. It is always a lover, past, present, or prospective; or someone on a big oil deal, or a detective reporting his findings on whichever spouse is being spied on. Those Ewings! Always something going on!

Recently great changes have taken place on DALLAS, but all the characters' lives are basically the same: glamorous, dangerous, fraught with suspense, and untainted by dental bills, car trouble, hives, or dirty laundry.

DALLAS is not Masterpiece Theater. But is it really "worthless junk?" You bet it is! And I love it!

Selling the T ...

Perhaps, when the family is looking for Sunday dinner, I could get Aunt Bluebell to pop out of the refrigerator and suggest that they, "Make it for yourself, honey."

I might be able to use the technique with the Mariner, too. I could tape Around Town and send it to David with a subliminal suggestion that he "Pay McDonough More" between the items. You don't think he'll go for it? Gee, that's funny. The T is sure everybody's going to believe them.

Museum may get Beechwood weathervane

The old weathervane that decorated the Beechwood Fire Station before its closing may be housed in the town's Maritime Museum.

David Wadsworth, curator, and Connie Parker, president of the Historical Society, wrote the board last week asking if the selectmen would give the old weathervane to the society.

The weathervane is being stored, out of sight and out of the way, at town hall.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested the board should find out the value before disposing of the weathervane. She said it might be worth more than the board has the right to give away.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that if the weathervane is worth too much to give to the Historical Society, the town could put it out on loan.

An estimate is being obtained.

The paintings of Hingham artist, Elizabeth Burke, will be on exhibit at the Staircase Gallery of the South Shore Conservatory of Music, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham until Feb. 12.

Although she has had no formal art schooling, Burke has studied with a number of well known artists in the area, including: Priscilla Sibley, Robert Bliss, Joseph Burbank, Mary Reardon, Rosalind Farbush and portraits with Clement Micarelli. Her paintings have been shown in art festivals in Brockton, Hull, Plymouth, Pembroke and at the South Shore Arts Festival in Cohasset. She has received several awards for her painting including a first prize in the Hull Arts Festival in 1981. Elizabeth Burke's oils which include landscapes, still lifes, flowers and portraits are colorful, bright and reflect the cheerful and friendly nature of the artist.

Children's art

Art by Cohasset school children is on exhibit at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Perspective drawings and paintings by Tom Lucas' high school pupils focus on bicycles from all angles. Mechanical things both real and fantastic inspired colorful creations of other fifth graders.

This exhibit was arranged by Carolyn Horn, children's art exhibit chairman for the Friends of the Library in cooperation with the Cohasset School's art department. The show will remain in the children's room of the library until spring school vacation.

Selectman Laugelle plans to run again

Rumors continue to fly about this year's selectmen's race - early as it is.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle confirmed he will be a candidate during the board's meeting last week. He said he would have an official announcement ready soon.

James Lagrotteria, vice chairman of the advisory committee, announced his intentions right after the holidays. His campaign is already moving along.

No one's taken out papers for the office yet. Frances Marks, assistant town clerk, explained the papers won't be ready until Monday.

Laugelle is completing his first three year term on the board of selectmen. He works for Eastern Edison and is a former water and sewer commissioner.

It doesn't seem the race will be left to the two candidates who have gone public. There's a group in town still seeking a candidate to support.

And some say Dr. Patrick Morrissey, who made his first bid for office last year, will run again.

Morrissey has not been available for comment.

Meanwhile the campaign for the state representative's seat seems quiet despite the very early announcement by Hingham Planner Joan Oates that she will run against Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset.

Rep. Murray, always a highly visible politican, seems even more active than usual, putting out information on her activities in the legislature.

Oates won the endorsement of a Democratic caucus from the three town district.

Question on mussel harvesting

If anyone is allowed to dig mussels out of Little Harbor, local people will be, according to the consensus of the selectmen.

The board was approached by two men from the Cape last month with a request to dig mussels from the inner harbor.

Since then selectmen have received two letters in favor of clearing out the mussels plus several inquiries from residents who would like to harvest mussels.

Letters were entered into the record last week from John Hubbard and Thomas Williams, who both live in the Little Harbor area.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the board would have to put a limit on the number of licenses — if they are granted. He suggested locals should get first preference.

Arthur Clark, the board's secretary, said he has written to a marine biologist who had done some work on the harbor in the past, asking about the effects of the mussel harvesting.

He hasn't heard back yet from the expert, Richard Burton of Carver.

Clark wants to know the man's opinion on whether mussels will come back if cleared out of the harbor.

Little Harbor no longer has clam beds.

"What harm would it do if we gave the license," Selectman Mary Jane McArthur asked.

"Everybody says it wouldn't do any harm," Board Chairman Henry Ainslie replied.

Clark said he would try to contact Burton again and the board went on to other business.

School Board reviews Osgood budget

The school committee is in the process of looking hrough the school budget as presented by the superintendent.

This week budgets for the Joseph Osgood School, plus system wide special needs and administration, were presented for school committee review.

Although a Kindergarten teacher will be reduced from full to half time and one Grade 3 teacher let go, names were not discussed. The people involved have not yet been notified.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell asked reporters present at the meeting not to try to figure out the names from the budget available.

Teachers at Osgood will be moved from one class to another next year under Crowell's plan.

John Creamer, Osgood principal, detailed the reasons behind the $538,560 budget request for his school. The budget is up $32,,12 over current spending despite the staff reductions because of salary increases.

Crowell explained that raises seem higher than they were partly because last year's budget had the raise money hidden in an all district account. Raises were granted after town meeting last year. The new contract continues for one more year.

"So the money reflects last year's raise and the coming raise, plus step raises," the superintendent said.

Copies of the full budget were not released to the public.

Committee member Jack Langmaid asked why the time of the physical education teacher at Osgood had not been reduced.

He pointed out that Osgood and Deer Hill share music and art teachers. He suggested cutting the teacher to four/fifths of a fulltime job might provide adequate coverage for the school.

Creamer said the teacher was being used to handle special education classes, adaptive physical education, plus special courses for children relucant to participate in gym, or either overweight or underweight.

He said it is important to handle the problems in early years.

Langmaid complained that the teacher's job description had been expanded while cuts were being made in other areas.

Dr. Wallace named radiology chief

At a recent meeting announcing his appointment as chief of radiology at Brookline Hospital, Dr. James Wallace discussed his role as a radiologist in a community hospital setting.

"Because I work solo in a small community hospital, I am involved with almost every patient who is admitted. Virtually every patient has a chest x-ray as part of the diagnostic work up for example, and I interpret every film taken at Brookline Hospital."

Dr. Wallace explained that a chest x-ray is a standard part of a complete physical exam which gives information on the patient's organ systems which is not otherwise available to a physician and often provides vital clues as to a patient's condition.

Once the patient is admitted and the chest x-ray has been taken and interpreted, the radiologist continues to be part of the evaluation team.

"In the case of a patient with gastro-intestinal bleeding," said Dr. Wallace, "the radiologist has the primary responsibility to examine the entire gastro-intestinal tract followed by other diagnostic techniques."

Working at Brookline Hospital is like coming home says Dr. Wallace. "As a boy, I used to play ball on the lot where the hospital stands today. My mother, Mrs. Richard Wallace, still lives in Brookline." Dr. Wallace's father, a fourth generation physician, was a surgical consultant to the Allerton Hospital.

Dr. Wallace and his wife Linda are residents of Cambridge and Cohasset. They are the parents of James and Joshua Wallace.

Dr. Wallace is a graduate of Harvard Medical School and is the founder and director of the Cohasset Marine Biological Station. Before joining the staff at Brookline Hospital, Dr. Wallace was on the staff of Massachusetts General Hospital.

Hockey team clubs Duxbury, 10-1

The varsity ice hockey team beat Duxbury and Hull last week to remain undefeated, 10-0-1.

An improved Hull squad was defeated by the Skippers, 4-1, on Saturday. Earlier this season, in the December Lobster Pot Tourney, Cohasset triumphed over Hull 10-1.

Skipper Coach Tom Burnell described last Wednesday's contest with Duxbury as the 'biggest game in the league - so far". The Dragons arrived at the rink fired up with an identical 3-0 record in the South Shore League. However, Cohasset was able to contain the Dragon fire, 7-3, for ownership of first place in the SSL.

Jack McNeill scored a hat trick versus Duxbury while Sean Curran got the winning goal. Senior defenseman Dom Campedelli had a goal and three assists.

Junior center Danny Bowen and Don O'Neill also netted goals for Cohasset. Junior defenseman, Richie Evans assisted on four goals.

Skipper goalie Steve Bowen, a senior, turned away 20 shots on net while the Duxbury goalie made 42 saves.

The scoring was spread throughout three periods of play. Cohasset scored twice in both the first and second periods and added three more goals in the third. Duxbury scored one in the first and twice in the second period.

"I was very happy with the way we played, considering what a big game this was for us," said Burnell.

Against Hull, Ripley saved 18 shots on goal for the Skippers. Cohasset fired 32 pucks at the Pirate goalie.

Coach Burnell said Hull played a better game than in December. He also said that his team slept through most of the Hull game, which he described as a natural letdown following such a big win versus Duxbury.

Burnell was disappointed in the penalties his team collected late in the game. He said the penalties were probably due to the frustration of not being able to score in the final period. Hull held the Skippers scoreless and netted their lone goal in the third period.

Cohasset is undefeated 10-0-1 overall and 4-0 in the SSL.

Varsity wrestlers split, Sweeney stays unbeaten

The Cohasset High School wrestling squad beat Cape Cod Tech, 41-14, and lost to Plymouth-Carver and Norwell last week.

On Saturday at the Cape the wrestlers easily defeated Cape Cod Tech but fell victims to Plymouth-Carver, 31-19.

Coach John Leone said he was pleased with his team's performance at Norwell last Wednesday since the Skippers fared far better this time than earlier this season.

Senior co-captain Torin Sweeney, a 134 pounder, remained undefeated, 8-0 with his biggest win over last Norwell's state champ, Steve Cowden, by a score of 4-2.

Sweeney won the Norwell Christmas Tourney in which 12 area towns competed in. Though Sweeney injured his elbow during the Norwell victory he is expected back for action versus Scituate on Friday.

Senior co-captain J.T. Price has collected six wins this season and missed a couple of matches due to a knee injury. Price placed second in the Norwell Christmas Tourney at 157 pounds.

Senior Bob Donahue has lost only twice. He placed third at the Norwell Tourney and missed second by only a 1/2 point.

Junior Paul Igo has a 9-1 record in dual meet competition. He placed fourth at the Norwell Tourney.

Leone said freshman Kirk Sweeney, sophomore Lee Reid, and Ron Berenheim are looking strong for Cohasset.

The Skippers have a record of 1-4 in the South Shore League and 2-8 overall. Leone hopes that the South Sectional Tourney will be scheduled in Cohasset during February.

Seahawks win some, lose some

The Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset-Hull Seahawks managed only a split in their abbreviated six-game schedule for the week ending Jan. 10.

The Bantam B's started off the week on a sour note as they received a 6-0 white-washing from a strong Quincy squad.

The high-flying Bantam C's continued to roll as they nipped Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 3-1. Gregg Sandonato, Mike O'Donnell and Jay Cronin provided the scoring while assists were metered out to John McCarthy and Paul Weirzel.

The Pee Wee B's also won again this week, thumping Quincy 7-3 as Todd Fitzpatrick and James Mesakian each popped in a pair of goals. Winger paced the B's attack with two goals while Jon Mahoney, Mark Resnick (Breakaway), Michael Dundon and Michael Moog added single tallies. Paul Norton (two) and Resnick were credited with assists. Goalie Scott MacKay made several key saves especially early in the contest when the outcome was still in doubt.

The pace-setting Squirt C's were jolted by Plymouth 4-1. Winger Steve Boardman registered the lone Seahawk score.

Danny Pompeo picked up this week's "Playmaker" title as he set up four of his teammates in addition to denting the nets once himself. Brian Curran and Jamie Hoffman accounted for the other tallies.

The Pee Wee C's put up a good fight but eventually went down to defeat via the shutout route 2-0 to Whitman-Hanson-Kingston.

Coach Tom Hingston's Squirt B's upped their record to 10-2 and avenged an early season loss in the process by trouncing Braintree 6-1. Dennis Peacock from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Leafing through a current magazine can plunge the average housewife like me into the well-known January doldrums. Are we really supposed to believe that we would be more alluring if we looked like the curvaceous young nude entwined with a huge python? I prefer to think it's just their way of selling magazines, but then, as you read on, there's the inevitable article about superwoman, pictured with every hair in place, fashionably dressed and bubbling over with chatter of her success as a corporate executive, telling of her delight in raising 10 children and whipping up gourmet meals for weekend dinner parties. I don't suppose too manyof these paragons have ever set foot in a supermarket, where most of the young women I see are comfortably dressed in down parkas and jeans, mulling over the more prosaic problem of what to serve their family that night. Who could resist this simple dish of Janet Noonan's called

SCALLOPED FISH

1 T butter
1 onion, sliced
3 T green pepper, minced
1 T flour
1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper
1 c. milk
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1 lb. cooked, flaked haddock or scrod
1/4 c. grated American cheese
1/4 c. crushed cornflakes

Melt butter in saucepan. Add onion and pepper, saute for 10 min., stirring constantly and heating to boiling point after milk has been added. Add Worcestershire and cook 5 min. In 1½ qt. casserole arrange alternate layers of fish and sauce. Mix cheese and cornflakes and sprinkle over top. Bake at 400 degrees for 25 min., or until browned. Serves six.

"Gourmet" magazine can be depressing to those of us who serve the evening meal on Corel and not Spode and sip our wine out of something other than Waterford. Recipes for intricate pommes souffles, celeri remoulade and stuffed breast of pheasant are hardly everyday fare, but every once in a while you come across a recipe that doesn't require the better part of the day to prepare. With your fish casserole why not try this

CRANBERRY CLAFOUTI

In blender or food processor fitted with the steel blade blend 3/4 c. milk, 1/3 c. sugar, 2 large eggs, 3 T each of all-purpose flour and cornstarch, 1 T cognac, 1½ tsp. grated orange rind and 1/8 tsp. salt for 5 seconds. Turn off the motor, scrape down the sides of the container with a rubber spatula and blend batter for 30 seconds more. Pour 1/2 c. of the batter into a buttered 9" pie plate, bake in a preheated oven of 400 degrees for 4 min. or until it is set and sprinkle it with 1 T sugar. Spread 1 c. cranberries over batter. Sprinkle them with 1 T sugar and pour remaining batter over them. Bake the clafouti in oven for 25 min., or until puffed and golden. Transfer the clafouti to a rack to cool, sprinkle with sifted confectioners sugar and serve. with whipped cream. Serves 4.

Browsing through a tattered magazine in the dentist's office we get a clue as to why it is so crowded. Sugar is one of the culprits and we learn that all too often we are eating it without even knowing it. We are encouraged to read product labels, because sweeteners have many different names such as maltose, dextrose, corn syrup, fructose — sugar just the same. Consumer Reports found that a box of Quaker 100% Natural Cereal contained 21% sugar, Kellogg's Apple Jacks has 54% sugar, Dannon's Yogurt, 13.7%, ketchup, 29%, Coffeemate, 65.4% and Coco-Cola 8.8%. For those of us burdened with a sweet tooth, I found this recipe in the 1940 Marshfield's Woman's Club Cook Book, a favorite of the late Grace E. Ryder.

REAL SCOTCH SHORT BREAD

3/4 c. brown sugar
1/2 lb. butter
2 1/2 c. flour

Soften butter in warm place to mix well with flour and sugar. Knead on board with hands. Put in pan and prick with fork. Bake carefully. NOTE: As with so many old-time recipes, we are on our own when to comes to more explicit directions for making and baking. However, trusty "Fannie Farmer" is more explicit, directing us to roll out 1/4" thick and cutting in square or rounds. Prick with a fork. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 min.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. IV, no. 17 | wednesday, january 27, 1982 | 25 cents

Meeting scheduled for Friday night

Heights dump owners want Cohasset trash

The new owners of the Cohasset Heights dump will talk about taking the town's trash at a meeting scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 29, at town hall.

The new owners, Barry Frothers of Auburndale, haven't consumated the sale as yet. But selectmen have invited company officials in to discuss figures on what Cohasset would have to pay to bury it's trash in the private dump.

Town meeting is scheduled to reconvene Monday, Feb. 22, to deal with the dump question. State officials are demanding the town spend about a quarter of a million to continue the operation of the landfill. The state approved plan also calls for four full-time workers at the dump. One would handle security, one would handle recycling, two would operate landfill machinery.

Jim Tyerar, who has given a purchase and sales agreement to Barry Brothers, said the transfer of ownership is slated for Feb. 15.

He was asking $5 million to sell the land to the town or to a regional municipal system.

He said the price of the land "works out" to his offer.

Tyerar said he understands Barry Brothers would be willing to accept trash from the town. Officials of the company that now work in commercial rubbish pickup were not available.

Meanwhile members of the board of health are thinking about reducing the public dumping hours at the Cedar Street landfill after the state plan goes into effect to reduce some of the labor costs involved.

Barbara Kern, board member, told representatives of the advisory committee that the way to reduce the hours of two of the four proposed employees would be to limit the hours the dump is open to the public.

The dump is now closed Monday and Wednesday.

The board of health decided this week the commercial haulers would not be banned from the dump. The idea came up just a month ago as board members attempted to find ways to prolong the life of the landfill.

The board's engineer is now estimating that the landfill can continue until May or July without doing the work required by the state for expansion. Based on that information, Dr. C. Michael Bliss moved to "allow everyone who dumped there as of November, '81, to continue dumping willy, nilly."

Recycling is being encouraged as much as possible.

Kern said the board may institute mandatory recycling when it rewrites its regulations.

Members of the board of health recently discovered that 10 year old regulations call for trash from businesses to be left at the dump upon payment of a fee of 50 cents a cubic yard.

Harold Litchfield, highway department head, told the board the system had fallen into disuse because the tickets are no longer sold by the town's treasurer collector.

Gordon Flynt was left with the responsibility to sell the pink $1 each dumping tickets.

Marilyn Sweeney, board member, pointed out the revenue from the commercial trash used to provide $2,300 a year.

"Now it's down to $660," she said.

Litchfield explained that there was a time when someone with demolition materials bought the tickets from Flynt and took the unacceptable trash to the dump.

Dump operator Joe Laugelle refused to let the hauler into the landfill and the man went back to Flynt and complained.

According to Litchfield, after that Flynt refused to sell the tickets.

"Well, we'll take care of that," Dr. Bliss said. "We'll give him a letter saying we don't accept demolition materials."

Litchfield said later the tickets still left at the dump must have been purchased before that incident.

Roger Lincoln named acting fire chief

Captain Roger Lincoln is working the day shift with Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink this week to study the fire budget and administrative procedures.

Lincoln was unanimously chosen by selectmen last Wednesday to head the fire department when Piepenbrink retires in March until the appointment of a new fire chief.

"We just felt for continuity's sake that some senior member of the fire department should work with the chief for a month or so," said Selectman Mary Jane McArthur.

Chairman Henry Ainslie said the board hoped for a smooth transition and that Lincoln would be the logical one to handle such a transition.

Lincoln, a 12-year veteran of the department, was taken off his normal shift Monday and will work along side Piepenbrink for the next month. Piepenbrink plans to retire March 31, but will actually leave to take vacation time on March 3.

Piepenbrink said, "I'm looking forward to working with Roger and I think you've (selectmen) made a wise choice."

Ainslie said Lincoln was the entire board's choice.

Piepenbrink said he thought the transition would be smooth, "I see no problem. However, one shift would be short-handed with Lincoln on days. But that's nothing new," said Piepenbrink, "we've been short before."

Lincoln, 34, serves the department as training officer and as hazardous waste coordinator. He became captain in 1976.

"Roger is the sort of person who has always shown interest in improving himself," said Ainslie.

Lincoln told selectmen that the month transition period was a good idea and would result in the least interruption of the department. He said, "It's going to be a challenge, but it is what I've been working toward since I started here."

Good neighbor policy=FISH

By Patricia Desmond

From her home above the rocky ledge of Atlantic Avenue, Gertrude Hooper guides a lifeline of help to the community.

White-capped surf paints the rocks of her backyard salt white throughout the cold weather.

Meanwhile the chairman of Cohasset FISH keeps the organization moving.

There are about 100 volunteers including the back-up people and emergency drivers, according to her current tabulations.

When the number dwindles, Gertrude just takes out her Cohasset phone book and starts calling names and numbers she thinks may be likely volunteers. She guesses it takes 20 calls to get a driver.

She says that random calling for help seems to be the difference between her organization and the defunct chapters in Scituate and other nearby communities.

FISH provides emergency transportation, emergency babysitting, emergency housekeeping or other aid to Cohasset residents.

"We get calls from people outside Cohasset, but we have to be firm," Gertrude said. "We have all that we can do."

Most of the driving is to doctor's offices and hospitals.

In the fall, volunteers might offer foliage tours to nursing home patients. Sometimes nursing home patients are driven to the Music Circus.

"But there are some calls we've had to refuse," Gertrude said. One woman wanted FISH to drive her to the beauty parlor. That didn't come under the otherwise liberal guidelines.

"We do for people in the town what a good neighbor would do," she explained.

"We'd be willing to call people who live alone to check on them daily, but there hasn't been much of a call for that service," she said.

Gertrude has been running the program since 1974 when she took over from Althea Stamp.

"We always need new volunteers," she said. "Some days you'll be on the list and not get one call. Other days there could be closer to a dozen

Conway weighs congressional bid

Jack Conway, the realtor, will make up his mind soon on whether to run as a Republican against U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds.

Conway, whose business is headquartered in Hanover, told the Mariner this week that despite the rumors he had not made a commitment to the campaign.

He moderated a panel of statewide candidates for the Scituate Republican Town Committee over the weekend. Even there a reference to his possible candidacy went without his comment.

He said people have been urging him to run for a year and a half now.

"But I have a business to run," Conway commented. "I have 350 people working for me and the real estate market is having its problems right now."

Still Conway has been extremely active in the past year, speaking and working against casino gambling in the state and pushing the economy of the county.

He is on the board of directors of the Citizens Against Casino Gambling, CACG, and is president of the Plymouth County Development Council.

While Conway was noncommittal about his plans for the seat in Washington, people on his staff say the decision will be made soon.

He has until Feb. 17 to file signatures for the election. According to a Conway worker those signatures have not been gathered.

"That would have to happen soon," the staff member said.

Conway's real estate operation covers the South Shore from Milton to Cape Cod. There are 26 sales outlets with those 350 sales associates.

Conway began his real estate business 24 years ago last October. Before that he worked as a sports writer for what was then the Boston Herald Advertiser. His father worked as a sports writer before him.

He is a past president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and a past president of the Massachusetts Realtors.

He and his wife, Patti, who is a social worker for Catholic Charities in Brockton, live in Cohasset.

Cohasset's week ...

No name can be added to the voters list, except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake, after 10 p.m. Monday, March 15, at which time registration closes.

Last day for candidates to take out nomination papers is Friday, March 5, at 5 p.m.

All nomination papers shall be submitted to the Registrars of Voters for certification of the names of the signers on or before 5 p.m. Monday March 8.

Town Meeting is April 3.

Election is April 10.

Smoke detectors

Selectmen set a fee of $10 for a certificate of compliance for smoke detectors.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink said the fire department could set a maximum fee of $5 but that selectmen could raise it to $10.

Chief Piepenbrink said that a certificate of compliance regarding smoke detectors is necessary for transfers of all real estate used for habitation — before papers are passed.

He said there are three acceptable types of smoke detectors: battery, hand wired, and plug-in detectors with a locking device.

Piepenbrink said the $10 charge is not unreasonable, especially when an apartment building can be certified for the same fee.

calls.

Eleanor Cooney, a FISH volunteer, said there was a day last summer when she had nine calls.

She added that she was able to combine trips twice that day.

She said the real problem is being unsure how long a person may be kept waiting at a doctor's office.

"Some doctors are very good if they know there's a FISH driver," she added.

FISH makes ends meet through donations. The answering service is donated by a Mr. Batchelder from Weymouth. Three churches, St. Stephen's, St. Anthony's and the Congregational Church provide money for postage. The Unitarian Church provides the printing of the monthly calendars.

FISH was started in England. Cohasset was one of the first chapters in this country.

The name comes from the early Christian sign for Christ, although the organization is not a religious one.

Forest Ave. plans

Dr. Roger Pompeo's plans to create buildable lots on part of his property on Forest Avenue ran into some roadblocks at the board of health.

The board's main problem with the plans presented thus far seems to be the lack of a designated water supply for the two potential houses.

Dr. Pompeo said he planned to have well water supply the lots. The board's interpretation of the required backup data needed would mean the well would have to be built and producing before approval would be given the plan.

Cost of digging a well could be $5,000 to $7,000, Dr. Pompeo said.

The board members also wanted more detail on the plans as submitted.

Selectmen's briefs

Hull selectmen's executive secretary Chris McCabe has invited Hingham and Cohasset selectmen to meet with the Hull board regarding the potential hazards of aerial gypsy moth spraying.

Selectmen picked two residents last Wednesday night for jury duty. Joseph Dockray of 375 N. Main St. and George Travers of 65 Pleasant St. were chosen jurors for Tuesday, February 16.

Selectmen unanimously appointed JoAnn Coghill as dog officer. Coghill will replace Richard Yocum on Monday, February 1.

Selectmen voted, last Wednesday night, to allow the South Shore Arts Center to use the Cohasset Common for their Annual South Shore Arts Festival. Margaret Dillon, of the Arts Center, requested use of the pond side of the Common plus additional space for crafts people.

This year's Annual South Shore Arts Festival will run June 29 through July 6 with Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman as chairman.

Selectmen raised the gas mileage rate two cents last Wednesday night. Town department heads will now receive 20 cents per mile when using their personal vehicles on the job.

Proposed teacher layoffs

The plans for teaching staff at Osgood School call for moving many of the teachers into new grades, according to the copy of the school budget on file in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Jane Corry, Kindergarten teacher, goes from full-time to half-time. And there is no provision for a salary for Doreen Flynn now assigned to Grade 3.

Still the total Osgood budget increases from $505,848 to $538,560. As the school committee was told when the budget was presented recently, the main reason for the increase is wage increases in the already negotiated contract.

No vote on the budget as drawn up by the school administration has been taken by school committee.

Under the superintendent's budget proposal, one-half a Kindergarten teacher would be dropped. There are two Kindergarten teachers this year.

Three teachers are in open space this year. Next year there would be two with Shirley Tewksbury being moved to Grade 2.

This year there are two Grade 2 teachers, plus Metco-funded Elizabeth Fink. Next year there would be one Grade 2 teacher, plus Mrs. Fink. Delia DiBenedetto moves from Grade 2 to Grade 3 under the plan.

This year there are three Grade 1 teachers. Next year there would be four, with Dorothy Hibbard moving from Grade 2 to Grade 1.

Teachers not mentioned by name are listed in the same place in the Osgood budget this year as last year.

Carol Lash, who teaches Grade 4 at Deer Hill, is not listed in the proposed school budget for next year. She is not on tenure.

One teacher is to be cut from Deer Hill due to declining enrollment.

When asked about the budget, Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, said he has already talked to most of the people involved in the listing.

"What the school committee does with this is up to them," he said. "The school committee has the final say."

He explained that the budget was prepared using the most senior teachers. The budget would decrease somewhat if teachers other than those indicated were cut.

"We set a fiscal amount equal to what we needed to be covered," Crowell explained.

In next year's budget a teacher at the maximum level 1 will earn $22,507. A teacher at level 2 maximum will earn $24,744. A teacher at level 3 maximum will earn $25,863.

From looking through the budget, it seems most teachers are at maximum.

Pay increase

Murray raps MBTA assessments

The MBTA assessment placed on Cohasset, Hull and Hingham and the other 20 cities and towns is opposed by State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, (R-Cohasset) according to a release from her office.

"I have been opposed to this MBTA assessment since its inception," Mary Jeanette said.

"In my nine years as a selectman in Cohasset, I fought this charge on our taxpayers."

Rep. Murray filed legislation her first term as a state representative to eliminate Cohasset and Scituate from the MBTA rolls. As a legislator for Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, Murray has filed bills to remove Cohasset from the tax and to reduce the assessments for Hingham and Hull.

"Hingham's service does not assist the majority of people in that town and the service to Hull, especially in the winter months, has been far from satisfactory," Mary Jeanette stated.

Murray joined with other legislators last year to have the 22 cities and towns who receive no direct service from the MBTA removed from the assessment formula.

"When the MBTA pulled out of Hull, I added that town to the list," she said.

The South Shore legislator has filed petitions to remove Cohasset and Hull from the assessment and to reduce the Hingham figure.

"The assessments placed on the 23 cities and towns have multiplied, as can be seen below since 1966, when first established," she said.

The following figures show the rapid increase to taxpayers in her three towns.

	1966		1982
	Assess.	Actual Payment	Assess.	Actual Payment
Cohasset	$315	$315	$103,729	$102,400
Hingham	$832	$832	$350,500	$358,759
Hull	$381	$381	$167,800	$169,697

Rep. Murray said, "This is the type of mandate I have continuously opposed. This is one of the reasons for the high property taxes, we the taxpayers are paying."

LEGISLATION CONTROL

Murray co-sponsored a bill which would eliminate all "outside sections" in any appropriation bill.

"The use of 'outside sections' in the state budget and other appropriation legislation must stop," she said.

"For the past few years, these sections have been initiated to provide 'special interest' laws and to mandate costly programs on the taxpayer," she said.

Murray feels very strongly that these matters in the "outside sections" should be introduced as individual bills.

"In the Fiscal 1982 state budget outside sections 41 through 98 inclusive consisted of increased municipal fees," Murray continued. "Many of these fees are imposed on small business people too, so that the consumer will pay more for certain activities due to these increases," she said.

In the 1981 state budget, an outside section even reorganized the state's higher public education system. She feels that changes of such magnitude must be presented to the legislature as a bill and not hidden in the budget, according to a release from her office.

Another example of fee increases was the outside section of the 1980 state budget which placed the establishment of Registry of Motor Vehicle fees in the hands of the Secretary of Administration and Finance. We saw our registration and license fees soar due to this section," she stated. "This is very unfair to the people for they had no warnings."

The house passed the bill.

Liquor and video games don't mix

In a unanimous vote last Wednesday night, selectmen banned video and other game machines from Cohasset businesses that serve or sell liquor.

The ban was imposed following a discussion, of about ten minutes, on the motion of Selectman Mary Jane McArthur. Seven video game licenses which were up for renewal, plus two new requests for video machines were considered by the board.

McArthur said, "We need to set a firm policy." Treating each application separately presents a problem she said.

McArthur asked the board what kind of hardship would a ban on all video games cause?

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said regarding a decision like this, "You hate to cut into anyone's profit within the town."

Laugelle said, "We have a predicament here. How can you say 'No' and on what grounds?" He said game machines belong in an arcade-type place such as the Winter Gardens — which he described as a place for kids.

Just before the vote was taken Chairman Henry Ainslie reminded the board, "The volume of applicants has been getting out of hand."

The board's new policy states that all new game license applications from establishments which serve or sell liquor would be rejected and existing licenses won't be renewed. Ainslie said a grace period would be allowed for businesses with such games because they might have some commitments.

Cohasset Pizza House had submitted one video game license renewal and a request for an additional machine.

Pizza House manager, Debra Ryan said she withdrew her application for a beer and wine license, last week, because she didn't want to jeopardize the licensing of two video game machines for the restaurant.

Ryan said the selectmen's ban was unfair, "Not just for us, but for other restaurants also." Cohasset Pizza House opened eight years ago in the Jonathan Livingston Square.

Cohasset Winter Gardens with four pinball machines and four video games won't be affected by the new policy. However, the Greenhouse Restaurant, the Red Lion Inn and Papa Gino's won't be eligible to continue their games. Video game licenses were granted last year by selectmen for the Red Lion Inn and the Greenhouse Restaurant.

In November, upon the recommendation of Police Chief John DeBassio, selectmen denied Riddle's Food Mart a video game license. DeBassio felt the town should discourage young people from congregating in or around liquor selling establishments.

Beechwood weather vane on loan

The Beechwood Fire Station weather vane will be loaned rather than given away.

Executive Secretary to the Selectmen, Arthur Clark said the book value of the weather vane ranges between $400 to $600.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle last week moved to lend the weather vane to the Historical Society. However, Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said the board should first settle the disagreement on the number of Pratt history books which the society gave to the selectmen's office.

McArthur said the number of missing books involves cartons (36 books each), but wouldn't speak of specifics. She said, "We are not talking about a few books. We are talking about a few cartons." Laugelle suggested that the president of the Historical Society be invited to meet with selectmen concerning both the weather vane and the history books.

Insure Your IRA

You know that this year all employees can contribute up to $2,000 yearly to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) and deduct it from Federal taxable income. ($2,250 if non-working spouse is included; $4,000 for working couple.)

You also know that interest earned by your IRA is sheltered from all income taxes until you retire.

But do you know that the best IRA is with a bank that insures your fund, helps you to select a high interest investment, and charges no fee.

Quincy Cooperative is that kind of bank, and its friendly staff will be glad to answer any question you may have about setting up your own IRA. Call us at 479-6600.

Definitely a fun game to watch, some of us wondered about our own abilities on the court, and there was some talk about "getting out there and showing how it used to be done." Having just had an experience which will probably not go down in the annals of skating history, I, for one, will have to give the idea a lot more thought.

☐Out of every 10 calls for frozen pipes during the frigid winter, eight are because the thermostats have not been set appropriately, says, John Lennon, of Alco Oil Company. And he should know because he and the members of his company have been answering those calls.

Evidently, many people are under the misconception that just because they have a wood stove, they can shut down the heat. This definitely is not the case, says John, and results in a good deal of frustration and expense to the homeowner. He strongly recommends setting the thermostat 1 or 2 degrees above the temperature to be achieved by the wood stove. So, for instance, if the wood stove is to heat a room to 65 degrees, the thermostat should be set at 66 or 67 degrees.

Democrats launch new search for rep. candidate as Oates drops out

The democratic field leading to a challenger gainst Republican incumbent state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is wide open following the withdrawal of caucus candidate Joan Oates of Hingham.

Citing too little time to devote to her campaign, Oates issued a press release Monday withdrawing her candidacy.

"I have really found that my commitments to getting a master's degree in public administration at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, the Hingham Planning Board and the Massachusetts Federation of Planning Boards has not allowed me enough time to give or to run a campaign," said Oates.

She also serves as vice president of the Massachusetts Federation of Planning Boards.

She expressed thanks to her campaign committee and other Democrats who endorsed her at the Nov. 3 caucus.

Her withdrawal has left Third Plymouth District Democrats from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset muttering if another caucus should be held.

Janice Colby of Hingham, who helped organize the Nov. 3 caucus, told the Mariner some members have mentioned to her that another caucus should be called.

"The purpose of the caucus was to get a headstart on the campaign. We have lost that rationale, now that nomination papers will be available in February," said Colby.

About eight members from Hull, 10 from Cohasset and 32 democrats from Hingham attended the caucus. Colby termed the caucus, "a broad-based group."

She plans to poll the other caucus members about the proposal for another caucus.

Colby and Oates have not heard of anyone interested in running for the position. Oates added she wanted to announce her decision early "to leave it open for someone else to run."

Meanwhile, former state Rep. Caroline J. Stouffer, who said in September she did not plan to run for the Democratic nomination, may reconsider the decision at the end of January.

Busy serving jury duty, Stouffer told the Mariner she will "sit down at the end of the month and think about it. I will be consulting other people to see what they feel, and if they would be behind me or somebody else."

"Jury duty is exciting but exhausting and tiring. I don't want to rush into it and I haven't had time to think about changing my decision," she added.

Stouffer resigned from four Hingham committees and declined appointment to a fifth. Stouffer resigned from the Shipyard-Route 3A (Lincoln Street Bridge) and Back River Committees as well as the Industrial and Development Commission.

She resigned as the selectmen's representative to the Massport (airport noise) and declined appointment to the Commuter Boat Committee.

In her resignation letter Stouffer said her reasons were "entirely of a personal nature" and did not concern the town, the particular committees or board members.

Stouffer said since serving as a jury member she has not had enough time "to rethink my decision. I will do so and things could change, I wouldn't shut out that possibility."

Stouffer announced her decision in September to allow democrats to unite early.

"I do believe it is very important for democrats to be behind each other and have a united group behind the candidate," she said.

Greg O'Meara, head of the Hingham Democratic Town Committee, said Oates' decision will not affect the support of his board since committee by-laws preclude the board from a pre-primary endorsement.

"We are separate from the Third Plymouth Democrats although many of the committee members were interested in the caucus," he said.

The committee will endorse a democratic candidate after the September primary.

"As of the moment, I haven't heard of anyone interested. Joan was the only candidate at the caucus. But with time, some other people might be interested," said O'Meara.

Delayed school opening procedure

By Eugene Crowell
School Superintendent

Due to the frequency of storm days this winter, I am establishing a Delayed School Opening Procedure in the hope of more closely maintaining our published school calendar and to afford the Highway Department an opportunity for additional time for snow removal or sanding.

When a storm hits late in the evening it is necessary for them to concentrate on the major arteries for the safety of all and for the needs of the business community. Therefore, in storms similar to last Thursday's (Jan. 14), an hour delay in school opening would allow sidewalks, school yards, parking lots, and bus terminals to be cleared.

With the lateness of this year's calendar, it is imperative not to lose additional school days when a delayed opening would make it safe for your youngsters to attend classes. I, therefore, intend to put a Delayed School Opening Procedure into operation for the winter months for the balance of the school year.

On a storm day when it is possible to have our schools ready later at any given morning, our bus route schedule will be moved back by one hour. School will recess at the regular time and in a delayed opening schedule all morning kindergarten classes will be cancelled while second session kindergarten classes will meet on their regular schedule.

The fire station signal will be ONE LONG BLAST FOLLOWED BY THREE SHORT BLASTS AND THEN THREE SHORT BLASTS AGAIN (1-3-3) and the radio stations will carry a delayed opening announcement on the regular cancellation stations.

Mariner Survey

Officials and newspaper people spend time sitting around trying to second guess the will of the electorate.

Town officials are often seen treading carefully when they are sure they know what the public wants. Much of the time, they are left to work without the benefit of public opinion.

We've put together a questionnaire on the issues that come quickly to mind in the arena of local politics. Residents, whom local government pledges to serve, are asked to respond to the list by marking off "yes," "no" or "I don't care."

Please cut out the survey and mail it to the Cohasset Mariner, P.O. Box 71, Cohasset, Mass. 02025, or drop it off at Colonial Pharmacy in the Village. Results will be published.

1. Should the town keep the present school bus system? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

2. Should the town hire a commissioner of public safety? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

3. Should the town upgrade to meet state regulations for the present landfill operation? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

4. Should the high school auditorium be renovated? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

5. Should prams at the town dock be charged $25 a year to tie up? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

6. Should private floats pay a town harbor user fee? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

7. Should the North Cohasset fire station be sold to the highest bidder? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

8. Should the town push for an access to Wompatuck State Park opposite Winter Gardens? _____yes _____no _____I don't care Administration costs should decline...

Letter

To the Editor:

It is with great interest that we find the Cohasset School Budget for 1982-83 comes to $3,712,241 which if approved, will come to over 55 percent of the entire budget of the town. From all indications it will exceed the limits set by the Advisory Board by almost $102,000.

In examining the various expenditures it was noticed that while school enrollment is on the decline, administrative costs continue to increase. In referring to administrative costs — we refer to non-teaching positions and their clerical help. This does not include any custodial, cafeteria or bus drivers positions. It is also to be noted that most administrative positions carry a six weeks paid vacation. While the position of the guidance department head is considered administrative, his renumeration is not in the following figures. Also not included are the costs of fringe benefits for these people such as life insurance and hospitalization.

Total administrative costs come to $368,410 and are made up as follows:

Joseph Osgood School: 1 principal, 2 secretaries.

Deer Hill School: 1 principal, 1 secretary.

Jr. Senior High School: 1 principal, 1 ass't. principal, 4 secretaries.

Special Education: 1 supervisor, 1 secretary.

Administration: Superintendent, Business Manager, 3 secretaries.

The costs per school, special education, and administration are as follows:

Joseph Osgood School — $54,270.

Deer Hill School — $47,424.

Jr. Senior High School — $105,904.

Special Needs — $48,304.

Administration — $112,508.

The total projected school budget is $3,712,000. Administrative salaries are indicated at $368,410 which means that 10 percent of our school budget goes to non-teaching positions, or $260.54 per student based on enrollment of 1414 students.

It would seem that with declining school enrollment and reduction in number of teachers that administration costs should decline as well. A profit-making business would soon be in a poor financial position with high administrative costs, such as our Cohasset School System has.

The Tom O'Neill candidacy

By Patricia Desmond

Tom O'Neill, governor-in-waiting, walked into the office last week. One segment of his campaign right now is concentrating on granting interviews to newspapers. Another part of the campaign is working to build a statewide network. Another is looking for a chance to debate the other two Democrats who want to control that elegant Third Floor office in the State House next year.

O'Neill is running a campaign that could be called revolutionary. He says he's the first candidate to attempt to run on the issues - which he points out is different from running on promises.

He's running without the backing of any of the traditional institutions.

Some of the issues he's brought up so far have worried teachers unions, the Democratic leadership, the so-called Young Turks of the State House (who see themselves as anti-establishment, too), civil service appointees, on and on.

Those ideas include state standards for education; the abolition of civil service; a new tax program that shifts the burden off the lower and middle income groups; utilization of abandoned housing for the poor.

Talking to O'Neill is like listening to the winds of change.

He says he's the first candidate to run a campaign with a tax program in hand. And if there was another governor-to-be that admitted there was a need to expand some taxes, I can't remember his or her name.

The pleasant part of his tax proposal is that while he is advocating a one percent increase in sales tax, he is - in the same plan - providing relief for cities and towns (meaning the property tax) and adding a few breaks on the state income tax.

O'Neill says the last few elections in this state have been without winners.

"Ed King didn't win in '78, Dukakis lost. Mike Dukakis didn't win in '74, Frank Sargent lost.

"People have been voting for the lesser of evils.

"If something different doesn't happen soon people will be dumping tea in Boston Harbor."

So there is the lieutenant governor sitting in the Mariner office, frowning at the bitter taste of coffee brewed by the publisher, explaining why he thinks some basic tenets need be shaken.

He promises to replace civil service with a merit system. People would take a test before entering the service of state government.

O'Neill points out that most jobs in government are awarded provisionally.

"Civil service is a myth," O'Neill says. He talks about wanting to motivate state workers by giving them the chance to be promoted for work well done. He says the system would be based on strong collective bargaining.

Why doesn't he have the support of the more liberal politicians?

"They thought they saw a winner in Dukakis," he says, adding that "Politicians don't like change. I'm talking about doing things differently from the way they've been done.

"The way to get a job with the state wouldn't be by calling your representative. It would be by taking a test."

"Once you see yourself as part of a system, it's too easy to go against change."

But O'Neill, who long ago was divorced from a

16. Should something be done to regulate the color and/or style of signs in town? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

17. Should an earth removal bylaw be adopted to prevent town gravel from being sold to out-of-towners? _____yes _____no _____I don't care.

position of authority in the King administration despite his constitutional title, was also a part of the Dukakis government.

"Are you asking me when I saw the light?" O'Neill replies to a question on his past connections.

"I was the last one out the door with Mike Dukakis. But I saw what the voters were saying. I heard what they were saying when they voted for Proposition 2½. I heard what they said when they voted against Dukakis so overwhelmingly."

He says his administration would be different. He would not base the whole government on people from the Kennedy School who have theories of how and why government works.

He said he plans to bring in successful people from all segments of society.

"I don't see anything wrong with putting a consumer oriented person on the DPU commission (Department of Public Utilities)," he said.

He also says he would take on the MBTA as the first agency in need of change.

Private buses would be allowed to take over MBTA routes wherever possible, under his guidance.

"Service goes down as fares go up," O'Neill has a few ideas for turning that around.

"There are sacred cows that need to be challenged," he said.

The O'Neill plan

The Tom O'Neill revenue plan includes these highlights:

1. An increase in local aid of 20 percent or $300 million over the $1.5 billion in this year's budget.

2. An increase in the number of services subject to a sales tax. Public relations, computer programming, consultants, and other business services would be subject to a sales tax for the first time.

3. An increase in the sales tax from the current 5 percent to 6 percent with the new revenue being committed by law to go to cities and towns.

4. Giving each single taxpayer a tax credit of $70 (to be deducted from the state income tax owed) for paying sales taxes. Each taxpayer filing a joint return would receive a sales tax credit of $140.

5. Allowing any individual with an income of $5,000 or less and any couple or family with an income of $10,000 or less to pay NO state income tax.

6. Cutting the tax on unearned income, (like stock dividends) from 10 percent to 5 percent.

7. Eliminating the tax on capital gains that are reinvested in Massachusetts.

8. Allowing an individual to earn $500 in interest on savings and a couple to earn $1,000 without paying any taxes on it.

9. Tax alcohol, cigarettes and hotels with a sales tax instead of with an excise tax.

10. Tax savings banks the same way as other banks.

Lothrop paintings to be restored

The Cohasset Historical Society has received notification of approval of a grant of $300 by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a State agency, for the restoration of two 19th Century "American primitive" paintings, one of which has been judged professionally to have far better coloring than any of the paintings in the famed Karolik Collection of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

"We very much appreciate this help from the Council toward the cost of restoring these paintings whose importance we have only recently determined through consultation with the Museum of Fine Arts," Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, president of the Society stated. "When fully restored by the experts at the Museum, we will certainly display them prominently in one of our facilities."

Total cost of the restoration has been estimated by the Museum to be approximately $600, half of which will be contributed by the Council.

Both paintings have an association with the Lothrop family, one of whose members, Caleb Lothrop, built in 19th Century dwelling at 14 Summer St., Cohasset, which the Society has been restoring over the past several years.

One of the paintings is a framed painting of the Lothrop-Whittington House at Sandy Cove, Cohasset, and has been hanging in the Historic House Museum in the Village since it was given to the Society in 1970 by the estate of George Melcher, whose wife, Julia Weston Bates, is a great-great granddaughter of Deborah Lothrop, the daughter of Col. Thomas Lothrop, the family patriarch.

The other painting was acquired by the Society only last September after having been found rolled up in an attic. It is a memorial painting to John Jacob Lothrop, 1763-1823, and to his won, Thomas, who drowned at sea in 1819. It is of this painting that Mrs. Sue Reed of the Curatorial Systems of the MFA, has stated that the coloring is far better than anything in the famed Karolik Collection at the Museum.

The Society has a third painting of the same period, whose restoration would be more difficult and costly, but has not yet been awarded assistance toward its restoration. This is a framed memorial painting of Mrs. Susannah Stoddard done by Susan Stoddard.

In all three paintings, a tree and full-rigged ship are prominent and these features, as well as the figures, are in the familiar stylized manner of American primitives. It is though possible that Susan Stoddard was the artist in all cases, but the two to be restored are not signed nor the artist identified.

The three paintings were submitted to the Boston Museum for an estimate of the cost of restoration and detail of what needed to be done. In the case of the Lothrop-Whittington House painting, it will be necessary to remove it from a cardboard backing to which it has been pasted, to remove surface dirt, to neutralize damaging acidity and to reinforce tears with Japanese tissue. The rolled up Lothrop Memorial painting will have to flattened, cleaned and reinforced. All work will be done at the Museum of Fine Arts.

Selectmen's briefs...

Selectmen voted last Wednesday night to send a requisition to the Civil Service, to fill two vacancies on the fire department.

Due to three retirements, the fire department staff will be reduced from 25 to 22 in March. Chief Charles Piepenbrink said the roster calls for 24 fire fighters.

Selectmen awarded a contract to Fairmont Press Inc. of Rockland for printing the warrants and town reports.

The cost of the town report is 1100 copies at $18.65 per page (about 232 pages). Three thousand copies of the warrant will be printed.

Selectmen will meet with the town's department heads at town hall on Thursday, Feb. 11 at 8 p.m.

Selectmen approved a transfer of about $1,800 for 12 weeks of training for the department's two new police officers.

Advisory Board approval is also needed.

The course will begin at the Fall River Academy on Friday, January 29 and run five days a week till April. Police Chief John DeBassio recommended to selectmen that the town send both officers for training, now, so that they would be ready in time for the summer demands. He also said the town would save in regards to mileage ($90 per week) if both officers attended the academy for the same semester.

The $1,800 will pay the costs of mileage, ammunition and paper supplies, athletic equipment, tear gas and meals.

SNEAK ATTACK — Cohasset's Baron Salvador catches a Hanover stickhander from behind and battles for the puck.

PRE-GAME LOOSENING — Junior goalie Mark Brown stretches out prior to Hanover game.

CELEBRATING A GOAL — Junior center Danny Bowen (no. 11) rejoices after scoring for Cohasset. The Hanover goalie fell backwards into the cage while attempting the save.

AT POINT BLANK RANGE senior goalie Scott Ripley comes through with a crucial save. The puck rebounded below the right skate of Hanover's Joe Becker. Cohasset broke a 1-1 tie with three goals in the third period for the 4-1 victory over the Indians. The Skippers are undefeated, 11-0-1 overall and 5-0 in the South Shore League.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY

Members of the Senior Class have been participating in tryouts for Li'l Abner. Ninety-one students have read lines, sung and signed up for back-stage work. Seventy-seven students participated in dance try-outs this past Monday. Class members have been pleasantly surprised at the extent of their talent, versatility and enthusiasm. Refrains of "Namely You" and "Jubilation T. Cornpone" were heard drifting throughout the corridors. Director, Beth Goff, is working on a cast list which should be released soon.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPT. - Mr. Dorr

The high school boys' Ping Pong Tournament was held on Tues., Jan. 19th. It was a single elimination tournament with the 16 top players participating. Bob Tis, last year's tournament winner, put on a dazzling show to defeat Mike Brady in a tough battle. Mike put the pressure on and caused the finals to go to three games. Third prize was won by Rob Walen, who defeated Dan Bowen in an overtime game. Ribbons were presented to all the winners.

SOCIAL STUDIES DEPT. - Mr. Sheehan

Two C.H.S. juniors, Justine Hoffman and Paul Johnson, are presently participating in the Mass. Dept. of Education Student Government Day Program. They were chosen by their fellow juniors in an election held last November. Justine was elected as Cohasset's official delegate. Paul was chosen as the local alternate delegate. The Student Government Day Program was mandated by legislation enacted by the Mass. General Court in 1947. During their participation in the program, Justine and Paul will acquire an in-depth knowledge of the workings of their state government. After attending several meetings and seminars in the State House, the two students will actually participate in state government. During a State House drawing, elected delegates are chosen to fill the shoes of important state officials, from governor to members of the state legislature. Friday, April 2, 1982 is Student Government Day at the State House. Justine and Paul will take an active role in the day's proceedings.

BRAINTWISTERS

The most recent winners in the C.H.S. library's Braintwister Contest are tenth graders Sandy Erickson, Katie Smart and Margaret Kearney. Sandy solved the longstanding puzzle about the identities of the figures in six colonial portraits. All of the portraits were of George Washington through the eyes of various artists. Sandy found her answer in American Heritage Magazine. METCO Co-ordinator Philip Burrows has contributed several puzzles in the area of black history. Katie Smart and Margaret Kearney solved the first of these, which asked, "What is Temple's Iron?" By locating the book, Eight Black American Inventors, they found that Temple's Iron was an innovative whaling harpoon invented by Lewis Temple of New Bedford. Braintwister winners are rewarded with gift certificates to the Strawberry Parfait. The current Braintwister asks, "What is a Hoover blanket, a Hoover apron and a Hoover hog?"

C.H.S. DEBATE TEAM

The C.H.S. Debate Team is presently competing in the South Shore Debate League. After a late start this year, the Cohasset Debaters are now engaged in a full schedule of league debates. The national debate topic for the 1981-82 school year is: "Resolved that the federal government should establish minimum educational standards for elementary and secondary schools in the United States." The C.H.S. Debate Team includes: Sue Bird, Patty Walsh, Lance Trainor, Ciarmuid O'Connell, Tina Birmann, Chris Barrett, Fred Zotos, Sean O'Connor, Paul Dormitzer, Meg McCullough, Patrick Walsh, Karen Howley, Julie Hoogeveen and Sue O'Rourke. The debate coach this year is Mr. Edward Sheehan, Chairman of the Social Studies Department at C.H.S. Mr. Sheehan is also Treasurer of the Debate League. During the debate year, which extends from September to March, the Cohasset team two debates each month plus a debate tournament. The team travels to East Bridgewater High School and New Bedford High School for its debates.

American Field Service finalists

Five Cohasset High School students have been accepted as finalists in the American Field Service international/intercultural program. Holly Grant, Amy Urmson, and Paul Dormitzer are finalists in the year-long program; Justine Hoffman and Amy Murphy, in the summer program. Holly has already been placed with a family in Uruguay and will soon leave on her international adventure. The other students, who depart in the summer, must wait until spring to learn of their placements.

While most AFS chapters send only one or two students abroad, Cohasset is unusual in that all five candidates passed the highly selective screening process. After submitting lengthy applications, they were interviewed first by a local AFS committee and then by a regional committee of former AFS students.

Watching for Joan Webster

By Lois Martin

It certainly gets your attention like it's supposed to. There on page 8 of Friday's Boston Globe, where ordinarily one would expect to see a sale on pianos, or furs or furniture, there was a picture of Joan Webster.

I saw it. And I don't know where Joan is. So I had to pass it along here. Because we need to help find her; at least we have to try.

Joan Webster is the Harvard graduate student who headed back to school after Thanksgiving, apparently got to Logan and hasn't been seen since.

Her parents have put up a $10,000 reward for "information leading to the present whereabouts of missin Harvard gradua student."

PATCHES

We didn't need to know of the reward to be unhappy about her disappearance last November. And there's no need of it now to have our immediate empathy.

It doesn't matter that Joan's a graduate student at a swell New England school. It is simply that a young woman, like so many we send out of here to get a college education, left home after a nice Thanksgiving and disappeared. We can't stand for that. We have our boys and girls, thousands of them who were here for the holiday and now are back where they belong, at jobs or universities.

We have to do what we can to find out what happened to Joan, to help the Websters, as we'd help one another here if one of ours, one of the crowd that goes to the Thanksgiving Day football game and helps cook Christmas dinner, didn't come home.

She has long brown hair, a wholesome smile, brown eyes. Information her parents provided said she was born Aug. 19, 1956.

If you think you saw her Nov. 28 or if you know of anything that would be helpful to the Websters in finding out what happened to Joan, call 1-800-225-7408, or call the State Police or Saugus Police.

$10,000 REWARD MISSING PERSON

For information leading to the present whereabouts of missing Harvard graduate student

Joan L. Webster

DATE OF BIRTH: AUG. 19, 1956
SOC. SEC. NO. 138-38-0024
HEIGHT: 5'3"
WEIGHT: 112 LBS.
HAIR: DARK BROWN, LONG, STRAIGHT
EYES: DARK BROWN

Disappeared Saturday evening, November 28, 1981. Last seen at Boston Logan Airport at the Eastern Airlines terminal wearing long, brown, chesterfield-style coat, black worsted suit, red print blouse.

Persons having any information are requested to call: In Massachusetts—
1-800-952-7408

In Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—
1-800-225-7600

The reward will be paid to the person or persons who, in the opinion of cognizant law enforcement authorities, has furnished the information leading to the present whereabouts of Joan L. Webster. This reward will expire January 19, 1983.

All information will be kept in strictest confidence and identities of callers protected.

Donald M. Peters, Chief of Police
Saugus, Mass. 01906

The disappearance of any person is a loss to us all. We joke, in families where there's a lot of coming and going of college kids, about how good they look coming in the door and how great they look going out again.

But we know the best part of seeing them going is the joy of looking forward to seeing them next trip, hearing how things are going, filling them in on our news.

And that inherent right of a family has been stolen from the Websters and replaced by horror, unerring anguish. Let's look for Joan around here or someone who knows something helpful. We fellow parents, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles will do what we can, at the least care. Were you at Logan Nov. 28, or do you know someone else who was, at Eastern Airlines...Think about it.

Atty. John Ridge of Cohasset recently presented a new set of Massachusetts Annotated Laws to the Cohasset Police Association. Accepting the gift from Atty. Ridge is Sgt. John Rhodes

'Tickets to the Sun' at Arts Center

At the opening reception for "Ticket to the Sun," the South Shore Art Center's Third Annual All New England Juried Show, James O'Neil of North Truro was awarded Best of Show with his entry entitled "Wellfleet Beach." Several other awards were also given. Winners were chosen from among 280 entries, 93 of which were accepted. Entries came from Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Boston, northwest of Boston and south of Boston through Cape Cod.

"Wellfleet Beach" is an egg tempera depicting the lively figures of children frolicking on the beach. O'Neil used tiny brush strokes to create an exciting juxtaposition of color.

The Marion Huse Award went to John Diauto of Pembroke with his black and white photograph "Harvest Moon." Diauto creates a dramatic mood through the use of sharp contrast in this photograph of a wagon under a moon partially hidden by clouds.

The Grumbacher Silver Medal Award went to Elaine Wentworth of Norwell with her boldly painted watercolor "Littoral Zone."

"Tickets to the Sun" may be seen at the South Shore Art Center through Jan. 29. For further information, please call the Art Center at 383-9548 between 12 and 4, Monday through Friday.

Fire Facts

For years, many schools, hospitals, restaurants, auditoriums, and other public places have been painted on the inside with specially formulated paints that help retard the spread of smoke and flames. Even though most experts agree that they would certainly be as valuable there as in public buildings, flame retardant paints are hardly ever used in private homes and apartments.

Flame retardant paints would be especially valuable in homes, where hallways and staircases are the only means of escape. The use of these paints could give occupants more time to escape by retarding the spread of flames and smoke.

All of these paints are intumescent coatings. As soon as they come into contact with an open flame or with heat of 300 to 400 degrees, they instantly puff up or swell and form a thick layer of insulating foam that consists of millions of tiny bubbles or cells. The insulating foam chars almost immediately, but it does not burn. Continued exposure to flames and high heat will eventually consume it or break it down.

In addition to slowing the spread of flames, intumescent paints also help to reduce the amount of smoke generated, at least in the early stages, as well as the amount of heat generated. Smoke can often asphyxiate occupants of a house or apartment before they are ever affected by the flames (that is why smoke detectors are so important).

To obtain full protection, make sure the flame retardant paint you buy bears the U.L. (Underwriters' Laboratories Inc.) Label, indicating it has been tested and approved. Also, be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions for preparation and application of flame retardant paint.

Pond Street plans run into opposition

Plans for 100 Pond Street — the first cluster development to move into the hearing stage in town — ran into some opposition last week as planning board members conducted the start of a hearing.

The hearing continues on Wednesday, Feb. 3, at town hall when more details will be discussed.

The plans call for a 39 unit development on a 23 acre parcel. There would be 27 single family homes and four three unit buildings, according to the proposal of Frederick Thayer.

Concerns from neighbors include the location of some of the buildings near property lines and potential drainage problems.

The board of health discussed the plans briefly and plan to send the planning board a letter detailing their concerns. Approval of the board of health would be required for the planned septic system.

Plans also need approval of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The buildings, near a wetland, would be woodframe. Units would be sold at $135,000 and up.

Heart Sunday drive

One hundred fifteen Cohasset residents will brave the cold on February 14 in the annual Heart Sunday drive. These volunteers will be calling on their friends and neighbors to support the fight against heart disease, the nation's number 1 killer.

Heart Sunday volunteers can return their kits to Margaret Santacroce Heart Treasurer, at the Cohasset Savings BAnk, 13 Elm Street, Cohasset. Margaret Santacroce will be receiving kits during regular banking hours before and after Heart Sunday.

McKinnon office hours

Sen. Allan R. McKinnon (D-Weymouth) will have a member of his staff available to speak to constituents at the various times and locations listed below for the month of February.

If these are inconvenient, please call his office at 722-1646 and a staff member will be glad to arrange another time for an appointment.

Cohasset, Thursday, Feb. 11, 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., Town Hall; Hingham, Thursday, Feb. 11, 11 a.m. to noon, Town Hall; Marshfield, Monday, Feb. 8, 8 p.m., Town Hall; and Scituate, Tuesday, Feb. 16, 7:39 to 10 p.m., Town Hall.

Notice

Breathes there a man with a diet so dead?

By Lois Martin

Show me a man who's been on a diet for two weeks, and I'll show you someone who has suffered, someone who has looked to the core of his soul for the true meaning of life, someone who has decided that meaning is food.

I'll show you Publisher David Cutler, a man who started the new year at 230 pounds and intends, by the pain and pangs of sacrifice, to end it at 185.

Cutler, as of this writing, has naturally not attained his goal, though some have complimented him on a more gaunt expression. Herein is a biographical diary of two weeks of a custom-honed diet. (In fairness to the diet and its founder the reader should be aware that some of the records were conducted as the interviewer ate her McChicken lunch (lots of mayonnaise).

In his words, then, the diary of one man's diet.

Monday, Jan. 4... I weigh more than I ever have in my life. I've reached grand obesity. (230 pounds, 5' 7½") So I'm on a Spartan regimen. It's a variety of the Scarsdale, less than 1000 calories a day.

Monday I had a piece of steak, coffee and low calorie drinks. I cut out the cream in my coffee. That saves me a lot. Do you realize the calories you get when you put cream in the coffee?

Last night I had a little cheese spread stuff that I got for Christmas...great for crackers. (How many?) Well, 2 to 4...maybe 4 to 6. (Put your money on 6. Ed.)

Tuesday, Jan. 5 recap... I had two orange slices, steak at night, a little salad with cheese, no dressing. I didn't even finish the salad. The dog ate the lettuce. I don't understand it. I feed him three times a day and he's still rifling for anything. (Sharp-minded people will start to see an analogy here. Ed.)

On Wednesday, Jan. 6... I had a piece of protein bread and another one for lunch. For supper I had two hamburgers, ketchup, no grease, carrots...another piece of protein bread with a LITTLE peanut butter on it. You know weight charts are a lot of baloney. I haven't started to exercise yet but I intend to. My father bought me a Scarsdale book. I really wanted pink grapefruit, not the white.

...Last night there was this ad on from Burger King. It showed mozarella cheese. The girl kept saying, "Aren't you hungry?" I wanted to get up out of bed, get dressed and go get something. Instead I had some bread and peanut butter. Peanut butter's good for you, isn't it?

You wouldn't believe the incredible attention to food. It's on billboards, television, magazines, it all jumps out at me.

I've made a chart to keep track of things. If this had been Dec. 31 I'd have eaten that box of candy someone brought in.

Oh, and I had a little macaroni and cheese, just cleaning up.

Thursday, Jan. 7 update.... I had a piece of protein bread. The night is killing me. I don't have enough to do. At 4 I had an egg and protein bread. That's okay. At 7 I had roast beef, quite a bit, beans, no butter...two slices protein bread and peanut butter...no weight loss yet, though.

Friday, Jan. 8.... I was down to 225. At 1:40 I had half a grapefruit. I'm great during the day.

But I like casseroles. I used to go to Hubbard's (Cupboard, a place with food) and I'd get an Almond Joy.

But I'm very optimistic, really psyched up. I'm losing weight. I can lose very quickly. By next week I'll be down to 220. I love peanut butter. I intend to look better at 39 than I did at 37 or 36 and I'm going to exercise.

I got started on this because while I was in Texas I ran into a couple of floor length mirrors. I was ap palled. After I lose eight I'm quitting smoking. I smoke two packs a day...("One of which he buys..." Fellow Worker.)

The Week, Jan. 9 & 10.... I had steak and stuff. Then I had a doughnut, two plain. They were fresh and I'd just given Mittel a ride home. So I said, "You might as well give me two (doughnuts, any indefinite sentence should be assumed to end with a food item. Ed.)

Sunday was the day I cheated. I had four chicken salad sandwiches with plenty of mayonnaise. That was all I had. I guess I had scrambled eggs at night with the English muffin. I said, "What the hell. I've cheated, I might as well enjoy it."

Monday, Jan. 11... I've been very good, steak at night, vegetables, a Big Mac for lunch.

Tuesday, Jan. 12... Protein bread, cheese, two hamburgers, a little macaroni and cheese, there happened to be some, half a turkey sandwich. I figure you need stuff like that during the day when you work. And I'm back to 223.

Wednesday, Jan. 13... Half a turkey sandwich. For supper I had two hot dogs, all beef, no rolls, low fat cottage cheese, carrots and wheat thins.

I took a piece of the pizza the kids were having. Then I went to the bank at 8. My car wouldn't start so I had to walk back home. I stopped at Lou's on the way, had a whiskey sour(s) and a lobster roll while I was there. I figured all that walking burns a lot of calories.

Thursday, Jan. 14... Boy what a snowstorm. I had to walk all the way home in that. I'm still going to go to Backus, though.

(An effort to remain faithfully accurate to the diet diary for the Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 15-17 has been hampered by a failing memory, perhaps due to irregular nutrition. From what could be gleaned however, the dieter offered the following information. Ed.)

Saturday, a beefburger at Friendly's, a little macaroni and cheese, good for you. I don't eat macaroni unless it has cheese on it, couple of drinks.

Sunday, a birthday party, a wonderful dinner, at my mother's, hors d'oeuvres, mashed potatoes, meat, cake, asparagus (not fattening) with butter. Later two roast beef sandwiches, lettuce and mayonnaise. I didn't eat anything before I went.

Perhaps the beauty of this diet is that it has a miraculous quality. As of this writing, the man has lost eight pounds. The rest of us would have been lucky to restrain weight gain to eight, following the same menu.

He's encouraged and he's going to start exercising.

Seahawks continue scoring

Third period power-play goals by Todd Henry and Andy Thomas carried the Pee Wee A's to a 3-2 win over Abington in the opening round of the District 4 playoffs. Jeff Hartwell scored the initial tally when he blasted one home with just 17 seconds left in the first period & William Resnick picked up a "Playmaker" patch as he assisted on all three Seahawk scores. The A's received excellent goaltending by Kyle Hublitz and a solid effort from the entire squad to justly earn the designation as our "Team of the week".

In regular season games played the Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset-Hull Seahawks enjoyed another successful week by posting 5 victories in 7 encounters with Conference opponents.

The Bantam A's edged Brockton 4-2 to move into a first place tie with Weymouth in the league standings. Phil Thomas flipped in the first goal assisted by Joe Finn while Finn added the 2nd score after being set up by Thomas & Matt Glennon. Chris Tatum notched the 3rd marker on a textbook pass from Jamie Kelly, and Charlie Lersch registered the final tally aided by Kris Hublitz. Andy Walton & John Haley who split the goaltending chores were both superb in front of their cage.

The Pee Wee A's also won their league contest this week as they bombed Brockton 7-4. Center Jeff Hartwell netted a "Hat Trick" to lead the way while Todd Henry, Mark Sindone, Andy Thomas, & Mickey McCarthy all added single tallies.

The Pee Wee B's dropped a 4-1 verdict to Canton. Defenseman Jeremey Chalmers accounted for the lone Seahawk goal with an assist going to Jamie Hoffman.

The Pee Wee C's were shut out by Hanover 4-0 with only the outstanding cage-minding of Colin Keating preventing the margin of defeat from being greater than it was.

The Squirt B's came from 3 goals down to whip Milton 7-5. The victory upped their seasonal record to 11-2, and further solidified their hold on second place. Jon Mahoney (2), Kevin Quinn, Chris Ventolieri, Paul Norton, Michael Dundon, & Brian Pompeo all dented the nets for the high-flying B's while assists were garnered by Pompeo, Dennis Peacock, & Mark Resnick (each with a pair.)

The league-leading Squirt C's upped their record to 12 wins, 1 loss, & 2 ties with a 7-0 whitewashing of Kingston. Goalie Damon Parsons earned this week's "Outstanding Player" title as he registered his 5th shutout of the year. Terence Shea knocked in his 38th & 39th goals of the season to lead the Seahawk onslaughter. Also knocking down targets for the C's were David Smyth, Dan Cuddahy, Tony Muzzi, & Eric Fitzpatrick. Contributing assists to the attack were Resnick (2), Smyth (2), Brian Burke, & Sean Noonan.

Gregg Salmaine notched a "Hat Trick" to lead the mites past Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 4-1. Pat Henderson supplied the final goal while assists went to Tim Getto, Henderson, & Goalie Matthew Ventolieri who also played superbly in front of the nets.

Old Colony Sports breakfast Saturday

The First Annual Old Colony Sports Breakfast, sponsored by the Old Colony Council, Boy Scouts of America, is slated for Lantana's in Randolph, Saturday, Jan. 30, at 9 a.m.

According to Foxboro's John Ramer, a member of the executive board of the Old Colony Council and Sports Breakfast Co-chairman, athletes expected to be on hand include Bob Cousey, former Boston Celtics great; Middleweight Champion Marvin Hagler; and former Celtics player and coach Tom Heinsohn; as well as Pats President Billy Sullivan; Haywood Sullivan, co-owner of the Red Sox; the Patriots Cheerleaders; and Governor Edward King.

The Council's Board of Directors felt that athletes and/or sports personalities could convey a very positive impression on those present at the affair, which would in turn have a lasting effect on Scouting in general.

Additionally, it is the desire of the Boy Scouts of America to recognize those individuals in sports who best exemplify the ideals of Scouting.

Money raised will benefit the Old Colony Council, which in the recent past has been faced with some serious financial problems. At present, combating those problems has had but a minimal effect on actual Scouting programs.

The Old Colony Council currently serves the entire South Shore of Boston, promoting the ideals of Scouting to some 10,000 boys.

The cost of the breakfast is $100 per plate or $750 for tables of eight. For reservations, send checks payable to Old Colony Council, BSA, 2438 Washington St., Canton, Ma. 02021. Attention John Ramer.

A lean year for CHS basketball

By Donna Cogliano

The Cohasset High School boys' varsity basketball team hasn't won a game this season (0-11), yet they continue to hustle, learn, and improve.

Whenever head coach Ed Minelli is asked what the team record is, he replies, "Winless." Minelli admits he has a difficult time keeping track of the losses, which total 11, after last week's hoop action.

Why is this Skipper squad in the cellar of the South Shore League? And why do coaching opponents sympathetically pat Minelli on the back after defeating the Skippers by 20 and 30 point margins?

Coaches feel sorry for us because they know we are having a rebuilding year, said Minelli. Cohasset had only one letterman, senior Keith Goff, returning this season and he's missed several contests with an ankle injury.

Nine out of ten times the other team is taller than Cohasset, said Minelli.

The first year head coach described this year's season as a learning process. "I knew it would be a rebuilding year, when I took the job. Plus, the league is as strong as it's ever been...especially with the addition of Rockland. The South Shore League is top heavy with excellent teams. I'm teaching right now as opposed to coaching...it's a process of teaching the fundamentals," he said.

A positive plus for the Skipper squad is, "The kids have never quit. They have been receptive and have worked hard," said Minelli. "Amazing as it may seem," he said, "the kids keep bouncing back despite the disappointments."

"I am fortunate that the kids keep hustling. If they can learn the lesson of not giving up, I think they will

Just History Now

By Sophie Redfield

I was in a jail cell.
The heater was steaming then,
but now just the hole for the heater is there.
I used to lie in that bed,
but now an old dummy is there.
I used to see the fire truck,
but there is a picture instead.
I watched them build it in 1850, but that's just history now.

Linda

By Karla Kristiansen

I am a lady with blonde hair and blue eyes.
I was a flower girl.
I wore a white gown and veil.
Soon I got married.
His name was Mr. Von Drake, Jr.
Then he went to Canada.
Then we died.
My name was Linda.

Innocent

By Jay Gaston

I am a criminal who has escaped from a county jail and I am riding on a boat.
A shark bit my boat so I was thrown overboard and swam back to the coast and there I died and at high tide I got buried and I was never seen again.
All for something I didn't do.

How I Used to Look

By Tara Volungis

I am wearing a big dress.
I have blonde hair.
I am 20 years old.
There is a jail across the street.
The cops put a criminal in.
I shook hands and said "sir."
Someone had just gotten married.
It was a big wedding.
Kids were polite.
They didn't run around.

Policeman

I am a policeman locking up a criminal.
He broke the law by robbing a bank.
I have locked up five robbers all the time I have been here.
I drove the first police car.
I died in an armed robbery.
I was cremated and my family kept me in a jar and always remembered me.

Joe F. Bone

By Cole Hughes

I am in jail and just finished eating lunch with raw beans, mashed potatoes.
You can tell I am in jail.
My name is Joe F. Bone.
I have a beard.
It stinks in here.
I hate it in here.
It's all my fault.
I killed somebody.
sh sh sss (water running)
I only have 2 more minutes til I'm free.
"Get out brother. It's time for you to get out of jail."
Finally it is time for me to get out of jail.
I've been in jail for 3 years.

I'm in a museum.
Look a robber! Phew, it's a dummy.
Let's go upstairs and see what's there.
There's a doll house and it was made in 1880.
Look, dummy women are dressed in wedding gowns and this museum is 132 years old.

SINGLES SCENE

A satisfied dating service user

By ELIZABETH H.HOLLAND

Dana Young's friends were amazed and shocked when she told them she had joined a dating service.

But Dana had done her homework. She researched dating services, both computer and otherwise, in the Boston area before selecting one that met her standards.

She had also tried other ways of meeting people. In a sense, the turn to a dating service was a "last resort," she said, but it turned out to be far preferable to the bar scene.

Dana runs a consulting business in Wellesley Hills. The fact that this 25-year-old Smith College graduate had her own business intimidated most men she met.

"The bars are so awful," she said. "If you didn't fit in with the image TV or commercials are presenting, men don't see you as attractive. They don't even look at you. Worse, they ignore you. That's the worst, and it happens all the time."

Dana called a computer service. They didn't return her call for four or five weeks, so she wrote that agency off.

She looked into a dating service called Turning Point.

"They ran a lot of dances," she said. "They would rent a large room and send out flyers to all the big office centers. I went to one and it was a Club Med kind of thing, like an orgy in the sky or something. I was turned off by it."

Datique sent her a general questionnaire she didn't find specific enough.

The Couple Company wanted $195. That would allow her to view 50 different videotapes of men describing themselves, their interests and the type of woman they were looking for. She didn't like that approach because it was based too much on judgment by appearance.

Finally, she settled on Together. And since then, she's had a lot of fun.

"What I liked about Together was that they took time to get to know me personally. I joined in February and now they know what I like or don't like. The people I'm meeting now are right on target."

Belonging to the service and dating many different men has also helped Dana clarify, in her own mind, what type of person she is looking for. And because she feels more self-confident, she said she is more apt to meet other people outside the service.

"It's a lot of work to be in a dating service," she said. "Having to be pleasant to people you've just met and perhaps you think they're a turkey and you already know you don't want to spend the evening with them.

"But you have to realize other people's feelings are involved," she said. "It is so worth it."

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

This week's column is dedicated to Herman — whomever and wherever he may be. Where it all began I can't imagine. When we were first married and living in Alabama, we had a cat named Herman, but that was a long time ago and why we inflicted such a name on the poor animal escapes me now. Even more puzzling, is why a recipe should be given that name, but the fact that it is sweeping the country, is not. Libby Long is sharing this clipping from the St. Petersburg Times by Anne Long (no relation, says Libby) which reads like this:

HERMAN STARTER

2 c. flour
1/4 c. sugar
2 c. warm water
1 pkg. active dry yeast

Mix in plastic or glass container, cover and let stand overnight in warm place. Cover should not be tight. Next day, refrigerate covered, but stir daily. Herman must now be fed.

THE FEEDING OF HERMAN

1 c. flour
1 c. milk
1/2 c. sugar

Stir these ingredients into 1 cup of Herman starter. Keep refrigerated in a glass or pastic bowl and keep covered. Stir every day. On the fifth day: Stir the same feeding ingredients into 1 cup of Herman. Keep refrigerated in a glass or plastic bowl and keep covered. Stir every day. On the 10th day: Measure out 1 c. of Herman to give away. Because it has grown, you should also have enough to make the coffee cake (or other recipes) and still have a cup left to start the process all over again.

HERMAN COFFEE CAKE

2 c. Herman
2 c. flour
1 c. sugar
2 eggs
2/3 c. oil
3/4 c. milk
2/3 tsp. baking soda
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. salt
1 c. chopped nuts
1 c. raisins

Mix at medium speed the first 10 ingredients. Stir in nuts and raisins. Pour into a greased and floured 9 x 13" pan. Mix topping and sprinkle over unbaked coffee cake. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 min.

TOPPING: Blend together with pastry blender: 1 T cinnamon, 1/4 c. soft margarine, 1 T flour and 1 c. brown sugar.

HERMAN PANCAKES

1 c. Herman
1 c. flour
3/4 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
2 T sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
1/3 c. oil
2 eggs
1/2 c. milk

Mix together and bake on hot, greased griddle.

HERMAN CINNAMON ROLLS

1 c. Herman
1/4 tsp. salt
2 tsp. baking powder
1 c. flour
/4 tsp. baking soda
1/4 c. oil

Mix together first six ingredients. Form into a soft dough. Knead lightly. Roll out to 1/4" thickness on a floured surface. Spread with soft margarine. Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Roll as for jelly roll and cut in 1/2" slices. Spread topping on bottom of a 9 x 13" pan. Place dough slices on top, flat side down. Bake at 350 for 30 min. Remove from pan at once.

TOPPING: Combine 1 stick melted margarine, 1 c. brown sugar and 1/2 c. nuts.

REMINDER: The starter may stay in the refrigerator for two or three weeks without feeding, but no longer, or you'll have to give Herman a funeral. If you don't use it, keep it alive by dividing and feeding. You must never get down to less than 1 c. of starter.

A lean year for CHS basketball...

be successful in life," he said. Though the boys haven't secured a victory yet, Minelli said they do possess something more important — "plenty of heart and intelligence."

Last week Cohasset lost to Duxbury, 69-49, and Hanover, 63-37. And while the scores represent considerable margin of defeat, they also show improvement in the Skippers. Minelli said his team lost to Duxbury and Hanover by 30 and 50 points respectively the first time the teams met back in December.

How do the players feel about losing night after night?

"It's kind of maddening," said junior center Guy Martin, "especially when you're playing in front of parents, family and friends and they score 10 points before we get on the scoreboard."

Though the team has improved in all areas, Martin, a first year player said, "I thought we'd win at least one game before the second half of the season."

Junior point guard Jack Maloney said sometimes losing doesn't seem fair, "You go out everyday and play your hardest...you get bumps and bruises with the others, but somehow you always come up short."

"The big thing," said Maloney, "is that the coach has stayed with us. If we see him quit, we might quit. I think we have a good role model. We just don't have the talent this year."

Senior Jimmy Leonard said losing isn't much fun but it's not that bad either. He said it's discouraging around school lately, since kids are accustomed to asking how much the team lost by, instead of whether they won or lost. "It takes a little more effort to get psyched up for each game," he said.

Junior forward/center Tom O'Brien said, "I've been on losing teams before. It doesn't come easy, but I'm used to it...I'd rather be winning. I think the table is going to turn next year."

One special highlight of the season which all four players mentioned was when Cohasset came within four points of catching Hull in the fourth quarter of a game two weeks ago.

Some of the players expressed confidence in beating Holbrook, Hull, East Bridgewater and maybe Norwell in upcoming games.

Childrens' matinee

There will be a special children's movie matinee, this Saturday, at the town hall, at 2 p.m.

The film which is being sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center will cost $1. Refreshments will be sold.

Wrestlers continue to pin & win

A crowd of about 250 fans watched the Cohasset Skipper wrestling team triumph over Scituate, 45-27, last Friday for win number three.

Seven Cohasset wrestlers pinned opponents, while Scituate recorded only four wins and one pin.

Torin Sweeney remained undefeated while other teammates won by pin were: freshman Ricky Rourke, sophomore Lee Reid, seniors Mike Ellis, J.T. Price, David Rourke, and Bob Donahue.

Paul Igo won an unusually high scoring victory 19-14. Igo's bout was voted by his peers as the best matchup of the meet.

The Skippers are 3-8 overall and 1-5 in the South Shore League.

Kids...vacation at the Arts Center

Hey, kids! If you are between 7 and 11 and are wondering what to do during Feb. vacation, drop in at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, and have some fun.

For the first time, the Art Center is offering "Child's Vacation Drop-In," each day of vacation, Feb. 15-19, from 10:30 a.m. until noon.

This vacation week art program will be taught by Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, who used to teach at the Joseph Osgood School. No pre-enrollment is necessary; just come and join in.

Activities at the drop-in will include daily painting, drawing, or collage activity. There will also be a week-long, continuing surprise project that will be displayed at the Spring II Open House. All supplies are included in the low daily fee.

"Children's Art Workshop" starts on Feb. 24 and runs for eight weeks, once a week on Wednesday afternoons. Taught by Syma, this workshop features sketching, drawing, and painting, working from nature. This is a great way to let your imagination work! You must register in advance for this workshop.

For high school age artists, the Art Center is offering two classes. Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman will each "Intro to 3-D" where students will explore the excitement of working in three dimensions, using cardboard, wire, wood, string and clay. Marjorie Vining will teach "Portfolio Preparation Projects." In this class, students will develop illustration projects that can be used in a portfolio. Pen and ink, pencil, charcoal, and other media will be used.

Plans reviewed for dumping Cohasset trash

The soon-to-be owners of the Cohasset Heights dump are working out numbers to offer the town a way of closing the Cedar Street landfill.

John Barry, who has the private dump site under a purchase agreement, plans to give the town two options. One would be for curbside pick-up, meaning the landfill could be closed. The other would be for disposal of the town's trash using a sort of transfer station.

He said he would not allow townspeople to cart their rubbish car by car into the Cohasset Heights dump.

The actual transfer of the dump is scheduled for Monday, Feb. 15, Jim Tyerar is reportedly selling the 40+ acre dump to Cohasset Heights Limited, owned by John and Paul Barry, for something in the neighborhood of $5 million.

Last Friday the Barry brothers met with selectmen, the board of health, commission, advisory board and disposal area study committee at town hall.

John Barry told the group he won't be moving his garage from the Newton area to Cohasset, nor will he be bringing all the trash he collects through his various contracts into the Cohasset landfill.

His company collects residential trash in Weston, Needham and Wellesley plus servicing a number of commercial customers in locations in the Newton-Boston area.

What will be coming to the Cohasset dump?

Barry said the demolition material that has been deposited there under the Tyerar operation by private companies plus other contracts he may pick up in this area.

"Nothing is in the works," Barry said. "I might talk to Hull, they do have a problem there."

Tyerar pointed out his permit from the state allows dumping 300 tons a day at the landfill.

According to Ernest Stevens, chairman of the disposal area study committee, the entire town only generates 4,000 tons a year.

Search begins for new Fire Chief

Five residents will begin searching for a new fire chief next week, as Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink begins his last actual month with the department.

The search committee was appointed last month by the town's appointing authority.

Town Moderator William Weeks said the members are: Edward Dillon, Roy Fitzsimmons, Cordelia Foell, Donald Steele and John Thompson.

Weeks explained that at the last annual town meeting a motion was adopted that if the fire chief should resign, then a search committee should be set up by the appointing authority (a.k.a. the Troika) to screen candidates for the job.

While Chief Piepenbrink was under civil service, his successor will not be. The new fire chief, like the present police chief, will work under contract with the selectmen.

"The charge to the committee was to interview the candidates, set the guidelines and recommend three to the selectmen," Weeks said.

The first meeting of the search committee is scheduled for 7:45 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 9, at town hall.

Arthur clark, selectmen's secretary, explained that the search committee would be required to give consideration to any qualified person in the present department.

"I don't think they'll go into a nation-wide search," Clark commented. "I think they'll probably concentrate on Eastern Massachusetts."

Meanwhile Roger Lincoln has been appointed acting chief.

School Board releases evaluation report on Junior-Senior high school

By Donna Cogliano

"The school population at the high school is very stable.

"Eighty-four percent of the seniors have been enrolled locally for the entire six-year period.

"Because the nature of the community attracts individuals who are involved in the professions and in executive positions, there is some migration to and from the town due to job-assignment changes, but these changes constitute less than one percent of the high school age population. There is also a very low dropout rate.

"Sixty-eight percent of last year's graduates chose to attend a four-year college or university, while another 12 percent enrolled in post secondary training."

The school committee released the evaluation report of the junior senior high school to the public on Monday. The 32 page report was recently completed by a team of 22 visiting educators of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC).

Junior/senior high school principal Richard Streeter said the Commission on Public Schools will review the report on March 7 & 8, and assign an accreditation for the school.

Though the visiting evaluation team spent 3½ days at the Junior/Senior High school in October, School Superintendent Eugene Crowell publically thanked the staff and administration for 10 solid months of conscientious work toward the self-study.

Crowell said he was proud of the staff's self-study project and the leadership which Streeter provided in preparing the report.

Streeter said the report represented about 15 pages of historical and philosophical background with some 20 pages devoted to criticism.

He spoke of three recommendations made by the visiting team which conflicted with the school's

Casino gets resounding no in survey

The initial results are in on the Mariner survey of local affairs.

The clippings began trooping into the office by Friday in small neat piles. By the first of the week, the intensity of the answers began to surprise the counting weary staff.

Some things were overwhelming — one way or another. For instance, as far as we know, there are only two Mariner readers in all Cohasset who favor a casino in Hull. That question brought out the largest single response of any in the list of 25 with 67 replies against the proposal.

We must say there are more replies to be tallied. The ones available in time for this week came to us before noon on Monday.

Unless someone went out and bought extra Mariners to weight their answers — a prospect we feel is unlikely — there were 74 people replying to one or more questions.

The people who paid 20 cents for a stamp and only answered one question were an unexpected happening. Unfortunately for our piqued curiosity none of those people bothered to explain why they chose to answer just one question.

The only question that received zero "I don't care" replies was the one on spraying with Sevin for gypsy moths. The antis were in a decided minority.

Other areas where it seems there is a measure of consensus show that people seem happy with the present school bus system, unhappy about the prospect of either combining police and fire departments or hiring a commissioner of public safety, irate over the town's legal hassle on the Gammons Road tennis court, in favor of having private floats pay a harbor user fee, and in favor of light industry as a help for the tax base.

Some left blanks here and there. Some added opinions on other issues.

"Please Print No. 26. It's an important issue. Loose dogs are a nuisance and dangerous and I'm disappointed with the attitude of most dog owners in this village. No. 26. Should Cohasset have a good leash law. Yes!!!!"

We did not count the double and triple markings on some answers that seemed to bring out strong emotions. Let it suffice to say that the casino and the Gammons Road tennis court received the greatest number of double checks. If we had counted those — unscientific as it would be — the number of replies

Cohasset's week

Laugelle cast deciding vote

Selectman Rocco Laugelle cast the deciding vote last Wednesday for Chairman of the Norfolk County Budget Advisory Committee.

Laugelle, who represented Cohasset selectmen, voted in favor of Braintree selectman Donald Laing. In a weighted election of 70 total votes, Laugelle's 1 ⅓ vote boosted Laing to victory.

Laing, a former state representative, won the election by a 1½ vote margin.

Lincoln to be Chief

Two weeks ago selectmen named Captain Roger Lincoln to head the fire department when Chief Charles Piepenbrink retires on March 31. Last week, the board clarified Lincoln's assignment, following an executive session, and named him acting fire chief - for a year or until a permanent chief is chosen.

Lincoln will receive an annual salary of $22,066 which is about a $3,400 raise from his captain's pay.

Lincoln becomes acting chief on Thursday, April 1 and will work with Chief Piepenbrink during February toward a smooth change over.

10 game machines

Selectmen granted licenses for 10 game machines throughout the town.

Four video plus four game machine licenses were renewed for Cohasset Winter Gardens. The board approved a renewal and an additional video game license for the Cohasset Pizza House.

Schools to lose subsidy

The school system will lose all its subsidy for vocational education in the next budget year, according to the state Department of Education.

The school system received $4,578 for the current fiscal year in a program to encourage vocational education.

It will receive no money in fiscal '83.

The reduction decreed by the state is being aimed at higher income communities. The money for the state from the federal government is being cut by 15 percent for the second year in a row.

Liquor licenses

Selectmen voted, 3-0, to allow Kimball's Motor Inn to serve liquor on Sundays. Board chairman Henry Ainslie said liquor would be served after 11 a.m. with Sunday brunches and not to the general public.

At Police Chief John DeBassio's request, selectmen have set up a hearing with the Ko Ko Island Restaurant for Wednesday, February 10.

The restaurant's hearing involves a December 26 incident of serving a minor with an alleged altered license said chairman Henry Ainslie.

Selectmen appointed police chief John DeBassio as constable for posting notices of town meetings and those running for town offices.

Laugelle voted chairman

Selectman Rocco Laugelle was voted board chairman for the date, so that he may vote for the Norfolk County Budget tonight (Wednesday).

Laugelle replaces Chairman Henry Ainslie, who has a conflict because he works for the County. Some 27 towns and cities will be eligible to vote at the meeting. There will be a weighted vote (total of 70 votes) in which Cohasset may cast 1⅓ votes.

Selectmen will meet tonight despite Laugelle's absence.

One-day liquor license

Selectmen took under advisement a request from the Rotary Club for a one-day beer and wine license. The license request is for the sale of beer and wine on the grounds of the Community Center, the day of the roadrace, Sunday, April 4.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle hoped that liquor sales would not interfere with those leaving church services at St. Stephen's. Chairman Henry Ainslie agreed with Laugelle and said the board would check with all churches before granting the one-day license.

Lower fee for movies

Selectmen took under advisement a request from the Community Center for a lower fee for use of Town Hall.

The Community Center will sponsor six Walt Disney movies at Town Hall on Saturdays from January to March. To date, two movies have been shown.

When the board was informed that the Center is charged $18 for a custodian plus $30 for use of town hall, Chairman Henry Ainslie responded, "That's an awful lot of money for an organization of that nature."

Bargaining session

An executive session discussion of strategies for collective bargaining was postponed due to a late finish of regular business at Monday's school committee meeting.

Cohasset man to be tried

Robert Cochems of Jerusalem Road was ordered to stand trial in Pittsburgh, Penn., last week by a magistrate in U.S. District Court in Boston.

The Cohasset resident is accused along with seven others in connection with a mail fraud scheme that postal officials say involved the use of coal futures.

He is being sent to Pennsylvania for trial after an initial court hearing over the identity of the John Doe indicted by a Pennsylvania federal grand jury.

Blizzards anniversary

This weekend marks the fourth anniversary of the Blizzard of '78, which miraculously enough left the town without major damage.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, says that while there was some damage to coastline properties along Straits Pond, Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue, most of the town was left in good condition.

"The few people who did need to be put up were taken in by friends or neighbors," Clark said, referring to the victims of the blizzard.

Still the town was already to set up an evacuation shelter for people from Hull and Scituate.

"We got a call from the federal government that they were going to be sending in people by helicopter. We got all ready for them, cleared out a school parking lot, set up tables and things.

"They said they'd be using Cohasset as an evacuation center for Hingham, Hull and Scituate people.

"We got everything squared away. About midnight we started hearing rumors Scituate and Hull would have their own evacuation shelters, after all that rushing around.

"If we had another blizzard, I guess Cohasset would be more of a helping hand than anything."

And in the event Cohasset were to need its own disaster shelter in a longer term power outage or the like, a school building could be used.

Clark pointed out that the schools have emergency generators to provide power.

Moth spraying bid

Selectmen acknowledged a bid last Wednesday night from a Hanson company for aerial spraying of gypsy moths.

C&W Ag-Air Service of Hanson would spray at the rate of $9.90 per acre. Sevin-4 oil would be applied with one pound of active carbaryl (1 quart total material) for each acre.

Typing books loaned

The school committee voted unanimously, 5-0, to loan the Community Center six used Gregg typing books.

Action coming on Aaron River Rd. case

Andrew and Linda Krueger presented their case to selectmen last Wednesday regarding the dispute of their address - 40 Aaron River Road.

After viewing a map and listening to the Kruegers and their Attorney James Logar, Chairman Henry Ainlsie said, "I will admit I have a different picture now than I had before." Ainslie said the board would take the matter under advisement and possibly make a decision within 10 days.

The problem started last fall when Jack and Lily Richmond moved into their new home and were assigned 40 Aaron River Road by the assessor's office. The Kruegers have been using the address for more than four years and received it through the post office.

Logar argued that if the town forced the family to change their address, it would cause problems. "This is not a situation they've asked for; this is not a situation they could have avoided," said Logar.

Logar said changing the address number requires considerable expense. He said, "I think the town owes some measure of consideration." It would be far easier for the other family to change their address since they haven't established all the relationships that the Kruegers have, he said.

Andrew Krueger said the most difficult part of the controversy is that meanwhile, his mail has been withheld. He said, we can only pick mail up on Saturdays and they will hold it for only 10 days.

Linda Krueger said that if the address were changed, the family would have to pay for some mail forwarded. And Logar noted there would be problems applying for credit cards, since the application would show they had lived at the new address for only a short while. Change of address notices would amount to $60 in postage alone, said Logar.

Executive secretary to selectmen, Arthur Clark, added an interesting piece of information at the tail end of discussion. He said the town started assigning house numbers in 1939.

Selectmen set rules for alcohol seizure

Police Chief John DeBassio's proposal for disposal of seized alcohol was shot down by selectmen last week, but not entirely.

Selectmen were partly influenced with the chief's recommendation and their own ruling which combined for a new policy.

The board voted unanimously, 3-0, to direct the police department to pour the contents of seized alcohol down the sink, in the presence of a witness, and have the bottles or cans recycled with all proceeds donated to the Jimmy Fund.

Selectmen disapproved of DeBassio's request to offer seized alcohol for sale because of the high risk and liability involved. Chairman Henry Ainslie asked, what responsibility would the town take for damaged or contaminated bottles.

In a letter to selectmen, DeBassio informed the board of a considerable amount of alcoholic beverages collected from minors and other violators and his desire to alleviate the storage problem. The chief said, normally, seized alcohol is destroyed, but much of the inventory is sealed and capable of being resold.

DeBassio wrote, it would be hardly fitting for a town to profit from the sale of alcohol. He recommended that proceeds go to the Jimmy Fund.

At first the board favored Scituate's policy of destroying alcohol, with a witness present, at the dump. However, board members sided with selectman Mary Jane McArthur's suggestion to empty the alcohol in a sink and have the bottles and cans recycled.

Though DeBassio's plan for selling seized alcohol was knocked down within a moment from when it was read aloud, his idea of donating to the Jimmy Fund became part of the new policy.

Options reviewed for dumping Cohasset trash...

Under questioning, Barry said he envisioned the dump being used to its maximum capacity.

Jim Lagrotteria, vice chairman of the advisory committee, asked that the figures put together on various options be written so that they could be compared with the engineer's estimate of costs for operating Cedar Street.

"So we don't have to try to compare apples and oranges, can we ask that the same figures be used on the amount of trash.

"It doesn't matter to me what the number is as long as it's the same."

Lagrotteria was referring to the difference in estimates of the amount of trash generated. Figures so far in the calculations for the present dump vary from an estimate of 2.5 pounds of trash per person per day.

The difference was enough for the engineer to recalculate the life of the unexpanded landfill, estimating it could last until May or July.

The national average of 3.2 pounds of trash per person per day is the one currently being used. The earlier engineering report guessed at the five pound figure.

But Stevens points out there is a private study done of a high income community in this state that showed 2.5 pounds per person per day was left in trash.

Stevens said his board has settled on the national average as the figure to be used.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board of selectmen, said that although his board called for the meeting with the prospective owners of the private dump, they realize the issue is in the domain of the board of health.

Ainslie suggested that the estimates on various trash options be processed trhough Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, to the board of health.

"We just wanted to make sure all the options were explored," Ainslie said.

The 36-year-old Barry has been in the rubbish collection business with his younger brother, Paul, for the past 10 years.

He's proud of his operation which includes radio dispatched trucks.

"We're continuously upgrading," Barry said. "I've never had a lawsuit and never run an unsightly operation. The trucks all look new."

They own 13 large packer trucks plus several trucks of other sizes and purposes.

Ainslie said he didn't expect the curbside option was a likely one for the town.

Tyerar suggested that if the town were to use the present dump as a transfer station, a machine operator should be kept on to compact the trash. He said this would save the town money in the long run since the yardage figure would be cut to 40 percent of what it would otherwise be.

If the Cedar Street landfill were used as a collection point for trash, large bins, the size of truck bodies would be used as the refuse containers.

Any recycling effort would be up to the town, Barry said.

Barbara Kern, member of the board of health, asked whether there would be a way of selling bags to households and leaving the town with no responsibility for the trash collection.

Barry said he does that elsewhere.

Officials asked for a one year and long term figure for the trash disposal. Barry said he could provide both figures using an esculator.

"We'll be fair," Barry said.

Marilyn Sweeney, board of health member, said nothing could be put in the present dump once it is capped.

Historical Soc. gets weather vane

Selectmen agreed last Wednesday to loan the Beechwood Fire Station weather vane to the Cohasset Historical Society.

The weather vane will be displayed inside one of the society's buildings once a loan agreement is drawn up and approved.

Historical Society president Connie Parker assured the board that because of substantial thefts, the weather vane would not be considered for outside display.

The book value of the weather vane ranges between $400 to $600.

In a separate issue, selectmen tried to reach an agreement with Parker regarding the number of Pratt - volume II history books which were sold through the Historical Society.

Town officials hadn't kept track of the books until recently. Parker said she could account for 120 books while selectmen say the figure is 144 books. Over the past seven years Parker took a few books at time from the Town Hall attic and distributed them for sale at the library and bookstores. Though the books were sold for a higher price Parker was asked to recover only the cost of $2 per book with the Historical Society netting the profit. The Historical Society was not charged the going price, but a figure at cost.

In 1979 Arthur Clark, chairman of selectmen, said he sent a letter to Parker informing her of the new $3 price. Parker responded, "I never got this letter - never in my life did I see this letter."

Parker said, "I write down everything - all incomes." She asked the board, "Why have you let this go for seven years? I think it's sloppy bookkeeping on your part." After all, I never had to sign for books, said Parker.

She first learned of a price raise last fall in the newspapers when she read that the cost would be increased the next month. Executive secretary to selectmen, Arthur Clark said, he should probably take some of the blame in the mix-up.

Chairman Henry Ainslie asked Parker to come before selectmen again with a compromise proposal when there is a full board present (Selectmen Rocky Laugelle was voting for the Norfolk County Budget.)

Roache Brothers to take over A & P? Nope

Roache Brothers, the supermarket chain, won't be the tenant at Cushing Plaza taking over the old spot long occupied by the A&P, according to a spokesman for the chain.

"Definitely not," was the word from company headquarters in Needham. Roache Brothers was under consideration as a tenant.

Other names linked to the site include Rizzotto's Market of Hingham and Shaw's. Since the owners of the shopping plaza said last month that there were a half dozen possible tenants being considered there are obviously some names yet to come out.

Penn Central sale

Selectmen voted unanimously, 3-0, last Wednesday to purchase the Penn Railroad property for $132,000.

Selectmen's Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said down payment for the property is $13,200. Town Counsel has 45 days to research the particulars of the sale said Clark.

☐It was a super super bowl party at the Hunter's of Forest Avenue, last Sunday, not only because it provided the opportunity for game enthusiasts to enjoy the afternoon with friends and neighbors but also because it gave the rest of us something else to do besides wait until the big event was over.

And after the game, there was a delicious buffet for which everyone contributed a special creation. One very popular dish was Winnie Kuhn's pork and mushroom strudel which she wouldn't exactly guarantee was non-fattening. It was Winnie's birthday and after the dinner, there was a surprise cake to celebrate the great event which was especially decorated by Nanc McLaughlin.

☐A popular question around towr during the recent cold spell was how deep was the ice on Cohasset Harbor -4" was the most common estimate. And then there were those who would like to know the number of gulls at the town dump. Is it really 700? And does that include the one on Joe Laugelle's impressive new hat which he insists was a gift from a friend.

☐Pam Johnson has made the Dean's List at Providence College. A freshman majoring in the Humanities, Pam is a 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Johnson of Nichols Road.

☐It's now official, the guest speaker at the Blue and Gold Cub Scout Dinner this Sunday will be Michael O'Connell, defenseman for the Boston Bruins. In 1981, Mike was traded to the Bruins from the Chicago Black Hawks and has since been signed to a multi-year contract. He has played a prominent role with the Bruins and is the fourth player in the National Hockey League to play 82 regular season games.

Mike grew up in Cohasset and now lives in Scituate. His appearance at the annual dinner for the cub scouts will definitely be the highlight of an eventful evening.

☐On a recent fishing trip in Florida, Dan Dormer took part in a contest for the first and biggest fish. Competition was keen but Dan managed to come out a winner, an event which would ordinarily be impressive, until one learns that the "first and biggest" fish was all of 1½ pounds!

☐The Cohasset Republican Town Committee has elected the following members to represent the committee at the state convention: Rita Strong, Pat Buckley and Julie Guild. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, as an elected official, will also be attending the March convention.

☐There was plenty of snow for this year's ski trip for the St. Anthony's Sociables and each skier, whether down hill or cross country, took advantage of the excellent conditions.

There were many familiar faces on the annual trip to Lincoln New Hampshire and Loon Mountain and a few new ones. This year, word about the popularity of past trips had spread and the event was an instant sellout.

Joe Laugelle fulfilled his role as official "Bootbuckler" for the group with admirable skill and even greater patience. Father Keohane managed to navigate the slopes successfully despite not having skied for quite some time and a brief encounter with an uncooperative chair lift.

Those chair lifts can be tricky and some of us did witness what could have been a bad accident as a skier slipped out of her lift and after hanging above our heads by one hand fell to the ground. Luckily the deep snow cushioned her fall and she got up and walked away.

Everyone agreed that the trip which was managed so successfully by Dan and Jean Dormer was great fun and I've heard that there are already some ready to sign on for next year.

Crowell moves to cut field trip $

Though school superintendent Eugene Crowell said the Deer Hill School was getting plenty of mileage out of their physical education teacher - that might not be the case regarding accumulated miles on field trips next year.

Crowell said he zeroed out money for field trips at the Deer Hill School in the fiscal year 1983 proposed budget. This past year, $1,500 was appropriated for field trips.

With a total of 30 periods per week, the Deer Hill School physical education might be assigned to teach 25 periods next year. The instructor would also conduct a couple of additional classes for special needs and adaptive students.

Crowell and principal Kenneth Ekberg reveiwed Deer Hill school budget proposals with the school committee on Monday night. The FY '83 budget total for Deer Hill tentatively shows a $36,770 increase from last year's total figure of $645,043.

Regarding costs for administration school committee member Martha Gjesteby asked administrators if there would be a savings on printing costs of report cards if they were xeroxed within the school. Vice-chairman John Langmaid said the increased clerical work would have to be considered also.

Ekberg said the costs of professional supplies and dues for various memberships on educational organizations had increased due to inflation.

Media supplies ammounted to $600 in '83 with $400 for U.S. wall maps and $200 reserved for film rentals.

Gjesteby wondered how often wall maps were replaced. Ekberg said $500 was used to purchase maps three or four years ago.

School committee member Diana Kornet said she was happy that a fifth grade teacher had been added for next year since this year's fourth graders had been short-changed regarding teacher-student ratios. She said it would be unfair for a class to suffer two years in a row.

While on the topic of budgeting for special needs, Kornet pointed out an interesting set of figures among the two grade schools. With virtually the same enrollment, Deer Hill school has 30 more pupils involved in the special needs program. Of 292 students at Osgood School, 60 receive special needs instruction while 90 of Deer Hill School's 297 enrollment participate in that program.

Crowell said he cut approximately 50-70 thousand dollars off his department heads' requests before presenting the budget for the school committee's approval.

Update offered on outdoor education

Deer Hill School principal Kenneth Ekberg updated school committee members on Monday regarding plans of Outdoor Education for fifth graders.

The course format would be similar to the Camp Wing and Thompson Island outdoor studies of the past, said Ekberg. However, areas of study would take place locally with field trips planned to the rocks off Jerusalem Road, mussel beds in Little Harbor and the town dump, he said.

Following the morning excursions, fifth graders would return to school for lunch and various afternoon assemblies regarding environment. Ekberg mentioned one possible speaker from a Washington D.C. based program who would address the topic of ocean ecology.

Ekberg said the staff had expressed enthusiasm for undertaking the outdoor program in the spring. School Supt. Eugene Crowell said he whole heartedly supported the 3-4 day outdoor program.

Fee too high

Smoke detectors are required by state law in every home or living quarters.

So last week the selectmen voted to authorize the fire department to charge $10 for a certificate of compliance — something needed before any property may change hands.

We think this work is something that should be part of the regular duties of the fire department, not a special fee item.

The job of the fire department should be more fire prevention than fire fighting in a modern society, to our way of thinking.

Encouraging people to obey the state law on smoke detectors — indeed suggesting where the items should be put and how many are needed — should be something a fire department takes in stride.

We think the Cohasset fire department has been performing this function far better than any other we've heard from. After all, Fire Facts is their innovation.

The union deserves high praise for the ongoing work on that column.

It seems Proposition 2½ is pushing all municipal agencies on to charge for what might otherwise have been granted free.

It also seems that $10 for a compliance certificate on smoke detectors is too high.

Light industry

It seems quite a few people in town think it might be well to attract some light industry to town.

Driving along Route 3A, it looks like the loam and wood lot businesses have the edge. It also looks like industry — without the smoke stacks and factory whistles — could well be an improvement over the present haphazard growth.

Appointing an industrial development commission might be a good idea just to study the possibilities. If that step seems too bold a beginning, there could be a Route 3A study committee selected with the idea that rezoning, new restrictive bylaws and some gentle persuasion might be the way to begin clearing up the gateway to Cohasset.

Looking down the long stretch of service stations, car lots, gravel mounds and construction equipment, it seems like the time is ripe for improvement.

Perhaps the members of the disposal area study committee could be recycled into taking on a less expensive problem to repair.

FISH volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed for the Cohasset FISH chapter to work as drivers or back-up callers.

The back-up callers never need to drive. They are called when the on-duty driver is unavailable, necessitating telephone calls to people on the emergency list.

Anyone wishing to volunteer should call Gertrude Hooper, the chairman, at 383-1111.

Another look at the 'Court' case

Commentary

By James Lagrotteria

Why is the Town of Cohasset financially involved in a neighborhood dispute?

Why are the Selectmen following a path that could cost us up to $50,000.00 in legal fees, and $250,000.00 in damages?

We are presently facing a court trial that could cost us these sums and I refer to the now famous "Bells Tennis Court Case". Action taken by the Board of Selectmen and Town Council has caused the Bells to sue the Town for this sum. The important facts surrounding this mess are.....

1. The Bells requested and were issued a Building Permit by the Cohasset Building Inspector.

2. The Mazza's and other neighbors filed a motion in Superior Court to halt construction.

3. On April 28, 1980 this injunction was denied by Judge Garrity.

4. Again on April 30, 1980 it was denied by Judge Garrity.

5. Again on May 1st before Judge Grant of the Massachusetts Appeals Court the motion was denied...for the third time.

At this point the Town had not spent any money and the Courts of Law had ruled in favor of the Cohasset Building Inspector and the Bells. Why, at that point, after three court rulings in favor of our Building Inspector, did Town council and the Selectmen order the Bells to stop construction?

As a result of this action, again the Bells went to court. And again before Judge Pierce of Norfolk Superior Court, they won. This time it cost the Town some $8,000.00 in legal fees. Three thousand dollars in transfers from the Reserve Fund and five thousand dollars by action of Town Meeting.

6. On August 12, 1980 the Zoning Board of Appeals filed three separate opinions; one member agreeing with the Bells, one opposed and one could not decide, and since all members must agree or disagree, no decision was reached.... again a victory for the Building Inspector and the Bells.

7. In the Building Inspector's Log Book there are in excess of 120 notations relative to this matter, of phone calls, inspections, consultations with legal counsel, neighbors, Town Boards and the Bells. What were those costs? No one can put a handle or even guess at what the cost may have been.

In the years of 2½, "Dump" problems and sewer problems are we so affluent that we can take a gamble on losing a court case that could cost the Town upwards of a quarter million dollars? The issue is not whether the tennis court should have been built or not, that was decided by the Courts of Law. The issue here is, why is the Town now involved in a legal action, handled by "Outside" Legal Counsel at a cost of $175.00 per hour?

There are 20 tennis courts in Cohasset. Three of these courts were built after the passage of the present Zoning By-Laws, and each of the three tennis courts are in violation of these By-Laws as the Town has interpreted it in the Bell's case.

Are the Selectmen and Town Counsel going to take action against the other three tennis courts? If they do not, are we in conflict with "Snob Zoning" Rulings by allowing some tennis courts to be built and others not under the same By-Law.

This was and is a neighborhood problem. If the neighbors want to sue the Bells, let them. But, let us ask our Town Fathers to take another look at this case. Is a tennis court as important as the "Dump" or sewer problems or for that matter any other department in this year of level funding for Town budgets?

I for one certainly do not think we should go to court!

How about you?

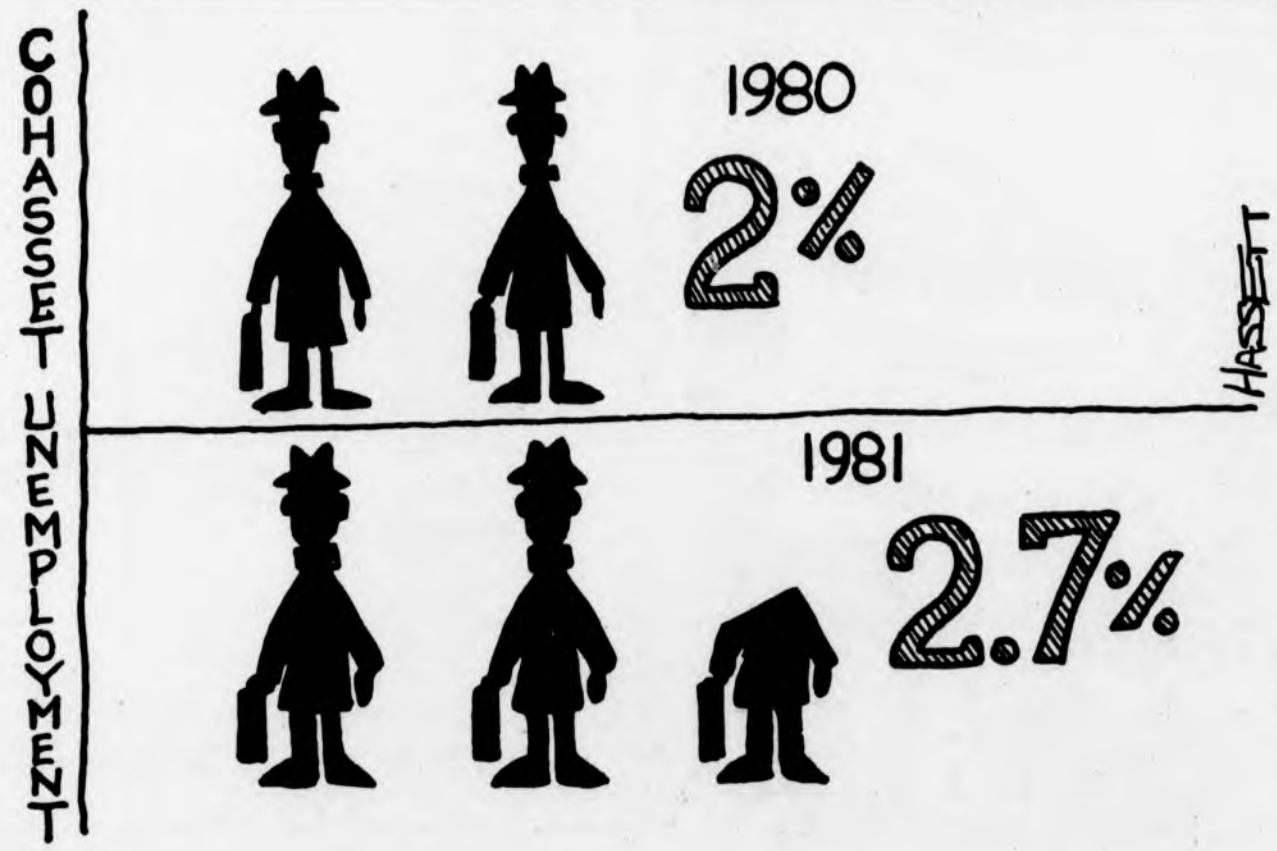
Criticizes teacher layoff story

Letters

To the Editor;

What community service did the Cohasset Mariner attempt to provide by releasing premature conjectures and inaccuracies to the Cohasset people in their recent article, "Proposed Teacher Layoffs"? The very first paragraph, "The plans for teaching staff at Osgood School call for moving many of the teachers into new grades;" and substantiating, later paragraphs as to where these moves were to be accomplished, were extremely exaggerated and outdated. The two teachers listed by name made grade-level changes last year!



The statement that there are now three first grade teachers and will increase to four is false also! We currently have four first grade teachers with all indications that this number will remain for next year.

Naming a teacher, who is presently on a maternity leave, as the full time teacher who faces being cut to a half-time post was quite presumptuous on the writer's part.

Since the author of the article seemed to be concerned about salaries—she should look more closely at our salary scale and she would see that the doctorate level is maximum.

An article of this type deserves the "CLARIFICATION" paper given to all Osgood teachers by their principal. In this, Mr. John Creamer stated: "The article in the Mariner relative to the proposed Osgood budget and teaching assignments for next year was an unfortunate and unintended disclosure of tentative data; in some cases, the data was completely erroneous. The School Committee and the Superintendent have concluded only the initial review of the Osgood budget and have yet to begin scrutiny of the budget beyond the Osgood School. The SchoolCommittee has not formally acted upon our budget and will not do so until they have concluded their review of the total system's budget.

Week two

The Mariner survey...

Officials and newspaper people spend time sitting around trying to second guess the will of the electorate.

Town officials are often seen treading carefully when they are sure they know what the public wants. Much of the time, they are left to work without the benefit of public opinion.

We've put together a questionnaire on the issues that come quickly to mind in the arena of local politics. Residents, whom local government pledges to serve, are asked to respond to the list by marking off "yes," "no" or "I don't care."

Please cut out the survey and mail it to the Cohasset Mariner, P.O. Box 71, Cohasset, Mass. 02025, or drop it off at Colonial Pharmacy in the Village. Results will be published.

Mariner survey results...part one would have gone by 100.

"Another question: Should 3A businesses be required to screen (loam and wood) their lots? Yes."

Many people crossed out "I don't care" and listed "I don't know." We had to tabulate them together to come up with a way of dealing with the numbers. A few qualified their replies.

Someone made a statement that the town needs an incinerator.

Someone suggested the way to make Wadleigh Park a large enough parking lot would be to fill nearby land.

"Never, never, never," was written next to the casino question by two people.

Several other questions brought out superlatives along with the check marks — like "no way" for continued legal costs on the Gammons Road tennis court and "by all means" on seeking out light industry.

All in all we're learning about the town through the replies. Thanks to everyone that's taken the time to respond.

The questionnaire has been reprinted on page 9 and more results will be published next week.

Teacher layoff...

The Osgood budget does include a reduction of one and one-half teaching positions but no decision whatsoever has been made with respect to personnel. Personnel have not been discussed in either open or closed session.

The publication of specific names was clearly not the intent of the School Committee or the Superintendent at this tentative level of budget discussion.

It has always been our practice to inform personnel relative to intended position changes at an early point in time and certainly prior to publication of such information for general consumption.

It is our intent to continue this practice and we pledge our commitment to fully inform you of budget proceedings as they progress."

In the end, more confusion and injury was done by this poor piece of journalism than had been present before. Within the three schools in Cohasset, we have been most cordial to the press, in many instances appraising them of events that they may wish to cover. The teachers and staff have been very open and informative to reporters, we would expect this consideration in return. We certainly hope, that in the future, your reporters would investigate as many primary sources as possible before releasing articles of this sensitive nature!

\ Faith E. Bowker
President, Cohasset Teachers' Association

[Editor's Note: The data used as a base for that story was the superintendent's proposed school budget which is on file as a reference material & the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. After publication School Supt. Eugene Crowell said that next year he would pull the names of teachers from the budget.]

Deer Hill repairs

An architectural firm recently informed school administrators that window repairs to the Deer Hill School would cost about $7,800 to $10,000. Supt. Eugene Crowell said that repair costs have not been included under maintenance for the Deer Hill School.

Knight, Bagger & Anderson architects of Boston also recommended that preventative measures be taken to contain further deterioration of Deer Hill windows.

School Business Manager John Raftery and Crowell met with architects yesterday (Tuesday) to discuss High School auditorium renovations.

In 'A Man for All Seasons'

Who's who behind the scenes

By J.A. Marshall

On Thursday, Feb. 25, Friday, Feb. 26, and Saturday, Feb. 27, the curtain on the Cohasset Town Hall stage will part to reveal the set erected by the members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

As in all dramatic productions, many people work behind the scenes to create the feeling of period and settings to be the backdrop for the actors.

In "A Man For All Seasons," the person coordinating the effort is production manager Harry Heinemann of Scituate, ably assisted by stage secretary, Pat Daukantas of Cohasset. The 16th Century set design was done by Burk Ketcham, assisted by Scott Ketcham, both of Cohasset.

The set construction crew included John Kinchla, Wayne Meissner, David Barrett, Dick Kelley, Burk Ketcham, Fred Koed, Carroll Richards, George Donovan, Sheldon Ripley, Murray Campbell, and Mike Sestina. All the construction work and details would be for naught, without the lighting talent of Charles Wheelwright, assisted by Joanne Millard. Of course, after the set is finished and lit, the actors must be provided with the items called for by the playwright.

Small props for this production are being collected by Susan Suddath, Lisa Koed, Judith Chute, and Jane Marshall, while Ruth Keefe and Alice Daunt are collecting the large props. Another integral part of any play, the costumes, are being gathered and made by Gari Glennon, Phyllis Donovan, Mary Lou Slotnick, and Alice Duffy. The apparel, more than anything else, will provide the audience with the sense of England during the initial reign of Henry VIII. Of course, hand in hand with costumes, goes the make-up, done this production by Kathi Cashin and Lisa Fichtner.

As in many plays, the playwright has called for some background sounds. This production has Dramatic Club member Peter Tolman overseeing sound, with the aid of Judy Hardy as music consultant. Backstage, during play nights, the production crew will be guided by stage manager Alice Duffy, assisted by Murray Campbell. In order for the audience to know the dates when they can appreciate the fruits of all this production labor, they must be informed of the upcoming play. This important part of the show is in the hands of publicity chairman David Wadsworth; his work is complimented by posters designed by Carlene Laney. The sign on the Town Hall is painted by Wayne Meissner, and will show all those walking or driving near the Town Common that the Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production is "A Man For All Seasons." Needless to say, any production is truly a team effort of all members of the Dramatic Club.

The work and attention which has gone into this play can be enjoyed by audiences on Feb. 25, 26, 27, when the Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "A Man For All Seasons," curtain 8 p.m.

Realty market ready to emerge

The theme for real estate in 1982 is "optimism," according to new Plymouth County Board of Realtors president Robert J. Mullin of Scituate.

Mullin is a Cohasset Realtor.

Citing the "underwhelming market activity" of 1981, Mullin said, "there are a number of substantial new signs of improvement, however, no one yet believes the turnaround will be dramatic for buyers, sellers or borkers.

"Until interest rates reach the forecasted range of 14 percent, financing is the most important factor in real estate," Mullin said, adding that new and pending Massachusetts legislation will create mortgage funds and offer them at rates lower than current market rates.

"On the national level, a new program by the National Association of Realtors will improve the Realtors' opportunity to use the secondary mortgage market," he continued. "Realtors National Mortgage Access will make it easier for Realtors nationwide to use the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) Resale/Refinance Program in 1982, and to have access to national sources of secondary mortgage money.

"This program is attempting to establish secondary mortgate market programs for seller-held first and second mortgages that will allow individuals to sell them off and get their mortgage monies back," Mullin explained.

"My goal in 1982 is to encourage realistic marketing prices on all properties to enliven the market for seller, buyer and broker alike that will enable all of us to work in a revitalized atmosphere," he concluded.

School Committee briefs

Enrollment decline

Figures in the proposed school budget show the school system's enrollment declining by a possible 55 next year.

Staffing will be cut by two-and-a-half teachers, according to the administration's plan.

This year there were 1,469 students in the system by Oct. 1, the usual day for pinning such calculations.

That includes 296 at Osgood, 327 at Deerhill, 267 at the junior high and 579 in the senior high.

According to the plan one-and-a-half teachers will be reduced at Osgood and one teacher cut at Deer Hill.

The projected enrollment for next year is 1,414. That includes 292 at Osgood, 297 at Deer Hill, 248 at the junior high and 577 in the senior high.

The following year projections show a decline to 1,346 students, with Osgood holding about the same number and Deer Hill dropping to 239.

Enrollment breakdown

There are 177.9 staff members in the public school system and 1,469 students this year.

The breakdown includes 23.3 staff members at Osgood (13 of them teachers, 18 specialists and 4 activity aides); 26.7 staff members at Deer Hill (again 13 teachers, 3.7 specialists, 4 activity aides and 1.5 instructional aides); 20 special services staff members (10.5 of them teachers and 7.5 of them instructional aides); 74.7 staff members in the junior/senior high school (33.2 teachers, 5 department heads, 12.5 specialists, 1 activity aide, 2 instructional aides, 1 librarian and 2 guidance counselors); 7.6 staff members in the central office, plus 7 bus drivers, 10 cafeteria workers (paid from the lunch money) and 8.6 people paid through state or federal funds.

Short takes

School Supt. Eugene Crowell recently thanked two Cohasset reporters of the Mirror and Patriot Ledger for not mentioning the names of teachers who might be layed off next fall.

The school committee agreed to lease about three High School classrooms in July and August for the Cohasset Reading Clinic.

The reading clinic is geared for both children and adults. Last year, the cost of leasing classrooms was $360. total for the clinic.

Cohasset appears to be four years away from a substantially increased kindergarten enrollment based on the number of births in town for 1981.

Crowell was informed recently that 72 babies were born in Cohasset last year. Crowell said the figure is encouraging unless many of those families move out of town. Registration for next year's kindergarten class has been estimated at 52.

'Conway Country' – # 1 in Cohasset

December at the Jack Conway Real Estate sales office on Rte. 3A, Cohasset, was one of the most interesting months in the history of the office.

Not only did the Cohasset office finish up a year in which it was the #1 sales office in the entire company, but it also finished the year in banner style. In all, the Cohasset office sold 16 properties during the bleak month of December, and amazingly enough its sales included almost a total sales blitz of the market in the town of Cohasset.

According to records at the Nofolk County Registry of Deeds and published in the official transfer directory, there were 7 residential sales closed in the month of December for a total of $613,400 in sales volume. Of these sales, the Jack Conway Company figured in as a broker in 6 of them for a tota! of $543,400. Five of the six sales were both 'Conway Country' listings as well as 'Conway Country' sales. One sale was a 'Conway Country' listing sold by one of the good co-brokers in the Town.

"We've done this before, but I was so proud to end up a year such as 1981 in such a completely dominant position in Cohasset sales," said Muriel Desmond, manager of the Cohasset Office and a 23-year professional with the Jack Conway organization.

Sales associates of our Cohasset Office who made it all happen are shown (L-R): Mary Ellen Neagle; Eunice Coady; Gloria Ellis; Catherine Ernst; Mary Pecce; Muriel Desmond, Office Manager; Henry Desmond; Andrea Merrill; Carol Watt; Shifi Jorden; Debbie Deal; and Julie Gallinas. What you should know about documenting your boat

Yacht owners: If your boat is documented, or if you are considering documenting your vessel, there are a few very important things you should know before you operate your boat.

First, when you apply for an original document (that is, the vessel has no prior documentation), the vessel may not be legally operated until you acquire a valid state registration while waiting for your document to arrive.

Second, if you are renewing a document, you may not legally operate your vessel until the document has been surrendered to, and is in the hands of, a Coast Guard Documentation Officer. A document sent to a documentation service does not constitute a legal surrender.

Third, if you have purchased a vessel that has previously been documented, you may not operate the vessel until you obtain a new document or a valid state registration.

Failure to have the proper items available for a Coast Guard Boarding Officer could subject you to a civil penalty of up to $500.

Should you have any questions about the documentation procedure or your particular situation, please contact the Coast Guard Documentation Office at 523-0248.

Dillon to exhibit paintings in Boston gallery

Margaret Dillon, Director of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, will have an exhibit of her recent paintings at the Helen Shlien Gallery at 354 Congress St. in Boston.

The Opening Reception will be Saturday, Feb. 6 from 3-5 p.m. The exhibit will continue through Feb. 27.

The series of paintings that will be shown are table-top still life - the natural arrangement of everyday objects found around the house. Many of them are closer views of the surfaces that were depicted in a previous series of large interiors. Color, pattern and surface textures are emphasized. They are small acrylic canvases with the objects, in most cases, larger than life size.

In addition to being Director of the Art Center, Ms. Dillon teaches summer painting classes and gives Critique sessions. She is an award-winning exhibitor on the South Shore as well as exhibiting in New York where she received first in painting at the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Exhibit at the National Arts Club. Her work has been exhibited at Boston City Hall, Boston Symphony, Prudential Center, Springfield Art League, Boston Visual Artists Union.

She has had one-woman shows at Schnable Gallery, Contemporary Artists Gallery, Bare Cove Gallery and the South Shore Art Center Gallery. She is an associate of the National Society of Painters in Casein & Acrylics and a member of the Copley Society, BVAU, Cambridge Art Assn.

She studied painting and received her degree from Pomona College and did further study at the University of Guadalajara, Circolo di Studenti in Rome, Art Students League and the Boston Art Institute. Her work is in the Collection of Hay Associates and the Charlestown Savings Bank.

Sculpture by Ruth Mordecai Slavet of Weston will be on exhibit in the second gallery and will open simultaneously. Ms. Slavet will be displaying her drawings as well as slab clay pieces.

Ms. Slavet received her BFA from Boston University and also her MFA. She has exhibited at Boston University, the Harbor Gallery, Hayden Gallery at MIT, Brockton Art Center, Worcester Art Museum and is in the Collection of the Boston Public Library.

The Helen Shlien Gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday from 12-5 p.m. and by appointment.

To the children of Cohasset

From the Boston Journal, Oct. 1892

CHILDREN OF COHASSET

In bathing dresses quaint you stand
And track the smooth and sloping sand.
Ere in the gentle waves you play
And laugh amid the foam and spray.
Worn by the wild and gentle tides
You see the fissure's polished sides.
And gather white and yellow shells
Left by the water's parting swells,
You with delighted eyes, behold
The clouds of crimson blent with gold.
Like brilliant curtains bending o'er
Nantasket's distant sunset shore.
Amid the billows far away
You mark the lovely tower of gray;
And, as the twighlight slowly fades
From the low headland of the Glades
You see the beams of Minot's light
On rippling waves and breakers white.
On the far outline how serene
The full moon rises on the scene;
And changes with its silver hue
The woodlands dark and waters blue.

School Board releases evaluation report...

philosophy. He disagreed with a suggestion that a developmental reading course be required for grades seven and eight.

Streeter said 40 to 50 percent of the recommendations could be completed with little or no expense. He said priorities would have to be established regarding the costly proposals.

School Committee Chairman Irene Brown was pleased with a commendation which acknowledged the notable enthusiasm and motivation for learning exhibited by students. Brown said, she was proud of the observation made by the visiting committee and that parents should be proud also.

Supt. Crowell favored an observation which complimented teachers who perform above and beyond contractual obligations to provide assistance to students.

Before the report was completed, Streeter said some suggestions had been resolved. For instance, an adequate classroom setting has been provided to accomodate the teaching needs of the health education program.

Regardless of the accreditation period which the Junior/Senior High School will receive in March, Streeter will be required to submit a two-year progress report to the NEASC.

Streeter said that a follow-up program would commence next month to review all findings of the self-study and recommendations of the visiting committee.

After review of the written evaluation report, the administration should discuss with staff members the visiting team's observations in all areas. Recommendations should then be classified into one of four categories:

1. Those that can be carried out at once.
2. Those that can be accomplished in a short period of time for fulfillment.
3. Those which will require a longer period of time for fulfillment.
4. Those that, for bonafide reasons, are considered invalid.

Following this classification procedure, priorities hould be established and a plan for implementation dopted.

During the second year following evaluation, the principal of Cohasset Junior/Senior High School will be required by the Commission on Public Schools to submit a Two-Year Progress Report to indicate the current status on all recommendations made by the Visiting Committee. In addition, a report on specific recommendations may be required by the Commission prior to the usual two-year interval.

The Two-Year Progress Report will request that all recommendations be classified into one of five categories: Completed, In Progress, Planned for the Future, Rejected, or No Action. The Commission will expect reasons for any recommendations which have been rejected or those items on which no action has been taken.

Criticism from the visiting committee focused on nine general topics: school and community, philosophy and objectives, educational program, student activities, educational media services, student services, school facilities, school staff and administration, and emerging and unique programs (alternative school and health education).

PARTIAL RECOMMENDATIONS

Cohasset Junior/Senior High School should develop a program to provide more marketable skills for students not going on to further education.

A music course should be developed and required as a Junior High School subject. The use of computers should be expanded in the classroom.

Art should be promoted and recognized as an integral part of the high school program.

Incorporate career awareness instruction into existing programs. Provide greater educational opportunities for the non-college bound student. The student activity programs should be extended to include student council and drama activities for seventh and eighth graders.

Expand the Professional Library in all areas of study. Reduce the counseling case load of the Guidance Director. Expand the guidance facilities to include a career center, a conference room and a records room.

Provide adequate ventilation in all areas of the school where it is currently insufficient or non-existent. Continue the "clean-up, paint-up, and fix-up program.

Tighten all loose handrails. Equip all stairways with non-skid edges. Post instructions for emergency evacuation of the school in every classroom and throughout the building.

An annual inventory of all a school property should be taken. Make a greater effort to resolve schedule conflicts which limit program accessibility.

PARTIAL COMMENDATIONS

There is a consistently low drop-out rate of less than one percent. There is a positive attitude from students toward education.

There are extensive course offerings presented to college bound students. The development of a detailed physical education guide for its varied offerings; especially noteworthy is that section developed for students with special needs which meets the needs of students identified by the occupational therapist.

The music and drama programs have won numerous awards in statewide and regional competition. The diversity of athletic programs has maximized student participation.

A great amount of cooperation exists between the public and high school libraries. The staff is used creatively through job sharing. The alternative school has a requirement for student volunteer work

Please play the Steinway before you buy a Yamaha.

Steinways are great pianos. People expect them to sound great, and they are rarely disappointed. That's why pianists are so surprised when they have an opportunity to play Hamaha. Many people actually prefer the Yamaha. They find a deep, rich bass, a full tenor range, clarity on the top end, and a more balanced overall sound.

It's only fair to mention that some people prefer the Steinway. But everyone is impressed with the price. Yamaha grands can be purchased for a little more than half the cost of a Steinway of comparable size. Since there is much less price difference in used pianos than new pianos, the Yamaha grand is a much better investment.

Changes in lunch program at the Osgood

By Sue DeMichele

Last June, a survey was taken of the parents of Osgood School concernign their views of the existing lunch program. The response was impressive—showing the concern of many parents for the content of meals offered their children.

As a result, a group of parents from the Osgood Communications Council have been working with Mrs. Pat Wunschel, School Food Service Director of Cohasset, to determine what changes might be instituted within the school budget and government regulations for school meals.

The following are results of these efforts. Lowfat milk is now an option for the children and many have taken advantage of this. A soup and sandwich meal is offered once a week instead of once in three weeks with a wider selection now available. Soups are remaining warmer, served in cups instead of bowls.

In place of the frequently served baked goods, fruit is offered more often as a dessert. However, because of the high cost of fresh fruit, the fruit is sometimes canned. Since last spring, Mrs. Wunschel has cut in half the sugar content of the homebaked desserts to which she adds fruits and nuts when available.

Whole grained breads are beginning to be introduced with the hope of using them more often. Mrs. Wunschel uses homemade whole wheat bread once a week baked in a ratio of 50% whole wheat and 50% white) and an oatmeal roll once a week.

Besides the content of the lunches, the manner in which they are served is being experimented with. Mr. John Creamer and the teachers and aides in Open Space are trying a switch in the lunch/recess schedule. Traditionally students have had recess following lunch. A result was that children were often not finished and children who did eat well would run on full stomachs. The new approach is to have lunch after recess with five extra minutes allowed for eating. This enables the children to eat at a more leisurely pace. If this arrangement is successful in "open space", it is hoped that it will be used throughout Osgood.

Some items in which the survey showed a large percentage of parents desired change, have not yet been altered. The selection of bag lunches remains the same. 76% of the parents responding to the survey desired whole wheat bread in the lunches. Presently, the whole wheat is offered once a week, but in a 50/50 ratio with white flour. This ratio is used in hopes of interesting more children in whole wheat. Mrs. Wunschel says that the high school students reject whole wheat bread and there is much waste when it is served. Because of the shortage of help in the cafeteria she is not able to make two types of breads—whole wheat for Osgood and white for the high school; therefore, this compromise has been reached. Other sources for bread (including pocket bread) were pursued, but could not compete with the homemade bread at 1 cents a piece. Perhaps at some point, whole wheat (with its benefit of fiber and extra nutrients lost in enriched white flour) will become more acceptable to the students. Dr. Robert Sceery, the school physician, affirms that acquainting children with whole grain at an early age will both benefit their young bodies now and help contribute to better eating habits as adults.

Fresh fruit was strongly advocated by parents for dessert. However, the cost of fresh fruit is 35 cents a piece. To have it more frequently, 15 cents extra would be charge to an already elevated lunch price. Because of Proposition 2½, the price has risen from 65 cents in June to 80 cents in September.

Eighty percent of the parents in the survey wished their children to have raw vegetables instead of cooked ones. Mrs. Wunschel regrets that the cooked vegetables which are bought are frozen. However, a solution agreeable to Mrs. Wunschel is for parents to volunteer to cut raw vegetables for Osgood's lunches. If anyone desires to pursue this, contact Susan DeMichele (383-6192) or Sally Avery (383-6043).

Because these alternations in the lunch program involve reorganizing, Mrs. Wunschel sees change as gradual. Hopefully, these latest changes will compliment the school's new curriculum on nutrition and be the beginning of a school lunch concept promoting better eating habits at an impressionable age.

Getting ready to munch Girl Scout cookies

A firm believer in scouting, Mrs. Debbie Haase of Cohasset knows the importance of the Cookie Sale in raising funds for the Girl Scout programs. Mrs. Haase is the local Service Unit Cookie Chairman of the 1982 Girl Scout Cookie Sale for the Patriots' Trail Council.

Today in the wake of Proposition 2½ and federal budget cuts, cities and towns must depend on well-established organizations like the Girl Scouts to provide extracurricular programs for their youth. The Girl Socuts understand this need, and are responding to it. Every box of Girl Scout cookies purchased insures that the Girl Scouts will succeed.

Proceeds from the Cookie Sale will be used in a variety of ways. These include: financial assistance for local girls to attend camp and wider opportunity events, expanded programs that reflect the changing role of women, and the maintenance of local camp facilities at optimum levels.

Mrs. Haase will be coordinating the staffing of the cookie stations, the cookie distributing and the ordering for the Troop Cookie Managers of Cohasset's 6 troops. If you have not been contacted by a Girl Scut taking cookie orders, please call Ms. Becky Bates at 383-6692 or Mrs. Haase.

Hockey team continues to glide

The varsity ice hockey team collected two wins and a tie last week to stretch their winning streak to 7-0-1 in the South Shore League and 13-0-2 overall.

ROCKLAND, 7-1

Cohasset held a 6-0 lead at the end of two periods versus Rockland, away. Andy Pottenger scored four times for the Skippers while Domenic Campedelli, Jack McNeill and Danny Bowen added one goal each.

Coach Tom Burnell said junior goalie Mark Brown had a superior game with 21 saves in his first varsity start.

ABINGTON, 9-2

Senior right wing Jack McNeill scored six goals in the victory over the Green Wave last Wednesday. Danny Bowen collected three assists while Sean Curran had a goal and two assists.

Campedelli and Pottenger were other scorers for the Skippers. Senior goalie Steve Bowen saved 12 Abington shots on net.

Cohasset led 3-1 at the end of the first period and climbed to 7-1 after two. Coach Burnell said his team qualified for the state tourney with the Abington victory which marks 70 percent of total points won.

DUXBURY, 2-2

Burnell described the Duxbury match-up as an emotional game for both teams. He said, "We were playing for the undisputed right for first place in the SSL. If they won they would have been tied with us in the standings."

Duxbury is 5-1-1 in the SSL having lost to Cohasset the first time they played, 7-3, on Jan. 12.

Cohasset took the early lead off a Danny Bowen wrist shot in the first period. Jack McNeill assisted on the Skipper goal. The Dragons scored twice in the final two minutes of the first period and held the lead until the final minutes of the game.

Jack McNeill flipped the puck into the Duxbury goal with a minute and one half remaining in the game. McNeill's tying goal came on pass from Danny Bowen, who had stolen the puck from an opponent.

Burnell said Cohasset outplayed the Dragons but couldn't score. In fact, the Skippers outshot Duxbury 41-24. Cohasset Goalie Steve Bowen turned away 24 shots.

Gymnastic girls are still unbeaten

By Donna Cogliano

The varsity girls' gymnastics team remained undefeated (8-0), last week, with wins over Hanover and Middleboro.

The Skippers are atop the South Shore League standings and have managed to sail victoriously through the season's first half even though they've been plagued with injuries and illness. The roster of 12 gymnasts has yet to perform at full strength said coach Andrea Palardy.

Until recently senior co-captain Marcy Brown competed in floor exercise with the use of only one hand. Brown, who usually participates in all four events, had the cast removed from her broken hand two weeks ago. Palardy said the break occured in a non- gymnastics related fall.

Eighth grader Susie McMahan returned last week from an illness and is expected to place all-around for the Skippers.

Sophomore Richele Sargent, a beam specialist, recently returned to competition. She had been out with torn ligaments of the knee and hasn't fully recovered from the injury. Coach Palardy said. Sargent is unable to perfect some moves since she can't put her full weight on one leg. Palardy called on Sargent to perform on the uneven parallel bars for the first time, ever, at the Rockland meet.

Coach Palardy predicted that if her squad was at full strength, they would average scores of over 100 points per meet.

Last Friday Cohasset defeated Middleboro 96.1 to 73.6 in a home contest. Co-captain Karen Ekberg took first place in the floor exercise and beam events. She tied McMahon for first on the uneven parallel bars with a 6.0 score.

The Skippers also triumphed over Hanover, 107.4 to 95.9 during league competition last week.

Ekberg placed in every event and won the all-around with 28.6 points. Freshman Julia Sechen placed first in the uneven bars at 6.8. McMahon was second in vaulting and the bars. Ekberg won the floor exercise and was second on the beam.

Against Duxbury two weeks ago, Eckberg swept first place in three events. Cohasset won the meet 103-90.8, with Ekberg scoring 8 points on the vault, uneven bars (6.7), and floor exercise (7.7).

Sechen won the balance beam and placed second all-around with 27 points. Ekberg won the all-around with a score of 28.

Ekberg won the vault, floor exercise, and bars events in helping Cohasset toward a 92.6-85.5 victory over Rockland.

Munchkins help wrestlers win twice

The Cohasset varsity wrestling squad registered two victories last week over Hingham, 65-3, and Walpole, 35-22. Coach John Leone said cheering "munchkins" were instrumental in boosting the Skippers over Walpole in a non-league home contest.

Leone described "munchkin power" as seventh and eighth grade wrestlers, who rang cow bells, hollered and screamed during recent competition. Leone said the spirited wrestlers have grown substantially in team unity, character and attitude.

A new line-up board for home wrestling meets was designed and recently constructed in shop class by team members Gordon Ricketts and Ron Bergenheim. Leone said the wooden stained board looks impressive with blue and white lettering.

Torin Sweeney is still undefeated this season with 10 wins. The Skippers are 5-8 overall and 1-5 in the South Shore League.

Basketball girls fall twice...

The girls' varsity basketball team was defeated last week by Abington and Middleboro.

The Skippers lost to the Sachems in Middleboro last Tuesday, by one point, 57-56. Coach Bill Fallon said his team played poorly on defense but executed well on offense. Cohasset had a chance to win the game near the end but missed a free-throw.

Kate Salerno scored 16 points for Cohasset while Stacy Thompson added 11. Senior forward Madeline Roy collected 11 rebounds and junior guard Gia Barresi contributed 10 points.

Middleboro made 60 percent of their shots from the field. Fallon said, the Sachems shot very well from the outside.

On Friday, Cohasset lost to Abington, 67-38. The Green Wave led 39-14 at halftime.

Fallon said Beverly Mullaney and Alana O'Brien played strong games at the forward position. Salerno scored eight points for the Skippers.

Abington 13-0) is probably the best team in Division 2 this year, said Fallon. The Green Wave was fortunate to have four returning starters aboard their squad.

The Cohasset hoopsters are 7-8 overall and 6-7 in the South Shore League.

...So do boys

The boys' varsity basketball teamed lost to Abington and Middleboro last week.

The Skippers were defeated, 60-38, by Abington last Friday. Jack Maloney scored 14 points for Cohasset while Keith Goff added ten. Cohasset trailed by 10 at halftime, 31-21.

Middleboro triumphed over the Cohasset hoopsters, 86-53 last Tuesday. The Skippers' record slipped to 0-13 in the South Shore League.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

For the few who don't know it yet, Susan Sack and Jan Fossella are the brains behind the "Serendipity" ad we have come to know through the MARINER. Those who have taken advantage of their catering service know the clever, innovative dishes they offer and their letter suggesting a soup party is right in keeping with their flair for the unusual. Sue expresses our thoughts exactly when she writes: "After the holidays it is difficult to come up with a way to have a party that will not break you financially" and here is her favorite hot soup called:

CREAM OF TOMATO WITH COGNAC

3 lb. ripe tomatoes, or 2 lg. cans Italian tomatoes with puree
3 T butter
1 lg. onion, chopped fine
1 tsp. fresh chopped basil
1 pt. light cream
1 T dark brown sugar
Salt and pepper to taste
5 T cognac

For fresh tomatoes plunge into boiling water for 15 sec. Remove stems and pound to a pulp. Canned tomatoes: mash with potato masher, or grind in processor.

Saute onion in butter. Add tomatoes and basil. Simmer 30 min. Puree through food mill, blender or processor again. Heat cream and sugar slowly to near boiling. Place puree in pan and add cream slowly. Salt and pepper to taste. Add cognac. Remove from heat. Rewarm slowly so not to curdle the cream. Do not boil. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serves 8 to 10.

Our gourmet gals hit the proverbial nail right on the head in saying that we all welcome a change after all the heavy eating during the holidays. Sue says: "People enjoy hearty, hot soups this time of year and for a soup party there should be two or three soups to choose from, served with salad, French or Italian bread or rolls, an inexpensive table wine and simple dessert...fix your own ice cream sundaes, or something similar." Here's everybody's favorite.

FRENCH ONION SOUP

2 lg. Spanish or Bermuda onions
3 T butter
1 clove minced garlic
Salt and fresh ground pepper
1 T flour
2 c. rich beef stock (see below)
1 bay leaf
1/4 tsp. thyme
10 slices French bread 1" thick
1 c. grated parmesan cheese

Peel and slice onions thinly. Melt butter and add onions and garlic. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Stir approx. 15 min., until onions are very golden. Sprinkle onions with flour and stir to remove lumps. Pour in liquid. Add bay leaf and thyme. Cover and simmer 40 min. Toast bread, place on top of soup and sprinkle with cheese when served. Sue adds that the stock can "make or break this soup," so here's how to prepare:

BEEF STOCK

1 lb. beef bones
1 lb. veal bones
1 lb. lean chuck
½ T oil
2 sliced carrots
2 sliced onions
1 stalk celery
1 bay leaf
1/4 tsp. thyme
6 peppercorns
1 tsp. salt
3½ qt. water

Saute cut up chuck in oil. Lower heat and add bones, vegs., and brown. Add remaining ingredients. Boil, skim off foam and simmer very slowly three hours. Strain, cool, remove fat when completely cool.

Our "Serendipity" ladies suggest that this kind of relaxed entertaining is especially welcome after a skating party, cross country skiing, or Sunday afternoon before the fire. These recipes are only a start when you consider the many other soups, chowders, bisques, cold soups and even ways of doctoring up canned commercial soups. Call one of us if you care for more.

Just between you and me Claus looks a lot better in person than he does on the television screen.

The man does cut a fine figure, what with a wardrobe as becoming as one might ask. And of course he's tanned to a turn, a fact which serves to enhance anybody. Few of us remember what warm sun and tan mean, having spent the last five months in attic-white bodies and New England.

But I meander. For a couple of weeks I've been titillated by the trials on either side of us, landmark contrasts in legal combat. Up in Boston there has been the case against Barry Locke, classic municipal contest. And down in Newport are all the makings for a movie in the Claus von Bulow litigation.

PATCHES

Von Bulow is accused of having tried to kill his wife, Sunny (Martha). And they, the von Bulows, being among Newport's deliciously rich crowd along that shore line, have attracted followers for the courtroom encounter.

So I went to Newport simply for the flavor of the trial. And there it was in the heavily marbled courthouse in Newport's Washington Square.

The proceedings are on the second floor in a courtroom with handsome light fixtures and beautiful full length windows, arched gracefully at the top.

When the morning session opened last Thursday two defense attorneys and two for the prosecution met with the Judge at his bench for several minutes. It was apparently a satisfying time for the five of them, accompanied, one could gather, by a clean sense of compromise, a few shared smiles, and on to a full morning of motions to be untangled and unraveled.

The defense attorneys are both natty, graying men, nearly as well dressed as their client.

Atty. Fahringer stood before Judge Thomas Needham, invoking his own humility in behalf of his request, and adding to his plea, hands before him now and then, as if in supplication.

Judge Needham is graying sagely at the temples, forestalling similar discoloration elsewhere on his head. He seems a thorough man, not a whit behind any sophisticated presentation from Fahringer & Sheehan. There were moments when there seemed a broader legal contest between Manhattan and Newport, N.Y. and R.I.

Fahringer didn't want vonBulow's statements of April 21, 1981 included in the case. He protested that von Bulow should have had counsel and said as much on the tape.

The prosecution did not share the defense's view. It seemed safe to assume neither side would back what the other requested, other than lunch.

The reporters sat on one side of the room, a group not without its own characters and characteristics. And the spectators were on the other side. And of that gathering some were tanned, many were wearing camel and brown, and had perfectly coiffed hair.

But if one were trying to see something ultra suede, it wasn't easy. I saw people. I speculated about why they were there, friends or family of the accused, of the woman who hasn't come out of a coma since December, 1980...or of the curious.

Judge Needham denied the motion of the defense and went on to another lengthy motion dealing with access to medical information on Sunny von Bulow. There'd been a hint that everyone might visit Clarendon House, the von Bulow home, that day. That would have been something. The April 21 statement had been accompanied by a house search in a visit of about two hours. My house, for example, could be searched probably in 20 minutes and that includes the clothes hamper.

Amazing was the common green and white plastic pitcher on the witness stand, ready for nervous witnesses along with a red and white paper cup. No crystal. Not even breakable. My friend said she had access to a decanter at small claims court.

There was so much fancy footwork, or wordwork in the courtroom. They kept referring to a Johnson case which they deemed appropriate as a guideline for decisions. Then there was recess. And the elegant Claus, like many others, went to the outer lobby for a cigarette. His double breasted cutaway wool suit was complimented by a white shirt, navy blue tie. And he had the finest shoes I've seen. He's taller than I'd have thought, though frankly, I hadn't thought about it. But he's 6'2" anyway. He chatted with a couple people now and then and once I noticed he fought an anger that showed up bright red on his receded hairline.

If there was high drama that day in court it must have been in the lobby because it wasn't in Judge Needham's courtroom. There it was careful, determined, precise. The Judge laboriously concluded his thinking on motions, his chin leaning on his hand as he spoke from a rocking black leather and wood chair.

Beside me a reporter from the Boston Phoenix cracked his knuckles and to my left a man in a suit strongly committed to pin strips, wrote creative shorthand and adjusted his red and black bow tie.

A jury of his peers, recorders, observers, counselors, we were all there on business. There were times when the press and spectators were respectfully bored, yet mindful that proceedings had to be perfect now before the trial could move ahead.

Being nifty rich may have been an attraction to that courtroom for some people. But it was obvious it wouldn't serve as an excuse from being charged with a crime. That still somehow didn't make it feel like a high class crime.

Advisors, school board to meet on budget

Members of the school committee have been invited to discuss the budget with the advisory committee on Thursday, Feb. 11, at town hall.

The school budget as prepared by the superintendent would have to be pared by $100,000 to meet the guidelines put forward by the advisory committee.

Eugene Crowell, superintendent, has been explaining the budget over the past few weeks to school committee members. He does not recommend further cuts in personnel or programs beyond the two-and-a-half teachers taken out of next year's budget due to declining enrollment.

Seahawk hockey report

In District playdown action on Friday night, Coach Barry Resnick's Pee Wee A's were soundly thrashed by Pembroke 6-1. Center Jeff Hartwell accounted for the lone Seahawk tally.

The Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset-Hull Youth Hockey Teams fared much better in league contests, however, as they posted 5 wins and 1 tie while suffering 2 narrow defeats.

The Bantam A's lost their encounter with the league-leaders from Weymouth by a margin of 3-1. Matthew Glennon notched an unassisted goal for the only A's score.

The Bantam B's behind the superb goaltending of John Belsan slipped past Weymouth 2-1. Kevin Richardson & Bobby Vinal provided the Seahawks scoring while Richard Saia was credited with an assist.

Chris Baker & Matthew Cox both dented the nets twice as the Bantam C's thumped Plymouth II 7-2. Rock Sparrow, Joey Mahoney, & Mike O'Donnell also registered goals for the victorious Seahawk skaters. "Playmaker" patches were garnered by David O'Donnell & Jay Cronin as each picked up 3 assists. Additional assists were metered out to Mike O'Donnell (2), Sean Mayo, Cox, Mahoney, Andy McCarthy, & Baker. By Virtue of their solid all around play, the C's receive our vote as "Team of the Week".

The Pee Wee As won their league contest over Weymouth 4-3 as Ned Flaherty hit the target with a pair of bullets. Jeff Hartwell & Mickey McCarthy also gunned in goals to close out the scoring. Assists were given to Hartwell (2), McCarthy (2), & Todd Henry.

The Pee Wee B's lost a heart breaker to Weymouth 4-3. Brian McGovern, James Misakian, & Danny Pompeo scored for the B's while assists were credited to John Meschino, Todd FitzPatrick (2), Pompeo, & Misakian.

Mike Dundon scored a short-handed goal with 1 minute to play to give hs Squirt B teammates a 3-3 tie with Weymouth. Jon Mahoney & Paul Norton also scored for the 2nd place B's while assists were garnered by Mahoney, Kevin Quinn, Dennis Peacock, & Chris Ventolieri. Goalie Scott MacKay was brilliant in front of the nets for the B squad.

Sean Noonan blasted home 4 rockets as Coach Frank McGovern's division-leading Squirt C's rapped Pembroke 5-1. Sean receives the nod as this week's "Marksman" for his outstanding accomplishment. Steve Boardman added the final tally and Eric FitzPatrick earned a "Playmaker" patch as he set up 3 of the scores.

Paul Henderson's "Hat Trick" was the hi-lite of the Mites 6-2 victory over Easton.

He's in...

AT THE START OF THE RACE — Jack Conway takes out nomination papers from Assistant Town Clerk Frances Marks. He officially announced his candidacy for Congress this week.

A couple of champs at Cohasset High

By Donna Cogliano

The Cohasset varsity ice hockey and gymnastics teams have a lot in common lately. Both squads captured South Shore League Championships last week with undefeated records.

The gymnastics squad clinched the SSL title for the second successive year with victories over and Norwell and Rockland last week. The girls remained undefeated with a 10-0 mark.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said in addition to the two recent gymnastics championships, the girls also won the SSL crown in 1977.

The ice hockey team defeated Hanover and Hull last week to earn their first SSL title since 1969.

Chatterton said the squad's 9-0-1 record league record represents the only undefeated season in Cohasset's SSL history. The Skippers hockey team finished 10-5-2 last year.

Cohasset's Rich Evans scored a hat-trick and two assists as his team triumphed over Hull, 9-4. Jack McNeill and Andy Pottenger added two goals for the Skippers while Dom Campedelli assisted on four scores. Danny Bowen set up two Cohasset goals.

Don O'Neill and Lee Wilson scored once each for Skippers. And Joe Hoffman and Mike Nedrow assisted on goals versus Hull also.

Cohasset fired 48 shots at the Hull goalie while senior goalie Scott Ripley turned away 16 Pirate shots on net.

Coach Tom Burnell said he was disappointed, even though the Skippers were the victors, because it was a penalty filled game. There were over 30 penalties awarded throughout the contest.

On Saturday Cohasset secured a 10-3 win over Hanover. The Skippers jumped out to a 5-2 lead at the end of the first period and scored five more goals in the second period. Hanover managed to score a goal, for themselves, and hold Cohasset scoreless in the third period.

McNeill scored a hat-trick and one assist while Nedrow added two goals and an assist to boost Cohasset.

Both Campedelli and Sean Curran scored once

New look coming this spring

Goodbye to the old Hugo's

The old Hugo's Lighthouse was filled with:

—Plates that saw brides smile through uncountable wedding dinners.

—The lobster pool that almost spelled out Hugo's.

—Bar stools that waited through enough liquor to fill Cohasset Harbor.

All that and more went on the auction block Tuesday as the beginning of a new era for Hugo's Lighthouse dawned.

The restaurant is closed today. It will stay closed until sometime in April or May when massive renovations will be completed.

In the meantime more than one young bride will be looking for someplace else to hold her wedding reception. The new owners promise help for people who had made reservations at the historic restaurant.

The place was built back in the 1930's. The first operator named the place Lobster Claw.

In 1940, it became Hugo's Lighthouse under the operation of Hugo Ormo.

The last owner was John Carzis, whose death, two years ago left the ownership with an estate.

Last Monday the estate sole the restaurant to Walter and Edward Guleserian, who own the Sheraton Commander Hotel in Cambridge. The brothers and an investment group paid $1.4 million for the waterfront restaurant.

In his Cambridge office before the auction, one of the Guleserian brothers talked just a bit about the plans for the restaurant.

They are still up in the air with proposals and estimates coming in. It is known that the exterior will be left alone. The interior will be done completely over — a new kitchen is prominent in the plans.

Several architects and interior decorators are putting together proposals still. The decorating theme will be nautical.

"The view is one of the most picturesque on the East Coast," the brother said with some pride of ownership.

"We're going to operate a first class restaurant there. The setting is beautiful. That setting is there today. We're going to redo the interior and compliment it with food."

The menu will continue to be heavily laced with seafood. The capacity will remain about 400.

"I expect the food will be a lot better than it's been," Guleserian said.

"We have the talent plus the interest to run it. It will be owner-run once again. It will regain the pre-eminence it had back a few years ago.

"There's been a vacuum there."

The layout of the bar will change, according to the plans which will be finalized in the next month. It may be located to a location with a waterview. There will be piano music in the new establishment but the organ is slated to go.

So for now a closed sign which emphasizes the word temporarily wards off hungry customers. A green light still shines on the scrolled "Hugo's" written on the mock stone wall on the roof of the place.

Little support for 2½ override

The town will abide by Proposition 2½ — despite the legislature's recent passage of a way to override the tax limitation.

Under the new override legislation, there could be a referendum question on the April ballot asking townspeople to change the budget cap from 2½ percent to 5 or 7 percent.

In some communities, public officials are talking about the override as the possible salvation of the community.

Here no one seems to care to publicly talk of trying for a override.

And Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board of selectmen, said that even if a group did come forth looking for a chance to vote the question this year, it would begin to take effect with the next budget year — also known as Fiscal 1984.

Arthur Clark, the selectmen's secretary, said the board hasn't even discussed the possibility of putting the question on the town election ballot.

"I'd be very much surprised if they'd favor an override," Clark said this week.

"Unless the school department asked for it, I can't imagine where a request would come from. There have been no requests at all to the selectmen."

Assistant Town Clerk Frances Marks said the deadline for a decision on a ballot question would be March 8, the same day nomination papers are due.

Only the selectmen have the right to put the question on the ballot under the special legislation passed to hurry up the override process. Originally the override question had to go on a general statewide election — like the one coming up in November.

For Cohasset the change in timing would have no

Cemetery Committee

Selectmen unanimously voted last Wednesday to maintain the Cemetery Committee with three members instead of five. As a result of the vote the two vacancies on the committee won't be filled.

Sludge dumping

Selectman approved a rough draft agreement from the sewer commissioners which provides for dumping sludge from the proposed new sewage plant at the Cohasset Heights landfill on Route 3A.

Resident increase

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission recently informed selectmen of a 546 estimated resident increase for Cohasset in the summer of '82. Selectmen signed the form from the ABC Commission and said the information was used regarding seasonal licenses.

One-day liquor license

Selectmen granted the Rotary Club a one-day liquor license for their road race on Sunday, April 4. Selectmen Mary Jane McArthur suggested that if beer or wine is sold from bottles or cans that they containers be recycled.

Boat fees draw fire

In a letter to selectmen the Recreation Commission urged the board not to approve a $25 fee for small boats at town floats.

The recreation commission discussed the issue on Jan. 28 and unanimously disapproved of the fee at that time. The commission wrote that the charge represented double taxation. Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie said the input from the recreation commission would also be provided to the Harbor Study committee.

Address dispute

Both families of the disputed 40 Aaron River Road address will meet with Selectmen in an effort to reach a compromise.

The Kruegers and Richmonds with their lawyers, selectmen, and a representative from the assessors will meet soon to find out who can keep the 40 Aaron River Road address which they both claim.

"Let's give this thing one last shot, get everyone together and see if we can get some sort of solution," said Chairman Henry Ainslie. "If we can just sit and talk common sense, it may help more than the legal argument going back and forth."

Andrew and Linda Krueger have been using the address since they moved into their home four years ago. Jack and Lily Richmond said they learned of the address conflict early last fall, shortly after they returned from their honeymoon.

Hugo's closed

Selectmen voted last Wednesday night to allow the closing of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant for eight weeks. Renovations and repairs will be made throughout the restaurant including restrooms, the kitchen, and mechanical devices.

McKinnon office hours

Sen. Allan McKinnon will send a representative to hold office hours at town hall tomorrow (Thursday, Feb. 11) from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Nomination papers

Nomination papers for several candidates may be signed in the selectmen's office at town hall.

Among those there were papers for Selectman Rocco Laugelle, School Committee Member Martha Gjesteby, Moderator Willilam Weeks and Water Commissioner Lot Bates.

All but Weeks are up for re-election. Weeks took over the moderator's post from David Place last summer after Place took a job as general counsel to the Air Force in Washington, D.C.

The only announced town candidate not already an incumbent is Jim Lagrotteria, who's running for selectman.

None of the people up for reelection whose papers aren't yet circulating have indicated there could be a vacancy.

Meanwhile Jack Conway's official announcement of candidacy can be found elsewhere in this issue and Rep. Gerry Studds' office sends out two to three press releases a week.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray lost her only announced opposition recently but local Democrats expect another candidate will surface soon.

Cluster development

Plans for the cluster development at 100 Pond Street continue to be heard before the zoning board of appeals at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 23, at town hall.

The hearing began earlier this month.

The project includes single and multi-unit buildings on land of Frederick Thayer.

The proposal calls for 39 units built on a 23 acre tract that is now mostly woodland and streams.

The planning board has already had two public sessions of a hearing on the plans which are unusual from a few angles.

First it is the first cluster development to move to this stage in town. Approval of the cluster concept went through town meeting last spring.

Second the cluster will have its own sewage treatment plant.

The planning board is scheduled to continue the discussion Wednesday, Feb. 17, when more technical data will be presented.

Mileage allowance

Building Inspector James Litchfield and Wiring Inspector Steve Wigmore will be keeping their flat mileage allowance until the end of the fiscal year.

Come July the selectmen want the 20 cents a mile rule to go into effect.

Neither Litchfield nor Wigmore is pleased by the change that is planned. But then the change almost went into effect last month at 18 cents a mile.

Free use of Town Hall for CCC movies

The Community Center will use town hall free for its children's movie series.

The center will still have to pay an $18 custodial charge under the selectmen's decision but would be exempt from the $30 fee for use of town hall.

Selectmen based their vote on the Center's costs and receipts. For the first film there was an $80 rental fee while the one dollar admission charge totalled $70. And for the second film at an $85 rental charge the Center had $78 in admission receipts.

Member Rocco Laugelle said, "I think the time has come...if we can't give the center something for them to give the kids in the winter...if we can't help the kids in town, then we may as well close up shop."

A motion by Laugelle to allow free use of town hall by all non-profit organizations which serve the youth in town was taken under advisement.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she agreed with Laugelle in principle but wanted to thoroughly check which groups would be considered. McArthur didn't want to overlook any organizations. She said there is always the possibility that another group might come along after the policy is set and "we don't want to have to make exceptions along the way."

Selectmen meet

Selectmen will meet with town department heads at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 11, at town hall.

Chief warns on liquor violations

If disturbances continue in the Village bars, Police Chief John DeBassio may take action against the license holders.

Last weekend there was what they call in the police log a general disturbance at the Greenhouse. The weekend before there was a similar happening at the Red Lion Inn.

The chief puts the blame squarely on the young clientele of the two establishments.

"But it's up to the owner to decide whether it's necessary to have an off-duty police officer on a special detail," DeBassio said.

"If they don't provide for the safety of their customers and these problems continue, then I as licensing agent will deal with them in terms of the violations occuring.

"Any disturbance or disorder can be enough to warrant a hearing before the selectmen and can affect the license."

The detail at the Red Lion was scheduled for a temporary phase-out before the last incident there.

"We knew the detail would be dropped four or five days before the incident took place," the chief said.

The chief says that both the Red Lion and the Greenhouse attract a "younger" clientele late in the evening.

He doesn't have much hope in ending the problem in bars which he says is a problem everywhere.

"Alcohol tends to be the problem and it will go on until society gets around to dealing with it."

Liquor,sign complaints plague Ko Ko Island

KoKo Island — in the same spot once filled by the Ground Round — serves well prepared Polynesian food in a renovated atmosphere.

The new restaurant also has town officials busy dealing with complaints.

First there is the charge that the establishment served liquor to a minor. That issue will be dealt with by selectmen during their regular meeting at town hall tonight (Wednesday).

Then there are the ongoing series of complaints about the choice of colors for the restaurant's signs. Red and yellow seem to a good number of residents to be out of place in stately Cohasset.

It was probably the color of the signs that first attracted the attention of Building Inspector James Litchfield.

Litchfield told officials of the restaurant recently that two of the three signs on the property violate town bylaws. (Actually the third sign also violates the sign blylaw but the property has a variance for that one).

His decision on the two smaller (also red and yellow) signs, pointing out that parking is in the rear, was appealed.

The zoning board of appeals has scheduled a hearing for Tuesday, Feb. 23, on the question.

KoKo Island isn't mentioned in the hearing notice buy Dwyer Realty Trust at 779 Chief Justice Cushing Highway is.

The town's sign bylaw calls for 40 square feet of sign allowed for every 200 foot of frontage. That puts the main sign about 60 feet over the requirement with its 100 plus square feet.

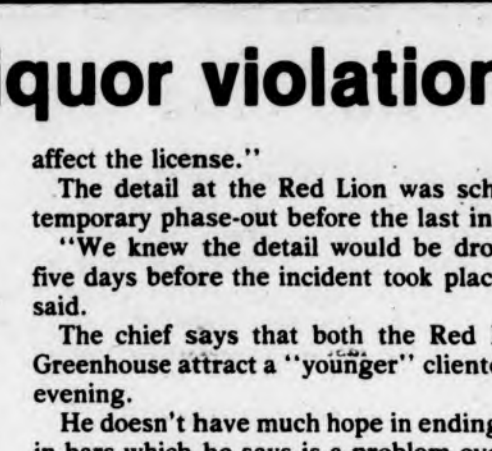
A few lights are kept on inside at night.



The roofs have varying pitch and decoration themselves. There's a total of two row boats placed in different sections, one stretch of white fence with rope and many chimneys of various description.

Until this week's auction the inside decor was just as cluttered and disjointed as the roof.

But the whole picture added up to tremendous charm.

"Our main change will be better food," Guleserian said.

T'was blue & gold for Pack 38

There were blue and gold decorations all over the Unitarian parish house when Pack 38 sat down to pizza and talk of good sportsmanship Sunday.

The pack, which consists of four dens and a Webelo, looked spiffy enough for parade march. Uniforms, in keeping with the Blue and Gold theme dinner, were wrinkle-free and decked out with badges and awards.

Placemats which came cub-scout-made for the event were construction paper versions of the theme. The cubs had worked on the mats in their dens, marking out places for family members they expected to attend the special event.

The big draw was a real live Bruin — Mike O'Connell.

Mike plays defense with the Boston Bruins.

He told the gathering about the value of sportsmanship. The cub scouts were thrilled.

The 26-year-old hockey player now lives in nearby Scituate with his wife, Rosemary.

On Dec. 18, 1980, the Bruins acquired Mike in trade for Al Secord who went to Chicago. He now has a multi-year contract with the club.

More than one young cub left the parish hall with thoughts of how he too could grow up in Cohasset, play two seasons at Archbishop Williams High, and move on to professional stickmanship.

'We believe in marriage week'

By Jeff and Ellie Waal

Several Cohasset couples have been busily engaged in preparations for "We Believe in Marriage Week."

Ed and Betsy Connolly are chairman of the local committee which will be staffing a booth at the Hanover Mall on Feb. 12 and 13. John and Gail Convery, Dave and Marie Buckley and John and Joanne Lennon will be among those working at the booth. They will be giving away heart-shaped chocolate lollipops and will have information about Marriage Encounter weekends.

Other local couples involved in this state-wide effort are planning to participate in the motorcade and rally from Suffolk Downs to Faneuil Hall Marketplace on Sunday, Feb. 14. Joe and Barbara Potolicchio, Rose and Peter Collins and Jeff and Ellie Waal are searching for just the right vehicle to decorate and drive in the motorcade.

Anyone interested in more information about "We Believe in Marriage Week" activities may contact any of these Cohasset couples.

Is teacher sharing feasible?

Will Cohasset move into the area of teacher sharing with other school systems or exchange courses or something else?

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said he has questions to be resolved about some of the plans — but the Hanover school system is already offering Spanish 4 and Advanced Placement American History at night under its program with Quincy Junior College.

School Committee member Martha Gjesteby asked what might be happening on the ideas of teacher sharing and course exchange since a small system like Cohasset with a dwindling school enrollment may soon find some courses too small to offer.

"There are still a lot of questions," Crowell said. "For instance who's going to pay for the course and what about transportation. But this is going on right now."

High School Principal Richard Streeter told the committee the system already sent one student to Norwell to take German.

"These schemes are coming hot and heavy," Crowell said.

Diana Kornet said she couldn't see why the system couldn't pay transportation for an A.P. course if it pays for a student taking vocational courses.

"I'm hoping that time won't come," Crowell said.

"You know what's going to happen if you start to lose your A.P. courses."

Jack Langmaid, committee member, said the system would lose students to the private schools.

After the meeting one official pointed out Cohasset has a very small percentage of eligible children in private schools. There are only about 175 Cohasset children in private schools and that includes the private kindergartens.

Lagrotteria taps Mrs. Lagrotteria as campaign chief

In keeping with his slogan "A Family Man For A Family Town," Selectman Candidate Jim Lagrotteria of 104 Howe Road has appointed his wife, Dorothy, as the chairman of his campaign.

He appointed Margaret Oliver of 45 Oak Street as the treasurer of his campaign.

Dorothy and Jim are in the process of appointing friends to various other committee assignments.

"However, my real workers," says Dorothy, "will be my seven children living at home." "From Carlo, who is 8 to John, who is 19, they will handle our mailings." Truly a family effort and commitment.

"Having your wife as Campaign Manager should cut down on phone calls, and I'm sure will provide lively discussions at dinner. And I look forward to providing my family with first-hand exposure to town politics," Jim says.

Dorothy says that all contributions should be made to "Committee to Elect Jim Lagrotteria" and mailed to Mrs. Paul Oliver, 45 Oak Street, Cohasset, 02025.

around town

☐Linda Chapman has made the Dean's List at Bowdoin College. A senior majoring in mathematics, Linda is a 1978 graduate of Cohasset High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Chapman of Old Coach Road.

☐When a busy mother of three teenaged boys decided to go to college for a degree, it's a big decision and when she finishes, it's certainly an occasion of note. Ask Maryanne White, who recently finished up a B.S. in Business Management with a special emphasis on Marketing at UMass - Boston.

A project for one of Maryanne's courses was planning and implementing a marketing plan for a special mini-car, an assignment which she really enjoyed and into which she put her usual determination and enthusiasm. It's great to hear Maryanne relate her many and varied experiences at college and one gets the impression that she not only learned a lot but also had a good deal of fun doing it. Congratulations, Maryanne!

☐Birthday greetings to Marie McCarthy who recently celebrated the important occasion. An especially thoughtful card was sent to Marie from a friend reminding her that when it comes to birthdays, we're all in the same boat, some of us have just been aboard longer.

☐The weather this winter forced the cancellations of many events but the monthly dinners at the George H. Mealy Post not only went on as scheduled but were sellout successes, as well. We heard that a recent Italian feast was especially popular thanks to the cooking expertise of Rocky Laugelle and everyone is looking forward to the next event which will feature Polish cooking.

☐Cohasset High School will host a state sectional wrestling tournament at the high school on Friday, Feb. 19 and Saturday, Feb. 20, in which 27 high schools and approximately 325 athletes will participate. It will be the first time a sectional tournament has been held in this area and should be especially exciting with the excellent record of our team, this year.

Athletes will weigh in in the morning and the tournament will run all day, both days. Parents of wrestlers and members of the Booster Club will sponsor an all day concession stand in the school cafeteria for participants and spectators.

☐The Northeast Regional Conference of the National Council for International Visitors will be held in Boston during the last week of February. There will be a series of workshop discussions and keynote speakers from Washington and other states.

The Center for International Visitors of Greater Boston is a locally sponsored, non-profit organization which plans professional programs, sightseeing tours and home hospitality for overseas visitors. Members are from all over the world and are selected by U.S. embassies for their potential leadership qualitities in their own field.

Shirley Marten of Nichols Road is on the Board of Directors and has recently edited the quarterly newsletter. In it is a copy of a letter addressed to her from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher recalling and praising the center and its good work. Her Anglo-American relationship began in 1967 when she first visited the states with the International Visitors Program.

A trip to the People's Republic of China from April 16 through May 9 is planned and all members and volunteers of NCIV across the United States are invited to participate. If you wish to know more about the center's activities and share in its international relationships, call Shirley at 383-9829.

☐It may have been just any old Sunday of '82 for most people, this past week, but on Surrey Drive, it was "the year of the Dog." Because of John Kuhn's predilection for Chinese Food, his family and neighbors decided on an Oriental theme for his surprise birthday.

His wife, Winnie, was determined that the event would be a surprise and the logistics were so carefully worked out that it was just that. As he was greeted by the many wellwishers, John, who is never at a loss for words responded with a chuckle, "I can't think of anyone more deserving."

There was a Mai Tai punch and the homemade eggrolls by Dan Volungis that disappeared in a flash. There were several Schezwan dishes including a pancake with a special filling which was delicious. And, the especially prepared fortune cookies were a huge success. Finally, there were the many thoughtful and personally selected gifts which everyone enjoyed watching John open.

Murray seeks constituents' comments on drunk driving legislation

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray points out that much has been said in the last couple of months on the issue of drunk driving. Some are calling for stiffer penalties, some for mandatory sentences and some for new laws.

The real problem lies in the lack of enforcement and of existing laws. Current law states that a person convicted of driving under the influence of alcohol and certain drugs shall be fined between $35 and $1,000, imprisoned from two weeks to two years, or both, and shall lose his or her driving license for a year, or depending on the circumstances, permanently. In 1980 (the last year for which we have statistics) 11.9% of those arraigned for drunk driving received probation or one or more of these punishments.

The alternative to fines, jail and/or loss of license is a law adopted in 1974, which allows a judge to assign persons arraigned for drunk driving to education, rehabilitation or treatment programs. In 1975, these programs were made available as a basis for continuing a case without a finding of guilty or not guilty. In 1980, 97% of those whose cases were continued participated in these programs. Of drunk drivers found guilty in 1980, 36% were assigned to these programs in lieu of penalties, she stated.

"The problems we face are in the enforcement and consistency of the courts. The courts have to crack down and that's why my bills call for mandatory sentencing under the present laws so that offenders will no longer be treated lightly in any area of the state," she said.

While educating the public, particularly teenagers on the very real dangers of drinking and driving are needed, the present law must be enforced. The law should also cover drinking while driving.

"I would appreciate your views on this issue. Please write to me at Room 134, State House or call 722-2400.

"And drive safely," Rep. Murray said.

WIRING INSPECTIONS BILL

Legislation permitting towns to employ licensed electricians to act as wiring inspectors was passed in the last legislative session. The new law takes effect upon its acceptance by vote of the Board of Selectmen.

Rep. Murray co-sponsored the bill. While abiding by the conflict of interest statue, it permits a local electrician to work as a wiring inspector and provides for the appointment of an assistant wire inspector to inspect his work. The legislation was filed in response to a regulation passed by the State Wiring Board which would not allow a local electrician to be appointed as wiring inspector thus causing the added burden to towns of requiring someone from another town to inspect all work. The new law permits a wiring inspector to be appointed in his own town and hire an assistant to inspect his own work.

With the backing of the Local Government Caucus, a bipartisan organization committed to the promotion and development of issues affecting local governments, this legislation was finally signed into law. In his effort to keep down the cost of local government, special credit should go to Governor King.

Voke cutbacks

This week School Supt. Eugene Crowell went to officials of the state Department of Education to tell them what he thought of their plan to cut out all aid for vocational education.

Now, it's true the figure amounts to only $4,000 or so in a budget of over $3 million for the school system.

But the cutback comes at a time when only six Cohasset students are going to the regional vocational school. That's six out of 854. Somehow it seems vocational education isn't being properly utilized in this white collar community.

Is that because there are no students particularly suited for working in fields that don't require a college degree?

Is that because parents keep hoping that might not be true?

Or is it because the orientation of the school system is heavily set into a college track?

We back Supt. Crowell in his efforts, which we hope will be loud and effective, to alter the pattern of the state bureaucracy.

The school budget, like every other town department, is hard-pressed in dealing with the reality of Proposition 2½. The cuts won't come from the area of advanced placement courses — and that is a wise decision. The brightest of our children deserve a chance to learn and expand their minds.

But we as a community have other children, too. There are the special education courses that cost so much and seldom send off college bound graduates.

There are children who can best be served by putting more money into computer equipment with a chance of a sure job after high school graduation.

There are children who can best be served by increasing the system's emphasis on vocational education — or at least increasing the exchange opportunities with other systems for vocational education.

It seems unlikely that the children of the most affluent families will be affected by the state's decision to pull out of subsidy for vocational education in the wealthier communities.

What does seem likely is the few children of less than average means here will be the ones whose educational program will find its opportunities dwindling.

We wonder if that's what Reagan's new federalism is supposed to do.

We hope Supt. Crowell can turn that around.

But no report for now

LWV reaches decision on casinos

The Cohasset League of Women Voters have a consensus on the legalization of casino gambling.

But officials of the League aren't going to release the opinion now or at any other forseeable time.

Last week members of the League from Cohasset, Hingham and the Marshfield/Duxbury chapters put together a background session on the various aspects of casino gambling at the Unitarian Parish House.

The meeting brought out facts gleaned in the ongoing statewide League study like the fact that crime increases in areas in a casino, so does traffic, so also do property values and state or community revenue.

The three League chapters worked on studying different portions of the gambling question. The Cohasset chapter working under the leadership of Sharon Becker studied the social impact, the Hingham chapter looked at environmental concerns and the Marshfield/Duxbury chapter delved into economics.

After the Thursday panel discussion, members of the Cohasset chapter discussed the 10 questions on the statewide study and found a consensus.

Barbara Bliss, one of the co-presidents of the chapter, explained why she couldn't release even a general outline of the consensus.

"This is not an autonomous chapter. We're part of a state study," she said. "Every other chapter in the state is looking at the question and arriving at their own conclusions. Our report will be read and collated into something that will be the consensus of the consensus.

"Ours is meaningless by itself."

The local chapter will not be able to speak up, should its results differ from those statewide, under rules of the League, Mrs. Bliss explained.

The various chapters have until March 19 to turn in their consensus reports to the state. The state results are expected in April.

The same presentation given in Cohasset last week was given Tuesday night in Hingham and will be presented at 7:30 tonight (Wednesday) at the Home Federal Savings Bank on Route 139, Pembroke.

Mrs. Becker said her group worked hard to avoid drawing conclusions from the facts compiled in the study presentation.

"It was a great volume of work but it was fun," Mrs. Becker said after the distribution of data.

Little support for 2½ override...

effect unless the annual town meeting also decided to postpone action on the budget — as Hingham officials have suggested. Because the annual budget comes for a vote on town meeting floor before town election, anything other than postponement would mean the town would have to live under Proposition 2½ for this year anyway.

Ainslie said he could see no reason for postponing budget action even if there was a ballot question.

"It would just complicate things," he said.

"It seems that legislation (for override) isn't what it seems anyway. Even the override is getting more confusing all the time."

He suggested that since the school department was hardest hit by the budget reductions of Proposition 2½, the department might want to see the mandate overridden.

"My personal feeling is we would not initiate the override vote but if a large group of people want to vote on it, we would feel obligated to put it on the ballot."

Meanwhile there have been some passing remarks about how an override would make a difference in the school budget at school committee meetings but no serious discussion or agenda item on the topic.

One political bystander said she thought any of the incumbents up for reelection in April would have to be crazy to be part of a group seeking an override.

The school budget, as presently proposed by the administration, has no new program, nor does it have any program cuts. There are two-and-a-half teachers to be laid off due to declining enrollment.

Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, said this week the rule of thumb for teacher reduction is one teacher for a loss of 50 students.

But the school budget as proposed, with only increases for negotiated raises, would exceed the Proposition 2½ guidelines, set by the advisory board, by $100,000.

Crowell has explained that if the town's valuation increases with the completion of revaluation, he would only be $30,000 over the limit and he feels he could handle that sort of disparity someway.

Survey results still coming in, results next week

Mariner survey results are still trekking into the office, through P.O. Box 71 in Cohasset and the Colonial Pharmacy in the Village.

With the batch that came in today, an accurate count is impossible for this week. We can tell you that our weekend tallies showed basically the same results as the ones published last week. Casinos are still unpopular and so is the legal fee to fight the tennis court at the end of Gammons Road.

Gypsy moth spraying with Sevin, the most powerful chemical allowed, is taking a surprisingly strong pro vote.

The North Cohasset fire station is something most want to sell and commercial haulers should pay some fee to dump, the results indicate. Exact numbers will be in next week's paper.

The following remarks on the question on signs came in along with one questionaire. We agree heartily with the writer on the overall question but have to say our preference in architecture is not pseudo-colonial.

"In completing this survey, I would like to add some thoughts of my own regarding question #16.

"A town as quaint and beautiful as Cohasset should be embarrassed by some of the signs and buildings along Rt. 3A. It would seem to me that there could be a commission (be it Historical or whatever) which could have the final say in the design of buildings and signs in this town. Bright orange and yellow neon signs do nothing but offend the eyes of travelers along 3A. And some of the buildings are most unattractive (i.e. Jonathan Livingston area).

"Why those buildings could not be designed to be

Dukakis sweeps King & O'Neill at Democratic Caucus

There was a clean sweep of the Democratic caucus for Michael Dukakis Saturday, leaving the slates for other gubernatorial candidates out in the cold.

Donna McGee, chairman of the Democratic Town Committee, was pleased with the results. She happens to be one of the elected delegates.

The Cohasset caucus followed the trend of the South Shore to back the ex-governor. In the Norfolk and Plymouth county area designated for coordination by Sen. Allan McKinnon, 100 of 105 possible delegates went to Dukakis.

McKinnon spent Monday morning thanking people who contributed to the effort.

Besides McGee, the town's delegates include Mary Richard, Fred Koed and Ned Tebbetts.

The alternates, also committed to Dukakis, are Ubi DiBenedetto and Margy Charles.

Over 100 registered Democrats were in the hall when the caucus voted, according to McGee, who had a Republican act as registrar to insure impartiality.

She stepped down from the chairmanship during voting for the female delegates.

The slate committed to Gov. Edward King came in second in the ballotting.

That group - which won't be casting any votes come the Democratic state convention in Springfield - was Mary Mack, Eileen O'Keefe, Joe Buckley and Joe McDonald.

"The King people just hadn't done enough work," McGee commented.

One of the rules of the caucus was that to vote a person had to be a registered Democrat before Dec. 31.

"There were Republicans and Independents turned away," McGee said. most of those people were with King.

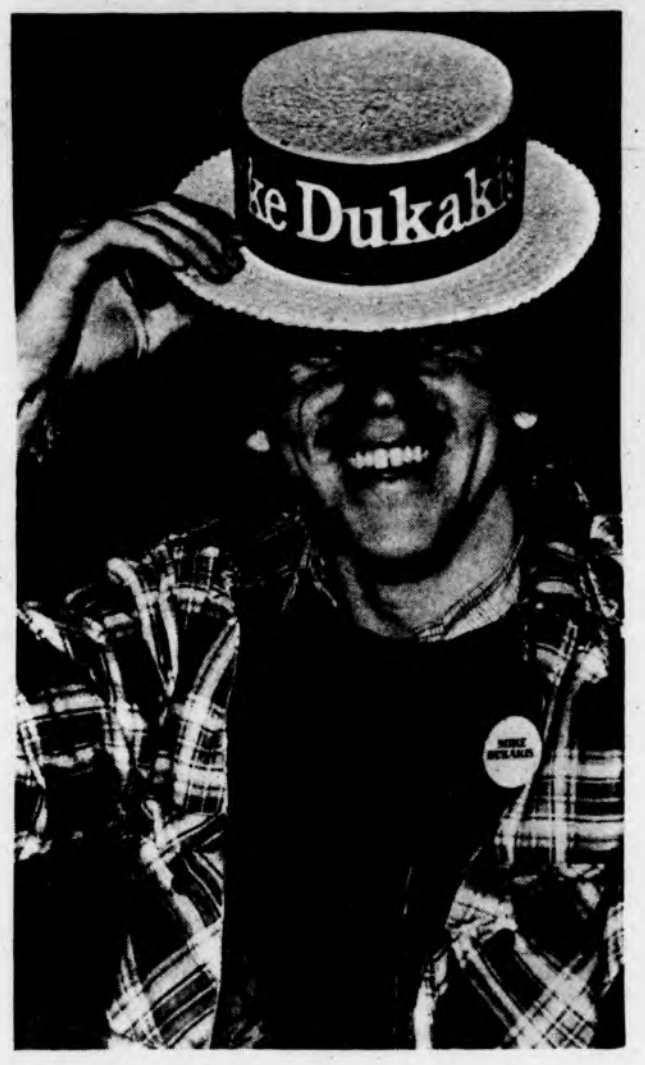
The slate for Lt. Gov. Tom O'Neill came in last place in the caucusing. On the South Shore O'Neill took no delegates.

The local slate included: Tim Smith, the town's O'Neill coordinator, Dan Kearney, Karen Corcoran and Mary Healey.

McGee pointed out that the 10 towns on the South Shore have provided the biggest single block of votes for Dukakis.

"Allan (Sen. McKinnon) and Norma Fenochetti (his aide) can take the credit for that," McGee said.

"The people here did the work."



She went on to explain that in a campaign this early gathering of workers provides something no amount of campaign spending can.

"All these people who've done the work are now committed to Dukakis. Michael has nowhere to go but down from here," she said, referring to the stickier campaign issues ahead.

She said her people spent the past two months organizing for the caucus. King workers began calling heavily just recently.

"King has been trying to dismiss the whole convention process, saying the grass roots Democrats are a bunch of liberals.

"But what the results really mean are that the people who support Michael are better organized.

"When I hear the governor endorsing the Reagan federalism, it gets my hair up. How does he expect Democrats to feel when the governor endorses that which helps the rich the most?"

She referred to the coalition that brought King into office as the hate groups stirred in one pot.

McGee guessed the loss of five delegates in Hanover to King was due to support of the local legislator there for the King slate.

It's official, Conway will seek congressional seat

Jack Conway of Cohasset, a prominent businessman and civic leader, will run as a Respublican in his bid to unseat four-term U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset.

The "crucial need to create more and higher-paying jobs in the economies of the South Shore, Cape Cod and New Bedford," will be the focal point of his campaign, Conway said.

The former President of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce said, "We need a businessman to carefully shape the future in the tenth Congressional district."

"Sweeping changes are in store for Massachusetts as President Reagan copes with major revisions in aid-to-states fiscal policies," said the former chairman of New England Realtors for Reagan.

"I think I proved (during Reagan's campaign for President) I can work well with the Republican administration, as well as with the President," Conway observed.

Conway plans to campaign full-time and will turn over the presidency of the Jack Conway, Realtor Company to his partner, John R. Reardon of Scituate.

Moving up in the 26-sales divisions firm to replace Reardon as executive vice president will be Dick Cahill of Quincy, now the company's Vice President for its Quincy division.

Conway also conferred this week with his partners in the Northern Mortgage Company, the Jack Conway and William M. Wade Insurance Companies at the Satuit Restaurant in Scituate; all of whom agreed to take on additional company responsibilities.

Conway said he feels he knows the needs of the voters in the tenth district because his business activities over the past quarter-of-a-century covered virtually the same geographical area.

State political leaders were sounded out by Conway before he announced his bid and he plans to actively seek national GOP leaders' support.

"Then, too," Conway noted, "I've always been pretty much of a middle-of-the-roader with a conservative leaning in fiscal affairs, and I'm already getting a lot of positive support from both Democrats and Republicans."

An active opponent against a proposed gambling casino in Hull, the 58 year-old candidate addressed some 300 members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce on the issue. The Chamber subsequently also came out in opposition to the gambling casino.

Currently President of the Plymouth County Development Council, he is a former President of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, and the RELO Inter-City Relocation service of Chicago, Ill.

A former vice president of the Plymouth area Chamber of Commerce, he is presently a member of the Brockton, Falmouth, Scituate and Cape Cod Chambers, as well as a former President of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

A former trustee of the St. Michael's College in Vermont, he was the Massachusetts Association of Realtors' Realtor of the Year and is a former vice president of the National Association of Realtors.

He is presently a director of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, and has been nominated as a trustee for Quincy Junior College, and is a director of the Committee to Preserve Paddocks Island, off Hull.

Conway started what is now New England's largest privately-owned real estate firm with a small office in Hingham in 1957. Prior to that, he was a sportswriter for the old Boston Record American and covered all the "Rocky" Marciano fights. His father had been a columnist for the paper under the name, "Mr. Boston."

He will be joined on the campaign trail by his wife, Patti, who will take a leave of absence from her position with Catholic Charities of Brockton. His son, Jack, works for the Ft. Lauderdale Evening News in Florida, daughter Barbara is attending college in Providence, R.I. and daughter Carol works in Boston and lives at home.

Campaign spokesman, Bruce W. McLain, will take a leave of absence from his position at the Conway Company's Director of Public Relations, to assist in the "Call Conway to Congress" campaign.

more in keeping with colonial styles when they are being constructed is a matter which should be given more consideration in the future.

"When you think about it, Cohasset has the only stretch along Rt. 3A (from Hingham to Marshfield) with such a hodgepodge (spelling ?) of unattractive businesses and buildings. Some are even vacant and should be torn down.

"As a Cohasset resident, I feel the approach into our lovely town could be and should be greatly improved."

Osgood hosting study on autistic children

Osgood School is hosting a small group of educators doing a national study on education for autistic children.

Autistic children are severely handicapped in that they are deeply withdrawn. Autism is considered an emotional illness.

The beginning of the training program was last week as five specialists from as far away as Calfornia began the first of three sessions.

Steve Hart, special education coordinator for the system, told the committee the study is being done in two states — Massachusetts and Colorado.

Classes will require tuning device and notebook. Guitar rentals are available for $15 to $20 for the course.

Rep. Murray receives commendation

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, received the commendation of the Mass. Municipal Association for supporting the successfui efforts on behalf of local government during the 1981 legislative session.

Noting that the 1981 session required a "series of very difficult decisions" on the part of legislators, the commendation from the statewide municipal organization described the representative as displaying "sensitivity to the problems of local government and awareness of the need for state action on behalf of municipalities."

"This was a year in which the cities and towns of the Commonwealth could not have survived without the willingness of the legislature to cushion the impact of Proposition 2½ by providing increased local aid and greater local flexibility," said Executive Director James Segel in thanking the representative.

"The Association," added Segel, "extends its thanks for efforts on the floor, for votes on the issues, and for work in committee which supported and promoted legislation necessary for local government."

Among the actions taken by the legislature in its 1981 session were appropriation of $265 million in new local aid, adoption of new laws that place control of county budgets in the hands of cities and towns (which pay county costs), enactment of new parking fine legislation that will allow communities to keep all proceeds from fines, and passage of civil service reform. "We owe ouir warmest thanks to the legislature as a whole and to this legislator for dedicated and effective effort," Segel concluded.

Wrestlers win one, lose one

The varsity wrestling team defeated Rockland, 38-21, last week, and fell to Middleboro 32-24.

The Middleboro meet was a close one. Coach John Leone said it came down to the wire and his team had a chance to win. The Skippers improved significantly from their first meet with the Sachems when Cohasset lost, 50-17.

Senior co-captain Torin Sweeney, a 134 pounder, was pinned by Middleboro's Mike Abacherli for his first loss this season. Leone said Sweeney had easily beaten his opponent earlier in the season and that is why he competed at the higher weight class (141 pounds) in last week's Middleboro bout.

The Sachems scored three pins and won six of 12 weight classes while senior co-captain J.T. Price and Mike Ellis pinned their opponents to boost the score for Cohasset.

Other winners for Cohasset were: Paul Igo, 10-3, at 100 pounds; Rick Rourke, 9-2, at 107 pounds; Chris Mahoney, 13-7; Gordon Ricketts, 12-10.

Against Rockland last Thursday, Cohasset scored five pins and won eight of 12 weight classes for win number six.

Rick and Dave Rourke pinned their opponents and so did teammates, Ellis, Ricketts and Bob Donahue.

Torin Sweeney secured a 17-3 win over Eric Martin in the 134 pound weight class.

Igo and Price clinched victories for Cohasset by scores of 8-6 and 10-9 respectively.

The Skippers are 2-6 in the South Shore League and 5-9 overall.

The Division 2 South Sectional wrestling tournament will be held at Cohasset High School on February 19 and 20. Wrestlers will be competing from 27 area towns. Coach Leone said, "We are very excited about hosting it and we're looking forward to it."

CHS to host wrestling sectionals

On Friday, Feb. 19 and Saturday, Feb. 20, Cohasset High School will be hosting the South Sectionals Wrestling Tournament with 27 schools participating.

An exciting two days of top-notch Division II high school competition is scheduled. Matches will be held in both the upper and lower gyms at Cohasset High School on Pond Street directly off Rte. 3A. South Shore residents will have an opportunity to view their favorite teams and wrestlers in continuous action both days, culminating with the finals Saturday night.

The Cohasset Boosters Club and the host teams' parents will be providing food and drinks in the high school cafeteria. T-shirts commemorating this first-time event will be on sale at the tournament.

A proclamation for Kathi Aguero

This proclamation was given to Kathi Aguero on her last day at the Osgood School. A special assembly was held for her...students and teachers gave her a flowering plant, a book of their poems and newsclippings from her residency titled "Words To Remember Us By," and they sang her a song.

She will come back to Cohasset on Saturday, Feb. 27, to conduct a writing workshop for Osgood students and she and Lewis Hyde will give a joint poetry reading at the Osgood School on Tuesday, March 9, beginning at 7:30 p.m. They will both discuss their residencies, have some students present to read student poems, and they will read their own poetry.

THE JOSEPH OSGOOD SCHOOL
FROM THE OFFICE OF THE PRINCIPAL
John F. Creamer
1982

WHEREAS: Kathi Aguero came to us just four short weeks ago and has become such a delightful member of our staff, and

WHEREAS: She has shown such warmth and kindess to all of the children at Osgood, and

WHEREAS: She has helped the children become more aware of the richness of words and the magic of poetry, and

WHEREAS: We will miss her and want her to feel always a part of our school.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, John F. Creamer, Principal, Joseph Osgood School, Cohasset, Massachusetts, do hereby proclaim Kathi Aguero as an honorary member of the Joseph Osgood School Staff with all of the rights and privileges implied thereby.

Signed in the Executive Chambers of this School on this 5th day of February in the year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred, and eighty-two.

each with two assists. Danny Bowen set up three Cohasset goals. Other goal scorers for the Skippers were Pottenger and Wilson.

Goalie Scott Ripley was credited with an assist on a Cohasset goal. Other players with assists were: Joe Becker, Dave Ormiston and Rich Evans.

All three Cohasset goalies played for one period each versus Hanover. Ripley stopped seven shots. Senior Steve Bowen had eight saves and junior Mark Brown turned away seven pucks.

Cohasset is 15-0-2 overall and one of the few unbeaten teams remaining in the state. The boys have three games left on their schedule plus the all-star game this Saturday.

Drought ends for basketball boys

The boys' varsity basketball team won their first game of the season on Monday after 16 tries. The Skippers beat Holbrook in Cohasset, 60-43.

Guy Martin was the game's leading scorer with 19 points. Tom O'Brien and Dan Anderson contributed 14 points each toward the Cohasset victory.

Coach Ed Minelli said point guard Jack Maloney had a tremendous game at the point guard position.

"He controlled the tempo of the game and directed the offense very well," said Minelli.

Leading rebounders for Cohasset were: Martin, O'Brien, Jimmy Leonard and Andy Songer.

The hoopsters' record stands at 1-16 with a game remaining. Holbrook is also 1-16 and tied for last place in the South Shore League with Cohasset.

School committee briefs

Boosters buy track shorts

The Booster Club will buy track shorts for the spring teams, according to School Committee Member Martha Gjesteby. She told the rest of the committee Monday that the Boosters voted this week to buy shorts for both boys and girls.

Budget proposal

The budget proposal for the junior/senior high school which was looked over by school committee members this week totals $2.1 million or $220,480 more than the present budget.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the budget actually reflects a decrease because two years of negotiated raises are built into the difference.

Contract phrasing

School committee this week discussed the contract phrasing in executive session during part of a two-night session on the budget. The committee looked over budget matters on Monday and Tuesday.

Sports teams praised

Several school committee members complimented members of various high school sports teams for the records beaten this year.

Irene Brown, committee chairman, began the round of praise by pointing out the hockey team is undefeated with three games to go and is the South Shore League champs.

Dick Conley, committee member, agreed and added that he wanted to also congratulate the girls' gymastics team which is also undefeated.

Martha Gjesteby, committee member, said she agreed with both and added that the wrestling matches have been well attended and the team is also doing well.

Everett Dorr to retire

Everett Dorr is retiring from the school system at the end of the school year.

This week his resignation for the purposes of retirement was accepted by the school committee with deep regret.

Dorr was a former football coach who taught physical education at the high school.

In his letter explaining his intentions to the school committee, Dorr pointed out his entire teaching career had been in the town's school system which he said was a "very rewarding and enjoyable part of my life."

"This man has been a tradition to Cohasset," School Supt. Eugene Crowell said.

Remember your Valentine

Please play the Steinway before you buy a Yamaha.

Steinways are great pianos. People expect them to sound great, and they are rarely disappointed. That's why pianists are so surprised when they have an opportunity to play Hamaha. Many people actually prefer the Yamaha. They find a deep, rich bass, a full tenor range, clarity on the top end, and a more balanced overall sound.

It's only fair to mention that some people prefer the Steinway. But everyone is impressed with the price. Yamaha grands can be purchased for a little more than half the cost of a Steinway of comparable size. Since there is much less price difference in used pianos than new pianos, the Yamaha grand is a much better investment.

S.S. Art Center courses

The South Shore Art Center has activities for all ages.

"Playreading" is a brand new, intriguing course to be offered at the Art Center beginning Wednesday, March 3.

This is open to everyone — you don't have to be an actor or actress. Come and enjoy the sociability of reading contemporary plays and studying character development, motivation, and reading techniques.

Ron Emmons, teacher and dramatic director at Cohasset High School, will teach "Playreading." Ron has directed many plays on the South Shore, including "Godspell." Twice, his drama group at the high school reached the finals in the State Drama Guild Festival.

Two other courses, "Gallery Tours" and "Exploring Visual Arts," will be offered at the Art Center for the non-artist who appreciates art. Lousie Kalish conducts the Gallery Tours on Thursday mornings once a month. This is a wonderful way to learn about contemporary art by visiting Boston and Cambridge museums.

"Exploring Visual Arts" is an exciting opportunity to study Art History through independent projects. Each student may choose any area of Art History and pursue it with instructor guidance, resources, bibliography, and visuals. The last class will be a presentation of projects.

You don't have to be an accomplished photographer to sign up for the photography classes beginning the week of Feb. 22. Three different courses will be available: Beginning Photography, Beginning Darkroom Photography, and Intermediate Darkroom Photography.

Sign up for any of these classes by calling the Art Center at 383-9548.

Paul Fortin will teach "Beginning Photography on Mondays. This class will feature a lecture-demonstration approach to understanding the basics of how a camera works, using black and white or color film. Items to be covered are F stops, exposure techniques, and depth of field. In the last three sessions, developing and printing of black and white film will be demonstrated. Separate darkroom time will be available.

"Beginning Darkroom Photography" will be taught by Linda Wasko. This course emphasizes darkroom and explores the aesthetics of photography. The areas to be covered are: camera techniques, developing film, printing film, critique and matting. This class is for 35mm cameras, black and white film. Darkroom time will be available for assignments.

For the more advanced photographer, Linda Wasko will teach "Intermediate Darkroom Photography." Students must already have basic darkroom knowledge. A demonstration, lecture, critique approach will be used. Individual darkroom time will be scheduled for students to complete projects. Intermediates will concentrate on sequences and projects toward developing a finer print. More advanced students will explore tone-line separation, solarization, and high-contrast prints.

Kids between 7 and 11. Don't forget to drop in at the South Shore Art Center, any day or days of February Vacation week, Feb. 15 to 19, for the "Child's Vacation Drop-In," 10:30 a.m. to noon. Activities will include painting, drawing, or collage activity, plus a surpise project! No pre-enrollment necessary; come and join in the fun!

An exhibit of charcoal drawings of "drapery" heightened with white chalk is hanging in the corridor display area. A colorful group of "object" paintings is also exhibited. In the front display case, there is a large black and white photography show. It is representative of the work done by students in the Beginning Photography class.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY

Cast members are rehearsing and dancers are learning routines. Question of the week: Why are Abner, Daisy and Marryin' Sam practicing sit-ups in the auditorium?

LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT

On Friday, January 29, several members of the CHS Advanced Spanish classes went to the Museum of Science in Boston to see the exhibit entitled "COPAN: City of the Maya." The field trip began with a tour of the exhibit, centering on ancient Mavan civilization in the city of Copan in modern Honduras. Included were displays and explanations of housing, agriculture, and writing and number systems. A class followed in which aspects of the Mayan culture, as well as problems encountered by the archaeologists studying such cultures, were discussed. Students were asked to play "archaeologist ' with a collection of modern "artifacts" and to draw conclusions about the lifestyle those artifacts might indicate. For the Spanish IV/V classes, the trip concluded a unit on Latin American Indian cultures. Expenses for the field trip were paid by the students.

Dramatic Club play dedicated to Paul Blackmur

The upcoming Cohasset Dramatic Club production of Robert Bolt's drama, "A Man for All Seasons," will be dedicated with love to a former club president, frequent director, and honorary life member.

Paul Blackmur, a longtime Cohasset resident who died last month at the age of 88, served the club for 51 of the club's 61 years. He left his directorial stamp on club productions for decades.

Mr. Blackmur joined the club in 1931. According to club archives, his earliest known performance is his appearance in March 1932 as a Northern soldier in a one-act Civil War play, "The Clod," the Cohasset club's contribution to a trilogy of one-act plays, including those done by the North River Players and the Hingham Players Club.

Mr. Blackmur was active as a director through the early 1970's and directed a great many successful productions. Among them are "Kind Lady" and "Penny Wide" (1938); "Miranda" (1949); "Remains to Be Seen" (1955); "The Man Who Came to Dinner" (1957); "Solid Gold Cadillac (late 1950's); "Visit to a Small Planet" (1958); "Born Yesterday" (1963); "The Great Sebastians" (1966); and "Never Too Late" (1970). Two of the plays he first brought to the Cohasset Town Hall stage, "My Sister Eileen" (1950) and "Night Must Fall" (1941), were staged again in the spring of 1980 and 1981 respectively.

Other longtime club members agree that Mr. Blackmur brought talent and professionalism to his work. As director, Mr. Blackmur insisted that his actors memorize all their lines before beginning work on the "blocking," or physical arrangement of actors on the stage. This is the reverse of what the majority of directors do, but club members agree that Mr. Blackmur's method worked very well for him.

Mr. Blackmur also served as Dramatic Club president from 1953 to 1955 and was on its board of directors for many years. For more than two decades he was an honorary life member, one of only three the club has had in its history.

Mr. Blackmur was president of the Cohasset Historical Society in the late 1960's and was active in many other organizations, including the First Parish Unitarian Church and the Cohasset and Hingham yacht clubs.

What better way to honor the memory of a longtime friend and member than by presenting one of the classics of the stage? "A Man for All Seasons" will be performed Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights, Feb. 25, 26, and 27 in the historic Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

N.H. trip approved

Members of the High School American Field Service Club won school committee approval this week for a trip to Lebanon, N.H.

George Fortin, faculty advisor of the club, asked permission for the 30 members to spend March 4 to 7 with high school students in Lebanon. The New Hampshire school will be celebrating a ski-athon for its own AFS club that weekend.

The program is part of the inside America AFS exchange.

Members of the Lebanon AFS Club will be coming to Cohasset sometine in May as their part of the exchange.

The approval was granted unanimously.

Arts Dept. head

The high school teachers in the areas of living arts want their own department head.

But school committee members instead instructed the administration to make sure the necessary leadership came without the addition of a new department head.

The high school's assistant principal is supposed to be department chairman for the art, music, home economics, industrial arts and business courses.

All of those areas are small categories within the overall high school and its current enrollment of 854.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. IV, no. 20. wednesday, february 17, 1982 30 cents

Cohasset crime declines, burglary down 50

The crime rate for the past year shows a decline contrary to state or national trends. Burglary is down to less than 50 percent of 1980 figures.

Police Chief John DeBassio doesn't have a positive explanation for the improvement but he looks rather satisfied as he goes over the numbers.

He's been the police chief for two years now and has been responsible for a long string of changes in department procedure.

The innovations of the chief continue. Now he's talking about computerizing criminal records, a crime watch program, central communications for both police and fire, a detective, the list continues...

"Burglaries are down," the chief said Friday, sitting in his office at the police station. A half dozen riot sticks, obviously new, leaned into a corner.

"It's foolish not to be prepared," he said when asked about the over-sized nightsticks.

"No, we're not expecting a riot," he answered. "But when I took over the resources in this department were depleted. We're trying to refurbish."

As part of the refurbishing campaign, all the officers have been issued new weapons. The new guns are .357 magnums. Magnum bullets are not issued nor are they allowed. All ammunition is .38 calibre, the chief said.

The Cohasset police uniform has been made more uniform by order of the chief. Now no decals, flags, buttons or other unauthorized deviation from the norm are allowed. That norm is spelled out in a detail that goes down to the width of the visor on a hat and the inch measurement of the stripe on the pants.

One of the changes instituted under Chief DeBassio was the elimination of great detail on the police report, published weekly. The new police report is coded and before publication, the Mariner decodes the numbered list using what is called the universal police code. For instance, a 47 is suspicious activity, one of the more popular calls on the log list.

Another change in policy has been the steady increase in parking tickets issued under DeBassio.

"The numbers reflect the fact that I am committed to parking enforcement," DeBassio said.

In 1979, the year he was hired, there were 1,398 parking tickets issued. In 1980 there were 1,709 tickets and in the last year there were 2,147 tickets issued.

The increased ticketing is generating far more revenue for the town, partly because the selectmen increased the fines and partly because the town now

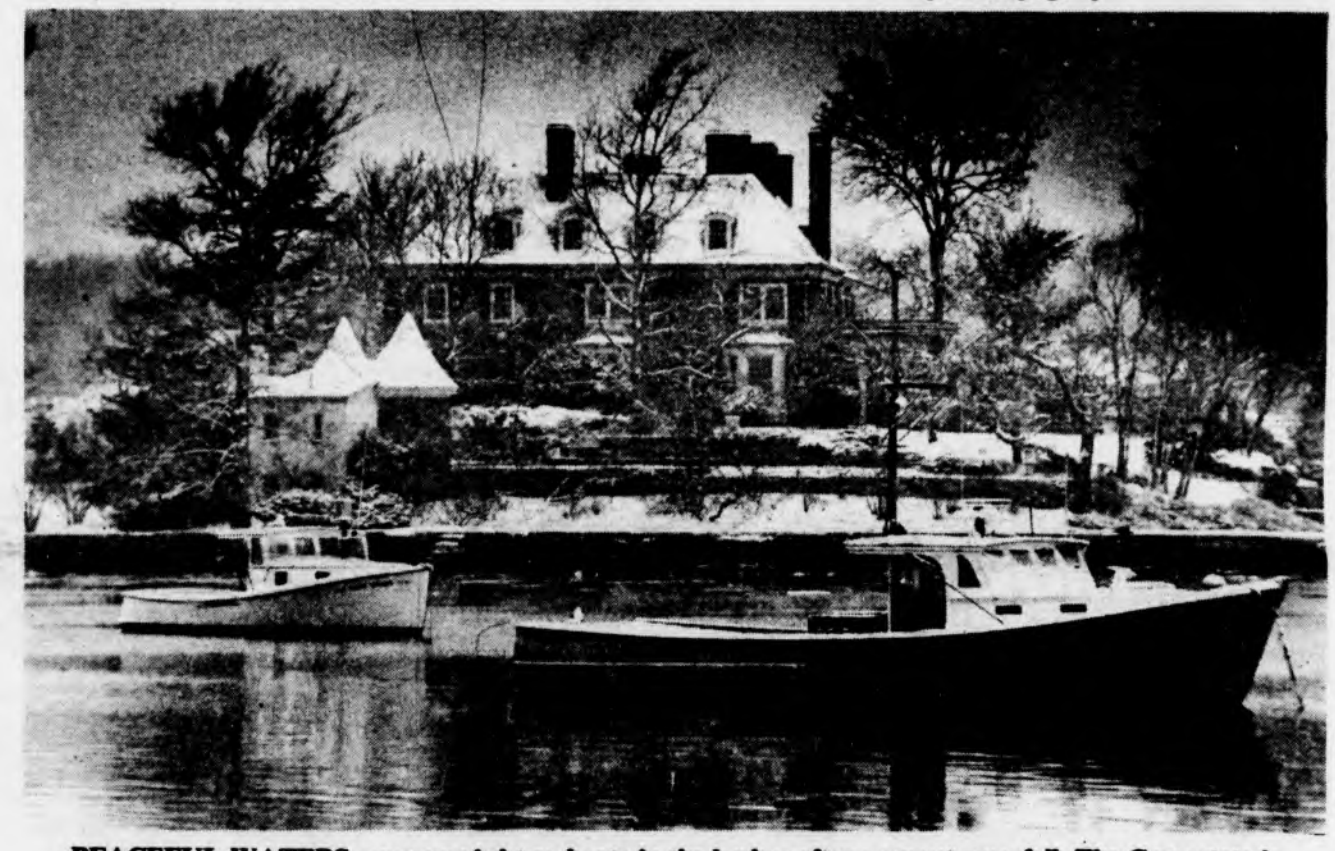
Laugelle to seek second term

It's official, Selectman Rocco Laugelle is running for reelection.

He issued a statement to the town's two weekly newspapers and the Ledger at last Wednesday's selectmen's meeting.

Rocky's opposition will be Jim Lagrotteria.

"At this time I would like to clarify my intentions to run for reelection for selectman, as previously announced. I am definitely a candidate and look forward to serving the townspeople for another three years.



"During my term in office I have witnessed a great many changes in the structure of town government.

"Voting has not always been easy because I knew that I was stepping on some toes. But, I voted the way the majority of taxpayers who contacted me felt and also the way I felt would be best for the town.

"Currently, I will not respond to critics of the Board of Selectmen except to say that when you are not directly involved, it is difficult to understand that things do not always run the way you would like.

"For example, civil suits, study committees and other town boards which do not move as quickly as you would prefer.

"As in the past, I am available 24 hours a day and would appreciate hearing from all townspeople. Messages may be left at 383-0186, my home."

PEACEFUL WATERS accompanied two boats in the harbor after a recent snowfall. The Cox estate is pictured in the background.

Police sponsor victim program

The police department is sponsoring a victim advocate program — as soon as the volunteer advocates are assembled.

There is no program like it in operation elsewhere in the state, as far as Police Chief John DeBassio knows.

Brockton, the department he used to work for, tried a similar program for a time but abandoned it.

"Here I think people are more apt to volunteer," the chief said at a Friday afternoon press conference.

"There's a lot of theory and discussion on the program," referring to the concept of aiding victims through police-sponsored organizations.

"People in town tend to be willing to participate in volunteer activities."

He hopes he and Crime Prevention Officer Richard Fairbairn will begin getting calls from people who want to help this week.

A memo issued by the chief outlined the heart of the new program:

"Victims of crime are frequently traumatized for extended periods of time due to the necessity of dealing with the loss of personal property, complicated insurance procedures, prolonged medical treatment and/or the need to replace lost or stolen personal papers.

"The victim advocate is seen as a volunteer resource person from the community who is capable of providing advice, referral services, emergency transportation, and facilitating the replacement of such things as keys, bankbooks, credit cards, drivers licenses and other essential items, during periods of convalescence or disability. The care and maintenance of single or elderly households; the companionship and maintenance of an advocate; and the interest and concern of the Police Department and Community will do much to ease the burden of the victim.

"The advocate would also be responsible, under the general supervision of the Police Department

S.S. politicos tackle the commute

By Patricia Desmond

It's a long, long ride from here to Boston anyway you try to travel.

A coalition of local officials want to begin making some improvement on the timing. After two postponements the group got off the ground last Wednesday night at Cohasset's Cushing Plaza.

Sen. Allan McKinnon, one of the group's sponsors, said afterwards the battle will be a slow one. The other sponsor is Rep. Philip Johnston, D-Marshfield.

"Our purpose in organizing was to come up with some long range strategies," McKinnon said.

He has a number ideas of what should be improved. The list includes commuter parking areas, better bus service and beefed up commuter boating.

He'd like to see boats take off from more places than Hingham and Hull, heading into the city.

"We're trying to get enough political muscle together to do something about the poor transportation network on the South Shore," he said.

Part of the reason the network is so poor is that when there have been plans to upgrade main roadways, people who own homes and businesses along the routes have been reluctant to hear of the expansion. There have been no serious plans in the past 10 years but there were times long ago when the state proposed building another main road across Hingham to relieve the congestion on Route 228. People living in the path of the alternate were unhappy with the idea.

And there was, also long ago, a plan to expand Route 3A. It was something called a Shawmut Trail.

The businesses in Weymouth - many of which would have been razed to create the roadbed - didn't think that was such a good idea.

The meeting of local political muscle (about 25 strong) wasn't talking about highway construction or other billion dollar programs.

McKinnon said that if Plymouth and Brockton can't provide better bus service someone else should take over the routes.

"Plymouth and Brockton has always been lacking. The schedules are not always met, particularly in the cold when they're needed more," he said.

Cohasset's week ...

Gypsy moth spraying

A date has been set for selectmen from three neighboring towns to meet concerning aerial gypsy moth spraying.

Hull's executive secretary to selectmen, Chris McCabe has invited the Hingham and Cohasset boards to meet Thursday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m. at town hall in Hull. Members of the Board of Health, Park and Tree Department, etc., are also invited to attend.

Crime prevention officer

Patrolman Richard Fairbairn has been appointed the new crime prevention officer, according to Police Chief John DeBassio.

He replaces Patrolman Gerald Doyle in that position. Doyle took a job with the MIT security force last summer and resigned at the end of last year, after completing a leave of absence.

The Crime Watch program in town began last spring. Chief DeBassio said it would be increasing in scope with the new appointment.

Fairbairn recently completed a police training course in the crime prevention field. He will be responsible for getting out a new series of articles for the Mariner and other papers on crime prevention.

Liquor license approved

A one-day liquor license request was approved by selectmen, last week, for an auction at St. Stephen's Church (Walton Rodgers Hall) on May 1.

Cohasset's chapter of American Food Service requested the beer and wine license for the fundraising event for the International Cultural Youth Exchange Program.

Town Hall rental fee

The fee for renting the Town Hall auditorium has been revised.

Selectmen unanimously voted last week to adopt a new fee schedule instead of the $30 charge which had been established last fall.

The new policy was written by Selectman Mary Jane McArthur.

1. No charge for student activities through grade 12, sponsored by non-profit groups.
2. All other student activities through grade 12: October 1 to May 1 at $15 per day/evening, plus a custodial fee.
3. No charge for activities sponsored by the Recreation Commission.
4. Activities for all ages sponsored by a non-profit group: October 1 to May 1 at $25 per day/evening, plus a custodial fee; May 1 to October 1 at $15 per day/evening, plus a custodial fee.
5. Any non-profit group using the auditorium on an on-going basis, for monthly, bi-monthly or tri-monthly regularly scheduled events for all ages: $15 per day/evening, plus a custodial fee.

Controversy resolved

The Historical Society and selectmen resolved the Pratt — volume II history books controversy last Wednesday. The board voted unanimously to charge the society $2 each for a total of 120 books.

Town officials hadn't kept track of the books until recently. Connie Parker, Historical Society president, could account for 120 books which were taken from the Town Hall attic and sold through the society. Selectmen said 144 books were missing from the attic but would not doubt Parker's bookkeeping.

Though the books were sold for a higher price Parker was asked to recover only the cost of $2 per book with the Historical Society netting the profit.

The Historical Society was not charged the going price, but a figure at cost.

Pier project design

A consultant will be chosen soon for the design of Fisherman's Wharf of Government Island. Selectmen voted last Wednesday to advertise for bidders for the design of the pier project.

Harbor Study Committee Chairman Charles Fink urged the board to act quickly toward selection of a consultant so that the project would be finished in June. Fink said the $21,000 Coastal Zone Management grant was awarded last April, while the actual contract didn't arrive until last week.

Once Town Counsel reviews and approves the contract selectmen will advertise for a consultant. Fink said four firms have already expressed an interest in the project.

Appleyard resigns

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Robert Appleyard, last week, from the Drainage Study Committee.

Hugo's renovations

The auction at Hugo's Lighthouse brought out the memory seekers — it wasn't a place for bargain hunters anyway.

Now the place is just about bare, ready for the renovations planned to start soon.

Details of the new floor plan, decor and more changes are expected sometime next month.

Casino gambling study

The Marshfield-Duxbury League of Women Voters believes by consensus that casino gambling should not be permitted.

The Marshfield-Duxbury League worked with the Cohasset and Hingham Leagues in putting together the study on casino gambling.

The Cohasset League does not plan to release its consensus, according to its leaders.

The state league will be releasing its larger consensus sometime in the spring.

Meanwhile the legislature has six casino bills to consider this year. They are scheduled for hearing on Tuesday, March 30.

There is also one bill to allow slot machines to be operated under the jurisdiction of the Lottery Commission.

Conway to meet Reagan

Jack Conway of Cohasset, former Chairman of New England Realtors for Reagan, plans to meet with the President in the near future here to discuss his candidacy for the 10th Congressional Seat in Massachusetts.

Conway met in Washington recently with key government officials to coordinate his campaign efforts with the resources of the national leadership, he said.

"The series of non-stop interviews with the top officials of the leadership party led me to believe that my candidacy is welcomed, indeed cheered, and a maximum effort will be made to assist us in restoring the district to a more conservative life style in November elections," Conway noted.

Conway, active in the business field and public service areas on the South Shore for the past 25 years, praised the "professionalism of the staff officials responsible for counseling incumbents and candidates."

Conway is running as a Republican against U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset.

Early release day

Thursday, February 25, 1982, will be an EARLY RELEASE DAY at the ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS ONLY. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Buses will depart Deer Hill at 12:45 p.m. and at Joseph Osgood School at 12:55 p.m.

Lunch will be served in both of these schools.

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee. The program at the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools will be devoted to the issue of child abuse.

Ko Ko Island warned on liquor violation

Ko Ko Island Restaurant was served warning by selectmen last week that future incidents of serving liquor to minors will lead to suspension of the liquor license.

Police Chief John DeBassio, Patrolman Bob Jackson, and the board of selectmen, met with KoKo Island part-owner Alan Lew and manager Billy Lee concerning a Dec. 26 incident in which an 18-year-old was arrested for purchasing beer in the KoKo Island lounge.

According to DeBassio, the youth was questioned by Jackson during a routine check of the King Street establishment. DeBassio said Jackson observed a young man with a Miller beer seated at the bar who was worthy of being checked.

Officer Jackson radioed the youth's drivers license number to be fed into the teletype which responded with a different age. Jackson had discovered that the numbers on the birth date had been transposed and sealed with transparent tape. The 18-year-old was arrested for possession of alcohol and an altered Massachusetts drivers license.

DeBassio said the original birthdate numeral had been punched out and replaced. "My feeling is it could have been spotted," he said. It is my understanding that there are a lot of these altered licenses in town and in other areas, said DeBassio.

The KoKo Island Restaurant opened Dec. 4. DeBassio said because the restaurant is new they will be tested by youngsters not only from Cohasset, but from Hull and Scituate to see if they can be served liquor. Lew said, "It was strictly an oversight by the bartender," that the youth was served. "We would not sell a $1 beer to a minor and risk a $700,000 investment. We raised the prices (of drinks) here to discourage that type of clientele."

After examining the altered drivers license, all board members agreed that the forgery was a good job. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said, "I'm surprised that Officer Jackson could see it."

KoKo Island manager Billy Lee assured selectmen that any questionable licenses are now brought out to the front desk by waitresses or bartenders to be approved by a manager. Lee said that only one drink per person could be purchased at the bar, to eliminate drinks which are brought back to tables for minors. Customers are encouraged to order drinks through the waitresses and waiters, he said.

Lee asked the police chief why he isn't allowed to accept duplicate drivers licenses.

DeBassio said, "The only reason I can give you is that many duplicates have been altered. The reason you shouldn't accept duplicates is because too many of them have been forged and that you refuse to take the risk, said DeBassio.

In a separate issue, representatives of the KoKo Island Restaurant will meet with the board of appeals Feb. 23 to obtain a permit for two signs at the restaurant's entrance.

Special town meeting next Monday night

The future of town dump will top the agenda at Monday's special town meeting, scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

There are five articles on the warrant, including two that deal with the dump.

A third proposal (Article 10) would authorize the town to collect parking fees, while another (Article 11) seeks a $6,500 appropriation to further develop the Woodside Cemetery.

Article 12 calls for a principal bond payment of $10,000 for the police and fire stations. Article 13, to reinstate a clerk/typist in the police department, will be withdrawn because of a technical legality.

This week four town officials, a custodian and two newspaper reporters attended a mistakenly scheduled town meeting on George Washington's birthday.

The session opened at 7:30 p.m. and was adjourned at 7:31 p.m. by Moderator Bill Weeks.

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie moved for adjournment and selectman Mary Jane McArthur seconded the motion. Assistant town clerk Frances Marks was present to determine a lack of quorum.

Reporters from the Patroit Ledger and Mariner were present for the brief formality. Prior to the 7:30 p.m. assembly, Ainslie speculated, "It would be just our luck to get a quorum tonight."

Victim -advocate program...

Crime Prevention Officer, for assisting and informing the victim with respect to routine criminal procedures such as arrest, criminal identification, prosecution and sentencing practices involving persons apprehended or otherwise involved in the processing of their individual cases before the court.

"Interpreters are also being sought by the Police Department to facilitate emergency services in a variety of languages. Volunteers will be screened and are encouraged to submit resumes to the Cohasset Police Department. These services are both unique and necessary to the orderly conduct of the Police Department and it is our hope that by planning now, we will be able to meet these commitments when and if they arise."

The chief said there haven't been any recent cases where the needs of the victims seemed to be overwhelming.

"But we haven't been looking for it," he said.

"In most cases a victim would probably need only one or two of the services. Like help dealing with the forms or transportation to court."

The advocate would determine when the service should be ended on a case and file a report with the police department.

He said someone participating as a volunteer might not be called to help a victim for five months at a time.

"This is not a violence prone community," he said.

Still he hopes to have five or six qualified volunteers on the his list.

It's the same on the situation with interpretors. He said there has been no problem so far.

"But I'd rather do the planning now and be ready than do it under a crisis situation."

Politicos tackle the commute...

He talked about a viable commuter boat system, offering alternative times to commuters. He thinks it would be wise to have the system reach the whole Route 3A coastal area.

But the immediate goals are simpler and more realistic.

McKinnon said the group will begin lobbying hard to make sure construction trucks near the South Quincy MBTA aren't allowed to enter Route 3 during rush hour.

Besides eliminating the trucks crossing the expressway during rush hour, the group hopes to force better synchronization of the various construction-projects.

Rep. Johnston came out against any more studies of the transportation system. He and the other officials think they know the possible answers. They want some action.

Among the list of problems the group plans to consider are:

—The Fore River Bridge reconstruction - the group's answer is to have the bridge made one-way during rush hour.

—Plans to reconstruct the Southeast Expressway.

—Other construction at Route 3 and 128.

—The long delayed synchronization of the Route 3A traffic lights.

—The MBTA and unserviced communities within the assessment area.

—The need for feeder buses to the Braintree T.

—The need for satellite parking for Plymouth and Brockton riders.

—The need for feeder buses to the piers and the expansion of the commuter boat.

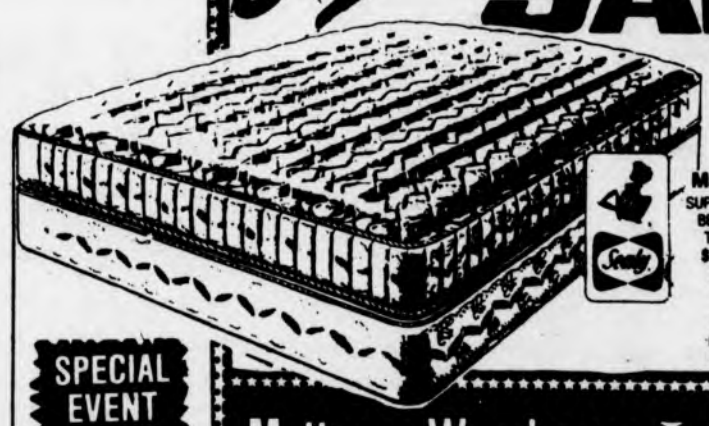
"It was a good meeting for the first one," McKinnon said. "There always is a danger that after one or two meetings someone will start jousting at windmills. But I think we all have a long range commitment to do something about this chaotic transportation system.

New parking rule

The winter parking ban is partially off. But read on before you park. Last Wednesday, at the request of Police Chief John DeBassio, apartment dwellers in the downtown area may park in the Northwest corner of the town parking lot.

In a letter to selectmen, DeBassio said the winter parking regulations which took effect Nov. 18, are provided for by town bylaw.

"The routine enforcement does however reflect a hardship on a number of apartment dwellers residing in the downtown section, since the ordinance restricts overnight street parking and town lot parking."



DeBassio recommended that about eight spaces in the Northwest section of the town parking lot be designated to accommodate local apartment dwellers and transit persons enroute to Boston.

Selectmen unanimously approved the chief's request and further added that the entire back row of the parking lot's northwest section, be used by area residents.

School Board will do its own $ cutting

The School committee isn't going to give the advisory board the list of possible reductions in the $3.8 million budget that's been proposed.

The two groups met last week at town hall and discussed the issue. The budget as proposed by School Supt. Eugene Crowell is $101,000 over the Proposition 2½ cap.

"I can assure both boards (the school committee and advisory board) that as a manager I'm ready to do the cutting if necessary.

"The point I'm making is that I'd like to have the money upfront rather than the reverse."

In question is what the bottom line will really be for Cohasset for the coming fiscal year. Crowell is hoping the revaluation will bring the town's total valuation to $230 million. That figure would give the school system an extra $70,000 to spend under the various formulas being used to put the budget together.

But the revaluation is far from certification. In fact, according to town officials it is unlikely the revaluation figures will be available until after the April town meeting.

The advisory board isn't ready to pin a budget together based on a hypothetical valuation figure. They've been operating with other deparments on level funded budgets that in the end will raise the budget by only a small percentage.

"There's no doubt we are an advisory committee," Jean Cotton, board chairman said in reply to comments about the appointed status of the group.

"But the reality of the situation is that we are under Proposition 2½. If we don't work together on a budget and instead vote item by item (at town meeting) to exceed 2½ and then the town votes not to exceed 2½, then we are in absolute chaos," Advisor Jean Keane said.

"We are the only group in town that's working hard to make sure that the whole puzzle fits together."

Joe Nedrow, an unannounced candidate for school committee, pointed out that the only thing both groups agree on is the need to expedite the certification process.

Nedrow suggested town officials put pressure on the state to move the process along.

Cotton explained that the state bureau of accounts is swamped with last minute revaluations.

"Possibly because we're small there's some hope," she said. "At one point the assessors assumed that they could just walk in there and be certified because they've always done everything right.

"They were informed that would not be the way this year."

Cotton said they have no authority to send out a second estimate.

Osbourne Ingram, advisory board member, pointed out that the town didn't have authority to send out the first estimated bill until November.

"If 170 communities have no chance of setting a tax rate, again the crunch will come. We've been living by new rules for the last six months," Ingram said.

Dick Conley, school committee member, said he thinks townspeople should lobby for speedy certification.

Doris Golden, a former school committee member, said the school committee is elected to form a budget, which in the final analysis is voted by the people of town.

7th grade music class

The school committee recently discussed restoration of music as a required subject for seventh graders. Three years ago the requirement was dropped because of light enrollment in general music classes.

Superintendent Eugene Crowell told the school committee last Tuesday that running the department "on a shoestrong" had led one staff member to consider resigning for professional and financial reasons.

In the course of reviewing the $32,610 budget, Crowell urged the school board to think of ways to enhance the program despite budget constraints.

"The department staff feels like they are on the back burner. What with 2½ they, and the art department, too, feel like an after thought," he said.

Crowell spoke of three options for the committee's consideration before finalizing budgets: Keep the music budget level, with the present program limitations; Restore music as a required subject in the seventh grade; Redirect funds to the school budget, from federal block grants if possible.

The accreditation team which visited schools in October was critical of the break in the music curriculum, said Crowell. "They just couldn't understand why we would single out music," he said.

Cohasset crime declines....

operates its own collection process and keeps all the collection fees.

Have other towns seen a drop in the crime rate in the last year?

"I don't think so, no," the chief said.

"At least as far as breaks are concerned most are happy staying at last year's rate," he said.

The burglary rate outside Cohasset is still rising.

There were 43 burglaries in 1981, with eight arrests. The previous year there were 98 burglaries and 25 arrests.

Other crime statistics for 1981 and the prior year show:

1981

Crime, No. Incidents	No. of arrests
Murder, 1	1
Robbery, 2	2
Assaults, 11	9
Burglary, 43	8
Rape, 1	1
Auto Theft, 9	4
Larcenies, 171	24

Robbery, 4	1
Assaults, 23	17
Burglary, 98	25
Rape, 2	1
Auto Theft, 24	7
Larcenies, 205	30

There were six arrests for receiving stolen property in 1981, as opposed to one in 1980. There are also about 30 warrants outstanding for larceny charges and a few more outstanding warrants on receiving stolen property.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

The Physical Education Department is sponsoring a "Jump Rope for Heart Marathon" on March 3 from 2:30-5:30 p.m. in the Sullivan Gym. This is a town-wide effort by students in grades K-12 to benefit the Heart Fund. Townspeople may expect to be approached by students seeking pledges for each of the 180 minutes their team is expected to jump rope. Any help given for this endeavor will be most appreciated. For further information, call Marilyn Watson, director of Physical Education, at the high school any time during school hours.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY

And the beat goes on...dancing, reading, singing, tapping toes, southern accents and pear-shaped notes...as "Li'l Abner" rounds nicely into form. The dancers have been working two nights a week perfecting their split jumps and flips. All reports are that they are terrific. The actors and actresses are sounding more "country" than Charlie Pride and Dolly Parton. The chorus has been rehearsing three nights a week with Jean Birmann and may head for the Grand Old Opry after the show debuts. Soon to begin: assembly and construction of the set. WANTED: Old construction boots, old hats (men's straw), old denim pants (no Calvin's, please). Question of the Week: Has "Star Wars" come to Dog Patch? Why does Marryin' Sam want a Snow Speeder under the tree next Christmas?

LIBRARY NEWS

Volunteers — what would libraries do without them? The school libraries have been lucky this year to attract many faithful mothers. The Deer Hill School has more than a dozen people who help with everything from typing and book processing to manning the circulation desk when classes make their weekly visits to the library. Volunteers include Pat Anstead, Mimi Aronson, Jane Bishop, Cheryl Hale, Liz Kuhn, Joyce MacDonald, Nancy McLaughlin, Trisha Massa, Rosemarie Mecurio, Dottie Myers, Peg Murphy, Ruth Nedrow, Jackie Shields, and Susan Shumaker. One especially helpful task that the volunteers have taken over is maintaining the "overdue" bulletin board in the library. Decorated with seasonal characters (scarecrows, Santas, snowmen) created by school volunteers, it is then followed up by posting reminders on the board. When students bring in their late books, they get the satisfaction of tearing their notice off the board. The whole procedure helps prevent lost books and teaches students about responsibility for borrowed items. Several classrooms sport a star over their door proclaiming "Superstars! No overdue books!"

At the Osgood School, Diana Moe assists library aid Lorene Miller with the endless task of shelving incoming books and keeping the shelves in order. Liz Glasfeld, who has volunteered for many years at Osgood, is a special find for the schools. She is a trained librarian and is largely responsible for establishing the card catalog for the Osgood library. She is a real catalog expert and has recently volunteered for services at the high school as well. The high school catalog is undergoing major renovation which is proceeding at record speed thanks to the extra effort of Mrs. Clasfeld. Thousands of books a the high school have recently been shifted to new areas in the library in an effort to make materials more accessible. Volunteer Martha Hurtig is tackling the formidable task of shelving incoming materials while checking the new shelving arrangement for accuracy.

around town

☐It may have been a long cold winter for most of us, but flowers have "bloomed" for all of it in Peter O'Loughlin's garden. Peter has long been known as the neighborhood gardener "extrodinaire" and chances are pretty good that he has already started his seedlings for the coming spring. But while we all wait to admire the fruits of his labor, there are the bright plastic flowers as a promise of things to come.

☐Congratulations to the Good family of North Main St. on their newest member, baby William, who was born last Friday.

☐A chairman of one of the organizations in town frustrated by the weather this winter, recently remarked that she thought that January and February should be cancelled or at least postponed.

☐The Metco and host families of Cohasset will sponsor a special concert on Wednesday, March 3, to raise money for the Metco Scholarship Fund.

The concert, which will be held at the high school at 7 p.m., will feature Mr. Don Oliver in a musical illustration of the history of Black music and its affect on American music. Tickets are $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students and may be obtained by calling the Metco coordinator at 383-6105.

☐Congratulations are in order for Joy Turner, a sixth grade student at the Deer Hill School, who has been named Musican of the Month. Mrs. Whitley's sixth grade class has had the distinction of having no overdue books this month and for that has received the school's merit award.

☐Named to the Dean's Honors List at Quinnipiac College, Hamden, Conn. was Lynne O'Hearns, 3 Windy Hill.

☐The Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor an evening to learn CPR and the Choke Saver Technique, Thursday, Feb. 25, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

The instructor will be Dick Conley, a member of the Cohasset Fire Department. To register call 383-0771. Class size is limited.

☐The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will hold a tea at the Ripley Road Nursing Home Tuesday, Feb. 23 at 2 p.m.

☐Although the music may be a bit loud for the uninitiated and the lighting somewhat of a distraction, the Cohasset Junior High School dances have definitely been a popular attraction this year. And, after dropping in at the latest one, it's easy to see why — everyone gets into the act. Having come from a generation where the girls at the beginning of a dance were usually on one side of the room and the boys on the other, Cohasset's dances are, at first, a surprise. From the start everyone dances, whether it's in groups, lines or circles. Parent and teacher chaperones are also enthusiastic about the event which definitely appears to be a fun time for all who are involved.

☐Members of the communications councils from all four schools met recently to discuss the most effective way to serve the schools. As a result, many important changes are now being considered and discussed with the school administration. Anyone interested in participating in this important effort is welcome to attend the council meetings or to contact one of the council members listed on information sent home from school with the students.

Crime decrease

Overall in the past year the crime rate for the town dropped.

Still Police Chief John DeBassio, with about two years experience in town, keeps trying to update the department's programs and procedures.

The numbers show something right is happening and the chief and his entire department should be credited for a job they are doing well.

The national trend in crime is still heading toward higher numbers. The Cohasset police department was running shorthanded for half of the year.

But the burglaries went down and so did the number of robberies, assaults and car thefts.

Somehow — whether because police visibility has increased or because police procedures are more systemized — criminals are finding it less attractive here.

Thank you, chief.

Questions Pond St. cluster zoning

Letters

To the Editor:

I wonder how many Cohasset residents are aware of the impact that cluster zoning may have on them. This is a rather innovative concept in providing more living dwellings, at more affordable prices, on ever shrinking available land. Ideally it will utilize existing space to everyone's benefit. However, the project proposed at 100 Pond Street makes one seriously question the feasibility of this concept in an area consisting of relatively expensive, one family residential homes.

The above mentioned project intends to build 39 dwelling units, in 31 buildings on 22.8 acres of land located east of Rt. 3A, north of Beechwood Street and with a small access tract of land on Pond Street. A large part of this acreage is unbuildable thereby forcing the builders to situate proposed units on only a fraction of the land. Unfortunately these proposed sites are uncomfortably close to existing single dwelling residential homes. Although this development has considerable acreage to qualify for cluster zoning, their placement of dwellings threatens the quality of the existing neighborhood and significantly affects the value of each presently existing home. At least 11 of the 39 units are within extremely close proximity to neighboring houses. This sounds acceptable until one considers that units are positioned next to one another, so that not one unit is in close proximity but up to four.

On the tract of land bordering Pond St., estimated to be between 300-400 feet in width, there are four single family units to be constructed, each separated by only a driveway squeezed into the space where one family home would have been built, or possibly, at the most, two. In addition, a 20 feet road must be constructed to traffic the cars of 39 resident families. There is considerable land stretching back from this point, but the houses are squeezed into a small area close to the road because the land to the rear is thoroughly wet. Is this considered "harmonious" with the exisiting neighborhood properties? Is this considered fair use of cluster zoning property? Should we seriously reevaluate the whole concept of cluster housing in a residential community such as Cohasset? In my opinion this is "crowded zoning" as opposed to cluster zoning.

I appeal to you who are concerned about the aesthetic climate of Cohasset and the direction future housing will take. This proposed project has requested numerous variances (five from the Planning Board) and a special permit to build on and construct a road in a Flood Plain Watershed Protection District. This may very well pass before the Planning Board when presented on Feb. 17. In a very short time we will have (or already have) very little control over what is built, and where, in our own backyards as well as our residential community.

Please let your feelings be known to the members of the Zoning Board of Appeals and the Planning Board.

The danger of unleashed dogs

Dear Selectmen:

Attached is a copy of an article that appeared a week ago today in a local newspaper. The town involved could have been Cohasset. Will it take an unfortunate incident like this to call attention to the problem of loose dogs in this village?

We have two small children, and I am concerned about the lack of an enforceable leash law. I myself have been "hassled" by dogs while walking, jogging, bicycling and driving down the street.

I think it's about time Cohasset looks very closely at the problem.

R. Norton
Cohasset

From a UPI dispatch

The death of Benjamin Mazza, a 5-year-old boy apparently strangled by dogs tugging on his scarf, has prompted town officials to promise a crackdown on stray dogs.

Police said Benjamin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Mazza of Charlton, was found unconscious Jan. 25 on packed snow about 75 feet from his home near Glen Echo Lake. He died the next day.

Brogna said he would propose the board push for stricter enforcement of a 24-hour least law established in 1978. It requires dog owners to keep outside pets on leashes at all times.

The law has not been strictly enforced because of lack of funds to pay a full-time dog officer, Brogna said.

Brogna said selectmen would see if fines can be used to establish a revovling fund to pay for more coverage by a dog officer.

Stevens said about a dozen dogs were seen running loose a week before in the neighborhood where the youngster was found. After the child died, the police chief said, "There wasn't a dog in sight."

Casino could aggravate drunk driving problems

Carol Oteri, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., feels that casinos would increase the problems Massachusetts has with drunk drivers.

The Hull resident said, "Free-flowing booze at Atlantic City's gambling houses is believed to be the main culprit behind that city's skyrocketing increase in traffic accidents and drunk driving arrests.

She continued, "New Jersey newspapers are packed with documentation that the good-time party atmosphere created by the casinos leads to an increase in alcohol related deaths."

Mrs. Oteri offered the example of Galloway Township, one of the areas forced to cope with the high volumes of traffic exiting Atlantic City.

She said, "Their fatalities increased by almost 400 percent in one year, and alcohol was involved in 75 percent of these cases. Local police officials say that most of the people involved were coming from casinos."

Quoting New Jersey state highway officials, Oteri said that in 1981 there was a 103 percent increase in highway deaths on Atlantic County's main feeder roads for Atlantic City, the highest among New Jersey's 21 counties.

Oteri said casino policy of offering complimentary drinks to people on the gambling floor compounded the usual alcohol problems. She pointed to statements from New Jersey State Police undercover agents, who accuse casino employees of "actually pushing the booze like it's going out of style."

Ironically, state police officials are quoted as saying that these increases in accidents and drunk driving arrests come as no surprise to them, since they predicted that there would be such problems if casinos came in. Oteri remarked, "It shows what happens when people choose to ignore the handwriting on the wall."

Oteri added, "Casino proponents would have us believe that casino revenues could solve all our problems. Yet, the police departments in towns impacted by casinos in New Jersey are applying for federal grants which would provide overtime money, in an attempt to solve their severe traffic safety problems. It's just another shell game."

"The casinos make the money and the taxpayers pay for the problems generated by them. The way budgets are now you wonder how much longer these unfortunate communities will have a chance at a federal bailout."

Elaborating on the same theme, Oteri said, "We should remember that a town's automobile insurance rate category is determined by the number of accidents that take place on that town's roads. Even if most of the people involved are out-of-towners, local residents are still forced to pay the higher rates which result from a high number of accidents."

Oteri suggested, "To get a real feel for the problems facing casino areas, subscribe to a newspaper from a casino location for one month. Read about the eradication of existing neighborhoods, the political corruption, the air pollution, the drug empires, the crime rates. Then ask yourself if the grass is greener there. Our most startling headlines pale in comparison to those from casino towns."

Questionnaire coming on cable

The cable television advisory committee will soon pass around a trial questionnaire, to find out what residents think about cable television and any questions they might have.

Selectmen named the seven-member committee two months ago and said its job was to gather information. Last week the committee agreed to ask six nearby cable committees for progress reports and possibilities of regional hookups with those towns.

Newly elected chairman Joseph McCool said he would ask the Hingham committee if bids would be accepted for Hingham alone and for Hingham and Cohasset together, to get an estimate of costs.

McCool said that images from a 52-channel system, which seems to be the norm in eastern Massachusetts, often deteriorate after about nine miles of transmission, which would limit longer regional connections.

"My concern is, we started last," he said. "Maybe we're going to lose some of our opportunities."

Committee member Terence Farrell said the group should not dwell on technical details now, because companies are improving things every day.

The school, non-profit community center, fire and police departments plus the library will be asked to suggest uses for cable television. McCool suggested the possibility that camera hookups might be installed in several public buildings for local broadcasting.

The Youth Hockey report

Seahawks prepare for District Playdowns

The Seakhawks Youth Hockey Teams tuned up for the District Playdowns being played next weekend by posting six victories out of the nine contests they skated in on Feb. 6th & 7th.

Bobby Weisslinger notched a "hat trick" to pace the Bantam A's to a 10-4 trouncing of Hyde Park. Jamie Kelly & Chris Tatum added a pair of goals each to the victors attack, and solo shots were registered by Matthew Glennon, Joe Finn, & Phil Thomas. Assists were garnered by Mike DiLorenzo (2), Kris Hublitz, Steve Remedis, Wiesslinger, Thomas, Finn, Glennon, & Bobby Salvador.

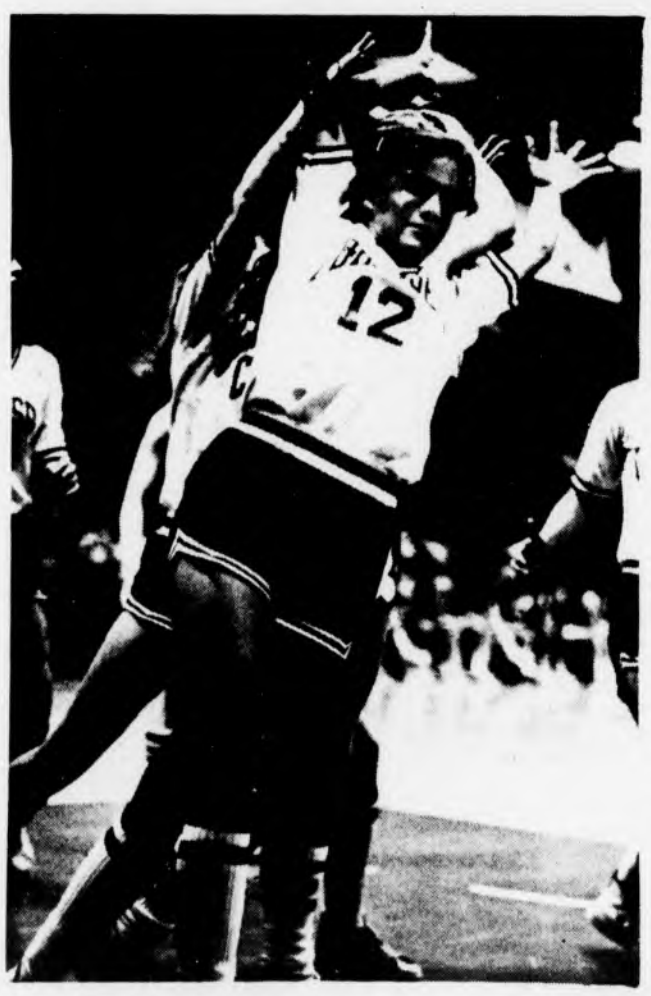
David Cogliano sparked the offense with 2 goals and 3 assists & John Belsan provided air-tight net-tending as the Bantam B's shut out Hyde Park 6-0. Also denting the nets for the B's were Russ Goulart, Sean Daley, Michael Cooney, & Bobby Vinal. Receiving credit for assists were Vinal, Kevin Richardson, Mark Walsh, & Chris Townsend.

Matthew Cox had a pair of bullseyes as the Bantam C's solidified their hold on 2nd place with a 7-2 thumping of Pembroke. Joey Mahoney, Chris Baker, John Breen, Greg Sandonato, & David O'Donnell also busted targets while Breen (2), O'Donnell, Mahoney, Cox, & Andy McCarthy received assists.

The Pee Wee A's suffered an 8-2 drubbing at the hands of Hyde Park. Jeff Hartwell & Jason Szep accounted for the home team's scoring.

Brian Curran tallied twice as the Pee Wee B's walloped Hyde Park 7-3. Andy Johnson, Jamie Hoffman, John Meschino, Danny Pompeo, & Brian McGovern also lit up the scoreboard, while assists were metered out to Johnson, Hoffman, McGovern, & John Goffar (2).

The Pee Wee C's put up a gallant bid but eventually succumbed to Pembroke 6-5. Gilbert Rebello fired home a "Hat Trick" and teammate Peter Buckley dented the twine twice to provide the scoring while John Walsh took care of the playmaking with a pair of assists.



The Squirt A's tasted defeat for the third straight week as they were nipped by Hyde Park 3-2. After falling behind early, the A's fought back to knot the contest on goals by John Zimmer & Billy Lincoln before a 3rd period Hyde Park tally sealed the outcome. Goalie Joshua Goulart was immense in the nets while assists were handed out to John Galluzzo and Keith O'Connell.

The Squirt B's ran their winning streak to nine with a 5-3 victory over Canton. Jon Mahoney was the big gun for the B's as he popped in another "Hat Trick". Paul Norton & Brian Pompeo closed out the scoring with single tallies and Michael Dundon (2), Kevin Quinn, & Mark Resnick added assists to the attack.

Damon Sparrow's "Hat Trick" paced the front-running Squirt C's to a 7-1 win over Bridgewater. Goalie Damon Parsons lost his bid for a 3rd consecutive shut-out when the Bruins scored in the final minute of play. Steve Boardman, Colby Mahoney, Terence Shea, & Joel Hindley also put the puck in the cage and assists were registered by Tony Muzzi (2), David Orpen, Boardman, & David Farrag.

Junior Danny Bowen (11) of Cohasset, ducks as Scituate's Dave Darmell plays a little leap frog on ice.

Laura Hines (#12), of Cohasset, stretches out for a rebound and boxes out her Norwell opponent. The Skippers triumphed over the Clippers last week, 46-34.

Basketball girls win the improvement award, finish their season at 10-10

The girls' varsity basketball season, 1981-82, came to a close last week with a 10-10 overall record. It was the best finish for the Skippers in over ten years. Cohasset wound up fourth in the South Shore League with a 9-9 record.

Last year the girls won only three games (3-13) for the season. Coach Bill Fallon said the Cohasset squad truly became competitive within the SSL.

Fallon said the girls worked hard over the summer, which accounted for the improvement. Though the Skippers weren't blessed with much height, "I thought, overall, we did quite well," he said.

The Cohasset hoopsters were hit with the flu bug and several injuries in mid-season. "With a couple of breaks," said Fallon, "we could have done better and had a shot at making the tourney."

The Skippers lost three memorable games this past season. They lost to Duxbury and East Bridgewater in overtime. Middleboro defeated Cohasset by one point. Had these three contests gone the other way, Cohasset might have finished with a 13-7 record.

Senior forward Kate Salerno was named to the SSL all-star team and competed against Abington at Rockland last Friday. The SSL champions, Abington, beat the all-star squad by a 12 point margin.

The Skippers closed out the season with wins over Holbrook and Norwell last week.

Salerno led the scoring with 12 points in the 50-26 victory over Holbrook. Madeline Roy controlled the boards with eight rebounds. The entire team got to play and 12 Cohasset girls scored. Fallon described the contest as "kind of a runaway game" since the Skippers led 34-9 at halftime.

After defeating the Bulldogs, Cohasset beat Norwell, 46-34. The game was blown wide open in the third quarter which ended, 38-19. Once again the entire roster of 14 participated in the win.

Salerno was the game's high scorer with 13 points and 11 rebounds. Junior guard Gia Barresi contributed 10 points while teammate Roy had nine points and 10 rebounds.

Salerno, the forward SSL all-star, averaged 10.3 points and 8.2 rebounds a game. Barresi was high scorer for the Skippers, totaling 161 points for the season. Roy was strongest on the boards with 140 rebounds this year.

Gymnast McMahon qualifies for state meet

Suzy McMahon and Karen Ekberg led the way for Cohasset gymnasts at the All-League meet last week in Duxbury.

McMahon, an eighth grader, won all the three events which she entered, while Ekberg, the junior co-captain, finished third all-around with a 27.7 total score.

A competitor from Holbrook (where there is no high school gymnastics squad) finished first among six South Shore League towns (Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Norwell, Rockland and Middleboro). Caroline Kelly of Hanover High edged out Ekberg with 29.7 points for second place all-around. In the past two seasons, Ekberg had won the all-around with Kelly in second place.

McMahon qualified to compete in vaulting at the Eastern Massachuseets Individual Invitational Gymnastics meet at North Quincy High School. The meet was held on Monday and McMahon achieved a better than 8.337 average of her four best scores, during the season, for qualification.

McMahon is the first SSL competitor to qualify for the state meet. She scored an 8.65 mark in the vaulting event at the All-League meet which was the highest score recorded for the evening.

Ekberg narrowly missed qualifying for the state meet by a fraction of a point in the floor exercise event. At the All-League meet she scored 7.9 marks in both the vaulting and floor exercise events.

Cohasset scored a total of 108.55 points at the All-League meet which was close to their best score of 109 versus Norwell this season. The Skippers swept the floor exercise events thanks to McMahon, Nancy Walls and Julia Sechen, a freshman.

Sechen clinched third on the bars with Katie Anderson and Janney Carlson putting in fine performances for the Skippers. On beam, Walls scored a 7.0 mark for first place with Richele Sargent, Katee Duffy, and Sechen contributing to the Cohasset team total.

Co-captain Marcy Brown, the only senior on the Cohasset squad, competed in floor exercise with limited use of her broken hand. She is the first Cohasset gymnast to complete six years of performing in the South Shore League.

In vaulting, McMahon got first while Jeanne Baccari tied for third place with her highest score of the season, a 7.9. Walls and Carlson also vaulted for Cohasset at the All-League meet.

Two weeks ago Cohasset (10-0) won the SSL championship with Hanover and Duxbury knotted for second place.

High School Wrestling Sectionals at CHS

The South Sectional Division II Wrestling Tournament will be held on Friday, Feb. 19 and Saturday, Feb. 20 at Cohasset High School.

Wrestlers from 27 schools including teams from the South Central area will participate in the two-day event. Consolodation of these Division II teams will undoubtably lend itself to some very exciting competition.

Join your favorite local team whether it's Cohasset, Duxbury, Norwell or Scituate and cheer on the areas best wrestlers. Competition should be keen for this double elimination event whose finalists will go on to the State tournament.

The Cohasset Boosters Club and the parents of Cohasset's wrestlers will be running a concession in the Cohasset High Cafeteria featuring a hearty home-cooked breakfast and lunch/dinner menu for the convenience of the wrestlers and their friendly supporters.

Since this is Cohasset's first time hosting the event, and the number of entrants is larger than in the past, we urge all South Shore wrestling fans to attend. T-shirts commemorating this first-time-event will be on sale at the tournament.

'A Man for all Seasons' opens next weekend

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's production scheduled for Feb. 25-27 is Robert Bolt's "A Man for all Seasons," the story of Sir Thomas More, 16th century Churchman, scholar and statesman and finally a martyr for his religious beliefs.

"A Man For All Seasons" contains a virtual parade of the high and the mighty in Renaissance England, all in colorful costumes representing that flamboyant era.

The Cohasset production will see Ben Duffy of Hingham playing the eminent Sir Thomas More. Many of the words spoken by More in the play actually were said by Sir Thomas himself over four centuries ago.

Other characters in the play also are historically accurate. Thomas Cranmer, the Archbishop of Canterbury, will be played by David Barrett of Cohasset. It was Cranmer who, in real life, later officiated at the wedding of Henry VIII and Ann Boleyn, and himself was executed as a heretic in the year 1556.

Striding across the stage of "A Man For All Seasons," will be the renowned Sir Thomas Howard, the Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of England, one of the Realm's most able soldiers.

Sir Richard Rich, another historical figure, began his successful political career as an informer and perjuror, then rose to become Chancellor of England, following in that office both Sir Thomas More and the famous Cardinal Wolsey.

The young Richard Rich will be played by Carl Slotnick of Cohasset. King Henry VIII was one of the most famous Monarchs of Renaissance Europe.

In "A Man For All Seasons" he appears as the youthful King, before the Holbein portrait shows him as an eventual victim of his own excesses.

Scott Ketcham of Cohasset recreates the exuberant young Henry.

In the real 16th century, William Roper married a girl named Margaret More. She was a daughter of Sir Thomas and Lady Alice More. Roper eventually became the biographer of Sir Thomas. His wife, the Lady Margaret More, was a young woman of uncommon grace and excelling intellect. In Cohasset, Roper will be portrayed by Stanley Campbell of Weymouth, and Lady Margaret by Julia Jordan of Cohasset.

The Lady Alice, More's wife by an arranged marriage, emerges as a woman of strong words and opinions who deeply loved her husband and children. Her suffering during her husband's ordeal will be depicted by Ellen Kelly of Weymouth, an experienced actress in this role.

Throughout "A Man For All Seasons" there appears a fictional but very real character called "The Common Man." His role, in fact, is a series of vignette parts portraying several varieties of common men, the workaday citizens of a great empire; the servants, boatmen, innkeepers, jailors, jurors and even executioners, whose names never appear in history books, but without whom "civilization" would slowly grind to a halt. The Common Man carries on a lively and sometimes humorous conversation with himself, with others, and even addresses the audience. In his diverse manifestations, the Common Man will be played by Bob Schultz of Scituate.

These are the characters who populate Robert Bolt's "A Man For All Seasons."

They will gather together, much as they did once before in 16th century England, now for three evenings of theatrical performance on Feb. 25, 26 and 27 at the Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets to the Cohasset Dramatic Club's show are $3.50 (on Thursday the 25th, student will be admitted for $1 and Senior Citizens will be invited at no large).

"A Man For All Seasons," is a rare opportunity to witness the doings of Soldiers and Statesmen, Cardinals and Kings, and Common people in an age long past.

Five CHS hockey players named all stars

Five Cohasset varsity ice hockey players were named, last week, to the South Shore League all-star squad.

Danny Bowen, Dom Campedelli, Rich Evans, Jack McNeill and Andy Pottenger were selected for their outstanding performances in the '81-82 season.

Cohasset, the SSL champions were to play the all-stars in Plymouth on Saturday but the game was cancelled due to snow. The SSL Champs will be at full strength versus the all-stars since the five Skipper representatives are expected to suit up for Cohasset. When the Mariner went to press on Tuesday, a new date for the all-star contest had not yet been determined.

In hockey action last week, the Skippers scrimmaged New Hampton for a 4-4 tie in New Hampshire on Valentine's Day. Last Friday, Cohasset skated past Scituate with a 9-2 victory.

The Cohasset icemen are undefeated 16-0-2 overall and 9-0-1 in the SSL.

Mike Nedrow scored a hat-trick for Cohasset while teammate Jack McNeill assisted on three goals. Andy Pottenger and Don O'Neill registered two goals and two assists each for the Skippers. Danny Bowen scored twice for Cohasset.

The Skippers skated out to a commanding start with six goals in the first period. The Sailors trailed 6-1 at the end of the first and didn't score again until the third period.

Senior co-captain Torin Sweeney, whose opponent is undefeated in his 134-pound weight class, pinned his opponent in just 12 seconds.

Senior Bob Donahue pinned his heavyweight opponent early in the third period. Leone was pleased with the bout and Donahue's prevailing stamina.

With two seconds remaining in the first period, sophomore Lee Reid pinned a Trojan wrestler on his back. Leone said Reid should be interesting to watch in wrestling for the next two years. Reid is a first year wrestler with an excellent attitude, said Leone.

Cohasset, 5-10 overall is gearing up for the South Sectionals on Friday and Saturday.

To know that what is impenetrable to us really exist, manifesting itself as the highest wisdom and the most radiant beauty, which our dull facilities can comprehend only in the most primitive forms this knowledge, this feeling is at the center of true religiousness. In this sense, and in this sense only, I belong to the ranks of the devoutly religious men.

Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students. Proceeds of this concert will go to benefit the Cohasset Metco Scholarship Fund. For ticket information call Phillip Burrows at 383-6105 (days) or 331-6443 (nights).

Blood donor program

South Shore Hospital began a new Blood Donor Program at the hospital this week to help meet the increasing need for replacement units of blood for patients undergoing surgery.

Blood bank officials at the hospital are hopeful that employees, friends and relatives of patients and members of the general public will donate blood regularly through this conveniently located blood donor program.

Grace Ulwick, head of South Shore Hospital's laboratory, estimates that the hospital now uses between 400 and 500 units of blood each month. Mrs. Ulwick is hopeful that the new Blood Donor Program will eventually reduce the hospital's dependence on outside suppliers, from whom blood is now obtained.

Blood may now be donated by appointment through the hospital's Blood Donor Program on Wednesdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. These hours of operation are scheduled to be expanded in the future. Blood donors may schedule an appointment by calling 337-7011 (ext. 273), between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Community Center activities

A special Wickerbasket Workshop will be offered at theCommunity Center of Cohasset Saturday, Feb. 27, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Reservations are now being accepted for a bus trip to the Puppet Showplace in Brookline for "The Leprechaun of Donegal" Saturday, March 13, from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The cost for the trip to the professional theatre which is devoted solely to puppetry and has been featured in the media is $6.

Free seminars at HPL

Investors Diversified Services (IDS) of Minneapolis, will offer a free seminar on the new tax deferred IRA's (Individual Retirement Accounts) at the Hingham Public Library Wednesday, Feb. 24.

This will be the first of a series of free seminars on personal financial planning that IDS will be running at the HPL over the next five months.

The seminar will provide information on the new IRA's, which can be used to reduce federal income taxes while creating earnings which are tax free. The class will also seek to furnish ideas on flexible re-investment possibilities and professional investment management.

The seminar will be held in the Whiton Room and will begin at 7 p.m. Because class space is limited, the library asks that anyone interested in attending make reservations by calling 749-0907.

Derby's spring exhibition

Spring traditionally brings an exhibition of the Derby Academy students' artistic endeavors. A new addition will be introduced this year which may evolve into another tradition for the Hingham school.

This time the creative efforts of professional and amateur artists among the parents, faculty and grandparents are being assembled for an exhibition in the Derby Academy library.

The Derby Academy Parents' Association in cooperation with Ronnie Waters of the school's art department is sponsoring the exhibit to allow students, parents and friends a chance to view the varied talents of its parent body and faculty and perhaps, to inspire future creativity.

Scheduled for the first week of March, the show will feature paintings and drawings, sculpture and stain glass, graphics, photography, pottery, fine needlework and quilting, cabinetwork and jewelry.

Town meeting short of a quorum, no action on dump proposal

An hour after it should have begun, the special town meeting was 73 voters short of a quorum.

So there's no decision on the fate of the town dump.

A poll of hands showed that if the vote had been possible Monday night at the high school, the dump would have gotten the money required for continued operation.

Now officials plan further study on the alternatives to pin down the cost.

The options available to the town are: curbside trash pick-up, creation of a transfer station at the present dump with the rubbish hauled to the Cohasset Heights dump, or expansion of the Cedar Street dump and continued municipal operation.

Town Moderator William Weeks thanked the voters who did show up for "their patience and forbearance." He told the voters there would be a brief report on the status of the dump despite the group's inability to take any action.

"Less than a week ago, Barry Bros. who are in the process of buying the (James) Tyeryar landfill gave the town two proposals."

One calls for spending $166,090 a year for curbside trash pick-up. The other calls for $190 a pick-up at the town dump, turned transfer station, for each bin plus $3,120 to service the bins. The contract would run five years the Boston consumer price index used as the inflation factor. It would be possible to renew the contract for 20 years, provided space was still available at the commercial dump.

"We're still trying to manipulate the numbers," Bliss said. "But it seems it will cost approximately the same to operate the municipal dump as to transfer the trash up to Barry Bros.

"Curbside would cost twice as much."

The determination on those numbers will be worked out in the next few months by members of the long range disposal area study committee, the capital budget committee and board of health.

Ernest Stevens said after the meeting adjourned that there are questions still to be answered on the Barry Bros. proposal but his figures indicate it might cost about the same to keep the municipal dump open as to have curbside pick-up. He thinks the commercial operation would cost less than the municipal one.

"But it depends on capital outlays involved," he said.

"A tractor is needed to haul the bins," he continued. "We know the one we have won't last $10 years but we don't know how long it will last."

The board of health plans to send a list of written questions to Barry Bros.

Bliss told the gathering there are substantial questions unresolved, including whether it would be possible to operate the transfer station on weekends, what would happen to commercial and municipal trash (the proposal addressed only non-compacted residential trash), what would happen to leaves or large items, and the life of the dump.

He said officials wanted the matter postponed until the answers could be found. The town is under

Rocco Laugelle will run on his record

By Patricia Desmond

Selectman Rocco Laugelle is running on his record.

"I feel I've done the best I could as a selectman," the incumbent said during an interview at the front of the high school auditorium Monday night.

He and 126 other voters were sitting in the hall hoping a quorum would materialize to take up the business left undone at the special town meeting that began in December.

In the parking lot there were already a few cars wearing the bumper stickers that were just ready that very day.

The blue and white rectangles say simply "Reelect Rocky Laugelle Selectman." Blue and white are Cohasset High Schools's colors.

He's running a simple campaign. In fact the candidate seemed uncomfortable in the spotlight.

The Mariner's photographer asked him to pose for the political file and so Laugelle sat back and looked toward the camera.

"Not here, could you stand over by that wall," the photographer asked.

"Do you have to do this in front of all these people?" Laugelle said, but he cooperated.

Laugelle has been active in town politics a long time. He is finishing his first term as selectman and will be seeking another three year term in the town election Saturday, April 10.

His only known opposition will come from Jim Lagrotteria, vice chairman of the advisory board.

Laugelle has been in elective office for 15 years, including the three as selectman. He served on both the water and sewer commissions for a total of 12 years prior to becoming a town father.

Before that he served on various committees.

"I have the best interests of the town at heart," he said. "I've always been involved."

He thinks his prime accomplishment for the town has been the work on the town reservoir and water treatment plant.

"I stayed with it on the board (of water commissioners) until it was finished. I stay with a job until it's complete.

"Not that as a selectman, you can complete the job. It's a continual thing there."

On the reservoir, Laugelle pointed out that the construction was given the town a water supply that will be sufficient for many years to come.

New tax rate may fall below $25

Nothing is official yet but the town's tax rate may well be below the $25 limit mandated by Proposition 2½.

And the assessments under the revaluation may be a figure higher than 100 percent. Of course, it's impossible to tell how much the valuation figures and total town valuation become matters of public record.

Thomas Mahaney, who is working as the town's consultant in the revaluation process, was in the assessors' office at town hall Monday looking over valuation books.

He said he would know in 10 days' time whether the valuation figures submitted to the state will be considered "on the right track or not."

In the meantime he does not plan to divulge the number they all add up to. He said a tax rate may well be certified in 30 days.

Once the state gives him some indication of whether the figures are acceptable, Mahaney said he would check with the assessors for permission to release the information.

He did say the valuation figure he estimated for the town for work on the budget last year — $225 million — was conservative.

He said town officials wouldn't be surprised at the total valuation figure when it comes out.

Currently the assessments in the total $93 million. Last year when implementing Proposition 2½, the state allowed towns undergoing revaluation to come up with estimated valuation figures for the basis of the budget. Cohasset was one of those estimating.

Mahaney said Cohasset's real estate market is unusual.

Hockey squad makes tourney debut

The Cohasset varsity ice hockey team is revving up for their state tourney debut on Friday.

The Skippers (17-1-2) will meet either Cape Cod Tech or Seekonk at the Gallo Rink in Bourne for the second round of the Eastern Massachusetts Division II playoffs. The opening faceoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Cohasset, the South Shore League Champs, emerged from a busy week with wins over Taunton, 5-0, and the SSL all-stars, 3-2. Last Tuesday, Scituate (4-11-1) woke the Skippers from a dreamy undefeated season with a 4-3 victory.

The Sailors accomplished what 19 other squads had been trying to do since November — blemish Cohasset's perfect record. Through the Skippers were without the services of senior defenseman Dom Compedelli, Coach Tom Burnell blamed the loss on the entire team for not playing up to par. Cohasset slept through most of the game, he said.

While many say one loss in 20 is a relief, the irony and disappointing factor is that two weeks ago, Cohassset easily beat Scituate, 9-2.

Four CHS wrestlers advance

(see page 15)

Scituate's sophomore goalie, Robbie Grant had a spectacular performance and collected 37 saves in last week's win. The Skippers outshot the Sailors 40-23 but could not manage to outscore the Scituate icemen.

Cohasset's week

The Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council will not meet again until May 20.

The council met last week and decided it would off its own deliberations until the state does a traffic study — something that is expected to take three months.

The study is the first phase of a three phase project aimed at selecting an alternative entrance to the park. The only access at present is through Union Street in Hingham although land in the park includes nearly 3,000 acres in Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate.

Addition to budget

Selectmen are considering an addition of $1,000 to their FY '83 budget for the purchase of new helmets and bunker coats for the fire department.

Board member Mary Jane McArthur said equipment would be purchased gradually over a three year period for the fire department.

Year-round liquor license

Selectmen unanimously approved the Cohasset Golf Club's request for a year-round liquor license last Wednesday. The golf club has held a seasonal liquor license for many years.

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie said the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission must also give approval before the license is issued.

Selectmen accept grant

Selectmen accepted a $21,250 Coastal Zone Management grant last week which enables Cohasset to develop preliminary engineering designs for the expansion and improvement of the commercial fish pier at Government Wharf in the harbor.

CZM Director Richard Delaney presented selectment with the award which is comprised of $17,000, directly from the CZM, and a $4,250 match from the town.

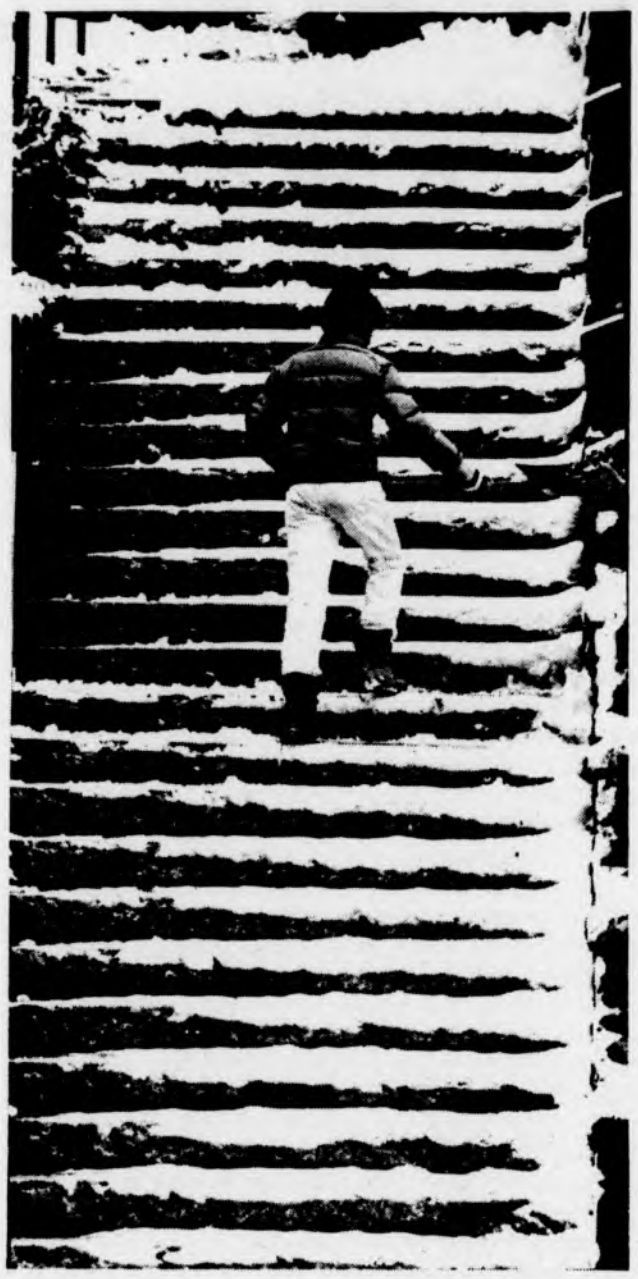
The CZM grant is one of 14 which will be awarded to Massachusetts coastal communities this year. Fran Schofield of CZM said Cohasset was one of 76 applicants for the grant. She said Cohasset was selected because of the efforts of Charles Fink and the Harbor Study Committee and due to results Cohasset had with a previous grant.

Pole relocation

A pole relocation request from Eastern Edison Company was approved by selectmen last week. One pole will be moved on Border Street.

Town hall rental

The Village Fair received unanimous permission last week from selectmen for rental of town hall on December 2, 3 and 4.



The board also considered a request from the Congregational Church Choir for use of town hall for their production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Sorcerer" in June.

The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to rent town hall on April 3 and 4 for the roadrace registration.

Canteen truck

A Vermont couple recently corresponded with selectmen in regard to obtaining a license to peddle food from a canteen truck. Executive secretary to selectmen, Arthur Clark will supply the couple with necessary information and applications.

Clark said, currently, no one has a license to peddle from canteen trucks in Cohasset.

Laugelle will run on his record...

He pointed out he was on the sewer commission when the board began work on the current treatment plant on Elm Street.

"I hope to continue as a selectman," Laugelle said.

Meantime someone came over and told the incumbent how well he was looking in his pin-striped suit.

Laugelle laughed and answered with one of his typical joking replies.

"Now don't you put that in the paper," he said turning to the reporter.

He's quite serious about his candidacy.

Another reporter, listening to some of the discussion, asked Laugelle what in town he would change.

The selectman hesitated.

"I love Cohasset," he said. "I grew up here. I do whatever I can to help.

"But the selectmen, as the town fathers, actually can't do as much as you'd expect. We don't have complete control over the town.

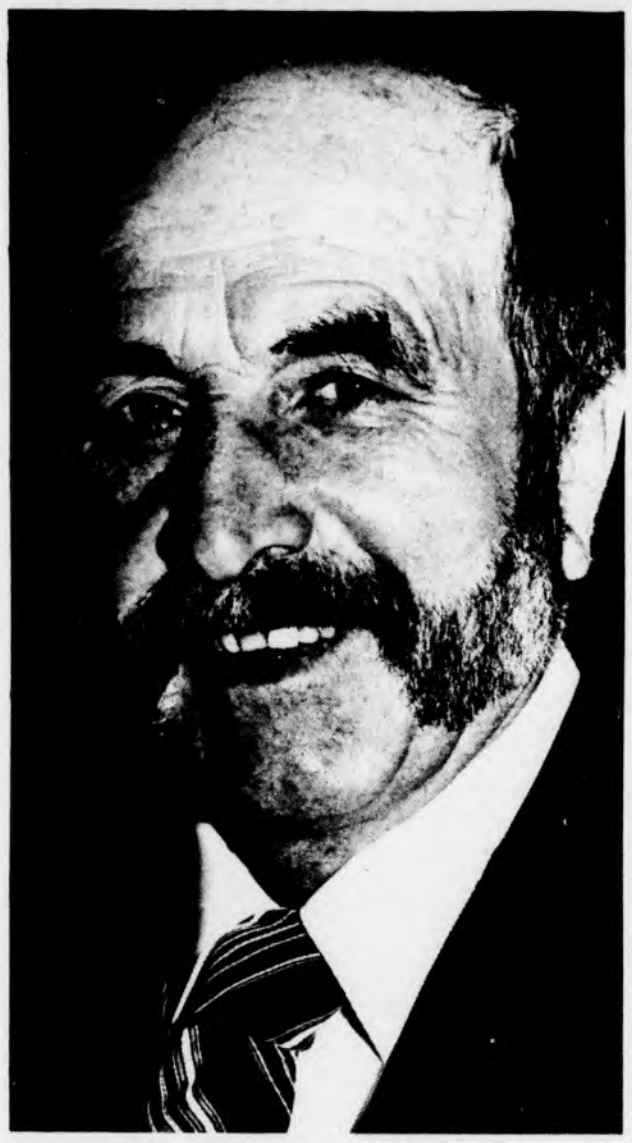
"We don't control the schools, we don't control the highway, actually. We don't control the board of health (which runs the dump)."

And then he added the water and sewer departments to the list of town functions not controlled by the selectmen.

"Let's face it," he said. "There are small things we can do."

He said the handling of the fire and police departments are the biggest issues the selectmen have been and will be dealing with.

He sees the appointment of the new fire chief as the biggest task facing the board right now.



The position of fire chief is not under civil service. A search committee is already beginning the process of screening applicants for final selection by the selectmen.

He sees little likelihood of a public safety commissioner being appointed to oversee the operation of the fire and police departments. He said whether someone from a police or fire background was chosen for the job, there would be lack of acceptance from the other department.

In the three years in the selectman's seat, Laugelle said probably the largest issue was the appointment of the police chief.

Chief John DeBassio, who was appointed two years ago, is not under civil service. He came to the town from the Brockton police force under the same sort of process that is being used for the selection of a new fire chief.

"There's been a great change in the police department," Laugelle said. "It's run more professionally now."

Rocco Laugelle

He said DeBassio is doing a very good job.

What about the parking tickets?

"There's been surprisingly little flak," he replied. "We don't, in fact I haven't heard, any complaints about the chief."

Should the police department have a detective?

"If the chief thinks it's necessary and he has the personnel, then by all means, we should have one," he said.

On his opponent:

"I haven't a bad word to say about Jimmy," said the father of four. Laugelle's children range in age from 30 to 7.

All quiet on the political front...

Political activity is still in the cocoon stage as only a few races seem to be forming for the town election on Saturday, April 10.

Joseph Nedrow of Fairoaks Lane has taken out papers for school committee but has not yet made a formal announcement.

He would be pitted against two incumbents with a vote for two option. Both Irene Brown, school committee chairman, and Martha Gjesteby have their papers. The terms are both three years.

So far only Selectman Rocco Laugelle and James LaGrotteria, both of whom have already announced, have papers for the three year selectmen's term.

Mary Muncey has papers out for one of the three five year terms on the recreation commission. Incumbent Nancy Sladen also has papers out.

William Weeks, former state senator who was appointed to fill the moderator's office after David Place resigned, has his papers in circulation.

Assessor Michael Patrolia will stand for re-election.

Lot Bates has his nomination papers with the group in the selectmen's office at town hall. He's up for reelection to a three year term on the water commission.

Joseph Gwinn, incumbent, has taken out papers for his three year term on the sewer commission.

All three incumbents for trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library have their papers out. The three, whose terms are three years, are Elizabeth Eaton, Nancy Gilmore and David Chittim.

The nomination papers can be taken out until March 5. By March 8 the papers must be returned for certification by the board of registrars with signatures of 50 registered voters.

Chinese cooking course at Community Center

Helen Desmond who has been featured on the Today Show and has had many other public appearances, will teach her popular course in Chinese Cooking, once again, at the center.

Reservations are still be accepted for the program which is scheduled for Wednesday, March 3, 10 and 24 from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m. The cost for the three session course is $45 and includes the cost of the food. Further information is available at 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Health agent Kevin O'Brien quits, will explain why later

Kevin O'Brien, health agent, resigned recently but he isn't ready to talk about his plans quite yet.

He will continue on as health agent until April 1.

Found working in the health board's office Monday afternoon, O'Brien smiled about the rumors that are circulating in the absence of a firm statement on his rationale.

"I'll have a statement on my plans in mid-March," he said, relighting his pipe. He did say stories he might be ill or about to move to Florida were just rumors. He also said he didn't want to comment.

O'Brien has worked as the town's health agent for the past seven years.

The board of health is in the process of finding a replacement for O'Brien already. This week an advertisement was sent to the Globe, the Herald and the Ledger explaining the qualifications.

Marilyn Sweeney, a member of the board, said Monday night that resumes would be accepted until March 15.

She said she expected the new health agent would be selected the following week to allow some time for training with O'Brien before he leaves.

Tax rate...

"Per capita Cohasset has had the highest number of new starts in the state in the past two years," he commented.

Houses in town are selling in a real estate market that is frozen elsewhere.

In the meantime the school committee and advisory board have been at opposite sides on the question of budget preparation.

The advisory board met two weeks ago with the school officials looking for a list of places where cuts would be made if the town's tax limitation allows for the minimum increase. The budget prepared by the school administration is $100,000 above that limit.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell has said he would be ready to make cuts if he had to but that if the revaluation brings the town to a total value of $230 million, his budget plan would be only $30,000 too high. He has also said he could absorb that $30,000.

The indications are the valuation will turn out to be higher than $230 million.

Suzy McMahon 8th at gymnastic invitation

Eight seemed to be a popular number for gymnast Suzy McMahon last week. McMahon, who is an eighth grader on varsity for the Skippers, placed eighth in a field of 30 vaulters at the Eastern Massachusetts Individual Invitational Gymnastics meet at North Quincy High School.

McMahon achieved her highest mark of the season — 8.75 at the invitational meet last week. She qualified for vaulting competition with an 8.3 average of her four best scores during the season.

Coach Andrea Palardy said McMahon performed a remarkable vault which is titled "Tsukahara" and looks like this: a half turn off the board, onto the horse, handstand, with a one and a half back tuck off the horse.

Palardy said the McMahon is most likely to qualify "all-around" for the invitational meet next year. In fact, if she hadn't been out sick half the season, she would have qualified for more events this year, said Palardy.

The Cohasset gymnasts finished 10-0 as South Shore League Champions this season.

Children's movie at CCC

A special children's movie classic will be shown by the Cohasset Community Center, this Saturday, at the Town Hall at 2 p.m. The charge is $1 and refreshments will be sold.

Town meeting...

state mandate to cap the present dump is to win state approval, the town would be forced to pay out the capping cost plus another $65,000.

It is expected the dump question will be placed on a special town meeting warrant which will convene Saturday, April 3, the day of the annual town meeting.

Monday voters had a series of questions on the situation.

One person wanted to know what wouldhappento recycling.

Bliss said it could continue either with the use of the municipal dump or with use of a transfer station. He said it would not be possible with curbside pick-up.

"The board of health is considering mandatory recycling," Bliss added.

Someone else asked about the life of the present dump.

"If we ignore everything, we could get by until July," Bliss said. With work he said it's possible the expanded area could serve the town for 10 years.

Bliss said if the Cohasset Heights dump is filled according to its maximum capacity a day. The state-approved plan would be filled in within the next year or two. He added that the state could approve a new plan after that time.

When the voters were polled, there was only a scattering of hands in favor of curbside pick-up or hauling to Cohasset Heights.

around town

Around Town Columnist Laura Doherty dumped Around Town in my lap last Saturday when she went off skiing for the week...so if this doesn't live up to her clever style, you can be thankful it will be over shortly...with this issue. Gosh it was hard finding people at home!

☐A person who recently saw Marie Price downtown said she was all pink. That probably means she just returned from some place in the sun. Jane and Chet Ellis were in Hawaii last week... and I heard Eileen and Paul Corbett went on their first family skiing vacation. Laura will have to fill you in on some of those vacationing Cohassetites details next week.

I'm going to concentrate on those of you I found at home.

☐Yvette Rattenbury will start her new job as a Scituate Police Dispatcher next month...she's excited about finally getting to perform the function she was hired for in Cohasset but was unable to perform as a result of the Town and Police Union difficulities which arose shortly following her appointment.

☐Connie Parker, Jan Ditmar (who is presently a floating secretary at Town Hall) and I all shared the same aches and pains last week. Two of us finally sought medical relief. Connie says she is going to "tough" it out. She can't remember the last time she went to a doctor.

Between aches and aspirin, Connie is very much enjoying the reading of "Pastora," by Johanna Barnes, a resident of Hingham.

☐Just a quick note here to some very clever and fine ladies who after four years closed the door to a darling village speciality shop last week... Bobbi Cox and Judy Keim. We were all upset to learn there would be no more Wee Spinnaker.

☐Sue Grant of South Main Street recently visited her Grandmother Nel Jones in St. Louis to help celebrate a 100th birthday. According to Sue, when Nel opened a card from Ronald and Nancy Reagan bearing greetings, she was a little upset over how they knew she was 100. Sue said Nel Jones lives alone in her own apartment and does quite nicely with a little cooking assistance.

☐When I talked with Trish Massa last week her husband Ron (Director of Marketing Sales for Massa Products) and Donny Massa (President of Massa Products) had just returned from a trip to Taiwan where they spoke to governmental officials regarding some product lines.

☐Some of the loveliest things happened to some very nice people on Valentine's Day...Judy (Powell) Knox and Bob Knox were married in a double-ring double-minister ceremony at John Benbow's Church on the Common. Ed Atkinson assisted in the deed. Judy made a lovely bride, in a lacey blouse and full-length flowing skirt. Donna Cogill, her matron of honor, was dressed similarily. There should be more details here, I know, but this particular guest thought the wedding was at 2 p.m. and missed the ceremonies.

The Knox's held a reception on Jerusalem Road after the ceremonies for friends and relatives. Happy New Future Together to Judy and Bob, Alex, Collin, Jacob, Erin, Ian and Campbell...we couldn't be happier for you!

☐Another nice Valentine happening...the most eligible bachelor in town and a very lovely lady became engaged. But we don't have permission to publish the official news yet. The wedding, however, will be June 12.

☐Someone saw a person dragging a mattress down Jerusalem Road the other day. He deposited it in front of a neighbor's home.

☐Judy Volungis is spending the grey (but starting to look like spring) days playing Atari and Intelevision. She says Intelevision really is more challenging...but she likes them both. John Kuhn's Birthday Party was the last big social event Judy attended. She said she is rabbit-sitting and a little jealous that everyone has gone skiing.

Tara Volungis, Karen Story and Hillary Perudian are all enjoying their art lessons at the South Shore Art Center.

☐Barbara Young starts her new job as a Molecular Biologist at N.E. Nuclear in Newton, March 8. She will be supervising the production of research kits for academia labs. She reports her daughter, Dana, recently celebrated a half year by inviting all young men to a party. Dana is now walking sideways and trying to catch June (the Young's cat).

☐Roger Porter got new sails for Christmas! And the rest of the Flying Scott Fleet isn't too happy about that. They are Boston Sails, but somehow they were made in Michigan. Roger noted they are transparent..."I've decided to be invisible...my only chance," he said. When asked if he thought the new sails could beat Pete Chapman, who has been coming in first in the fleet for as long as I can remember, Porter said:

"Chapman's sails are finally worn out. We're all going to beat him. He's been mixing and matching his sails for the last couple of years...he doesn't really know which of his sails are fastest. He's confused."

Bob Davenport, when asked about Porter's new sails, also dumped on Chapman. "He's (Pete's) loosing his top crew...Steve D'Onofrio. When Steve wasn't crewing with him last year we always beat Chapman. But then he'll probably find someone else...he always does. (The Davenport's horse and five other Cohasset horses are wintering at the Lazy M. Ranch which has an indoor ring... sounds very lazy to me).

Pete Conway said his crew (Jerry Schultz, Dick Horn and Regina Shultz) which sails on "Bottom Boat" (and it is), is going to win with its old sails.

Other Flying Scotters also predicted 1982 would not be a good year for Chapman. Chapman could not be reached for comment.

☐Jan Daggett was recently luncheon hostess to over 35 appointed and elected lady town officials...many of whom had never met before.

"It was really a grizzly time of the year and I thought it might be nice if we all got to meet one another...do something besides attend meetings until 12-2 in the morning. It was purely social...nothing political. Several of the women hold full-time jobs and only know the people on their own boards." Jan said she served a casserole (a Paello recipe), salad and cookies."

☐Martha Gjesteby's nickname is Tigger.

☐Heather Ripley and Lisa Harris spent the week in New Hampshire, skiing. And Noel Ripley wishes to announce to his neighbors through this column that he did not steal the ancient sign which used to be in front of Judy Arndt's house which pointed the way to Boston. That sign, under much distress from repeated vandalism, was put into safekeeping by the Historic Society. Noel liked it so much he carved a replica sign of his own and attached it to his home.

☐Will there be yet a third candidate for selectmen? Some say yes, others, nay.

☐K.B. wants to know "What ever happened to Elspeth Huxley — did she ever go back to Trika?

☐A person who voted for chemical spraying of gypsy moths said she did so because "I have all perennials and they don't need bees."

☐A Cohasset resident who recently visited New York said a cabbie asked him upon entering his cab if he knew how to spell ukulele. When he said he thought so, the cabbie bet him $5 he couldn't. After our friend lost, the cabbie said he made $200 a week driving a cab in New York and an additional $300 a week betting that his customers couldn't spell ukulele. Statistic: reportedly, only one in 100 people could spell it. I couldn't spell it for this column until I saw it in the Globe.

☐A small beef, here. Reporters, school committeemen, principals, town officials and everybody must stop referring to The School Committee (or any other committee) as "they." The School Committee is referred to as "it" unless in the previous reference the noun "members" follows School Committee.

In addition, I don't know of any instance in which punctuation marks (period, exclamation or semi-colons) fall outside a quotation mark. Do you?

☐The average age of a math teacher in the Quincy School System is 54 years old. Heard that interesting fact at a recent party.

☐If Clark Chatterton had not been sound asleep when I called last week there would be more news.

☐Lawns rolled? Leaves raked? Paint and windows washed? Babysitting? Contact the Social Service League of Cohasset — 383-0771. They have an up-to-date file of high school students who would like to earn money and will do these and other jobs for you. It is all part of the Youth Employment Service sponsored by the League.

☐Navy Seaman Recruit Gustave F. Pratt, son of Stuart and Ester Pratt of 6 Schofield Road, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Orlando, Fla. He is a 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School.

Four CHS seniors are Merit finalists

Four high school seniors at CHS are finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

They are:

Stephen G. Bowen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowen of 15 Juniper Rise; Thomas S. Ryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Ryan of 17 Hillside Drive; Gwendolyn Smith, daughter of Ms. Suzanne Smith of 370 No. Main Street and James L. Sturdy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sturdy of 270 Jerusalem Road.

There are over 13,500 Finalists in the 1982 Merit Scholarship competition.

The process of selecting some 5,300 Merit Scholarship winners from among the Finalists is now underway and nearly all recipients will be notified by late March.

Since its beginning in 1955, the National Merit Scholarship Program has focused upon one small sector of the nation's secondary school students — those at the uppermost end of the academic ability scale. The program receives no federal or state grants, and it is the only major scholarship competition that is both privately funded and nationwide in scope. In the 26 competitions conducted between 1956 and 1981, over 68,000 able Finalists received Merit Scholarships worth about $193 million.

The total of Merit Scholarships being offered in 1982 is over nine times the number awarded in the first competition; however, program funds are limited and awards can be offered to fewer than forty percent of the Finalist group. Although the majority of Finalists will not win Merit Scholarships; many of these students will receive awards from other agencies and organizations — frequently from colleges and universities that are eager to enroll students of the high academic caliber that the Merit Program honors.

CHS students to 'Jump Rope for Heart'

Faculty and students from Cohasset will be skipping into health at the first annual Jump Rope for Heart at the Cohasset High School gym March 3 from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The program will benefit the American Heart Association.

Can 1,000,000 people be all wrong? Not when it comes to Jump Rope for Heart. Last year that many participants raised money for the American Heart Association programs of research, education and community service by dividing into teams and jumping rope for three hours each.

Young people from over 6,000 schools in all 50 states raised over $12 million making this the largest event in the Association's 32 year history.

Prizes of jump ropes, hats and bags will be awarded based upon how much money individuals raise. Each member of the winning team that raises over $300 will receive a Jump Rope for a Heart warm-up suit. Refreshments will be provided to all participants courtesy of the Booster Club.

For more details on participation, or if you wish to sponsor a student, contact Ms. Marilyn Watson, 383-6100 or your local Heart office, 584-0446.

Early release day

Thursday will be an Early Release Day for all Cohasset schools.

There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule.

Buses will depart Deer Hill at the junior and senior high school at 12:20 p.m. Buses will depart Deer Hill at 12:45 p.m. and at Joseph Osgood School at 12:55 p.m.

Wompatuck access

The Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council has gone underground for three months to give the state time to do a traffic study.

The only issue we've ever heard discussed at these advisory meetings has been the question of access. Hingham wants an access over the Norwell wellfields. Norwell doesn't. The park includes land in Hingham, Norwell, Scituate and Cohasset.

In fact Beechwood Street leads to the park land.

Perhaps this is the time for the selectmen to set up a local study committee to think about the question. Even the selectmen have no formal opinion on what is in the town's best interest as far as access is concerned.

There is a possibility — hardly one promoted by Hingham — of a second access into the park being created over woodlands in Cohasset.

We think the Advisory Council which includes two Cohasset members ought to think about more than the question of access.

Recently the park imposed a rate hike for campers. We wonder why the Advisory Council had no opinion on the issue. We wonder why there was no public debate and discussion.

Development plans for the park are something the council should be considering.

We would like to see less blacktop used in the park's future. But other people may and probably do have other ideas.

This is the time to be talking about where the park should go.

Should it be a passive recreation area? Or should the old plan for a swimming pool be pushed ahead?

This year with the budget crunch pressing into even the state coffers it's unlikely there will be any hefty construction.

But the recession won't last forever. And the time to plan is before the plans are made in definitive ink.

The 'nuke' warning...

By Bucky Yardume

Commentary

One of the scarier things recently was a seemingly innocuous photo of a workman toiling on an elevated battery of sirens.

They were part of the alarm system at the Pilgrim I nuclear plant in Plymouth.

Their purpose is simple. In the event of a major breakdown at the plant, the sirens will signal everyone up or down range to evacuate. Depending on the time of year and wind direction, that could be Cohasset Village or Brewster.

Not to worry, of course! Everyone connected with Pilgrim I and every other counterpart anywhere assures everyone there's no need for concern.

It may have happened at Three Mile Island with lesser incidents at other facilities in Vermont, New York, California and elsewhere. But nothing really bad happened, it says somewhere. So not to worry!

Nevertheless, there are those who do. Worry, that is.

There are ever increasing groups who have worked hard to halt any expansion of such plants. They succeeded in getting Pilgrim II scrubbed. They didn't stop the plant at Seabrook. But they're still trying.

They're related to groups who feel the same way about nuclear weaponry escalation and want to stop that, along with junking lethal missiles already in place.

In short, people worry — reassurances notwithstanding — about things nuclear.

They include not just liberals, middle-of-the-roaders, and conservatives, including the military... scientists...doctors...dentists...lawyers...housewives...Indian chiefs.

They include some people who work at nuclear plants.

Unlike nuclear warfare apprehension, the fears do not envision a Hiroshima-type holocaust explosion. Radiation — no less deadly — is the concern.

People look at Three Mile Island — still closed down after years — and refuse to believe it or worse can't happen somewhere, anywhere.

They look at reports that a pipe leak here and there is an obsolescent factor that springs radioactive leaks leading to shutdowns. They worry that such shutdowns may not be in time. They are concerned why such devices aren't replaced before there are radiation leaks, why controls aren't more stringent.

If they are realistic at all, they know the answer is money.

That doesn't make them sleep any better or resent the emphasis on economics over human factors.

They've heard the same tune often enough. From the chemical industry, assuring all is safe yet polluting Love Canal and residents and those around hazardous waste dumps. From industry polluting the air with highly toxic emissions because it's cheaper. From an Administration which clearly thinks bucks are more important than people.

So they worry and lobby and fight against the iron of industry and the White House.

But all their apprehensions and real fear are depicted graphically in that guy atop the pole working on those sirens.

The sirens, after all, are symbolic of a system that says on the one hand there's nothing to fear yet installs the tocsins. Granted, the sirens never would have been installed along with so-called evacuation plans, unless pressure was heavy.

There is — the nuclear advocates will tell you still — no need.

But there are the sirens and the evacuation plans and that's the proof the public still is being snookered.

The South Shore, perhaps more than any place, is about as evacuable in a short space of time as a smelt frozen in a giant ice floe in the Antarctic.

Anyone in the area who ever commuted during rush hours or summer weekends knows you don't get to or fro in a hurry.

On even those tedious occasions there isn't mass panic. Isolated panic, perhaps for those with claustrophobia stuck in an immobilized line. Irritation certainly from those late for work or itchy to get wherever they're going but not getting there. But not sheer panic with a siren screaming a warning.

Now one's talking about thousands upon thousands more people than ever are on the roads at one time...on roads inadequate to handle even what passes for normal rush hour traffic...drivers frightened and susceptible to mistakes causing accidents. One fender-bender ties up regular traffic sometimes for hours.

That doesn't even take into consideration those without transportation in an area also notorious for lack of public transit. Those in hospitals, in convalescent homes, at home without wheels, in schools. Not that it really matters. A bus or van can't move any better in stalled traffic than a Ferrari. About now, somebody may suggest trying to take the commuter boat.

The whole thing is a colossally cruel joke being perpetrated on the public.

Only nobody should be laughing!

Historical Society to salute lifesaving service

By O.F. Ingram

A salute to the heroic record of Hull's lifesaving service, including the exploits of the legendary Capt. Joshua James, will be presented in the form of a specially commissioned slide show at a dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society to be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House on Tuesday evening, March 16.

The public is invited and tickets at $6.50 for the 6:30 p.m. dinner may be reserved by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr., Society president, at 383-0773.

The unusual slide show entitled "Shipwrecks, Savers and Survivors," was created by Anne Garrison of Cohasset and Renie Kramer of Marshfield on a commission from Judith Wiers, chairperson of the Hull Lifesaving Museum, and uses dual projectors with a synchronized musical sound track and multiple narrators to heighten the dramatic effect. The show was highly acclaimed when first presented last August 1 in Hull on the occasion of the birthday anniversary of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Ms. Wiers and the two producers of the show will be present at the dinner meeting and memorabilia of the lifesaving service, including the wedding dress of Capt. James' wife will be on display.

Miss Garrison is the daughter of Frederick and Nancy Garrison of King Street, Cohasset, and the grand-daughter of the late Mrs. Ralph Scripture, long-time Cohasset public official. She is now a member of the faculty of the New England School of Photography and the film was done as a course project of the school. It is designed to introduce Hull's outstanding lifesaving tradition and will be used in developmental efforts of the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

Studds hits Reagan administration on Coast Guard cut, El Salvador, etc.

By Donna Cogliano

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds met with some 65 citizens at town hall Sunday afternoon and spoke on various national and international issues.

Studds will be opposed in next fall's election by Jack Conway, a Republican.

Topics of discussion ranged from recent Coast Guard and social security spending cutbacks to the situation in El Salvador. The campaign was not mentioned.

Studds received two bursts of applause in response to his proposals for decreased spending in El Salvador and on defense.

Sunday marked Studd's 15th round of discussion meetings with voters of the 12th district. He said, 575 meetings had been held during the past five years.

The first question of the afternoon was what can Massachusetts expect in the way of school funding from the federal government? Studds said Massachusetts can expect less. He further stated that President Ronald Reagan has asked for substantial, steeper cuts in the areas of Title I and school lunches for fiscal year 1983.

Recent cuts in social security make it impossible for thousands of young men and women throughout the country to attend college next year, said Studds. Many high school seniors are just realizing the effects. Studds said in one small community within the 12th district, a school committee member informed him of nine high school seniors who have given up attending college next year because their social security payments for deceased or disabled parents would not be available.

Social Security payments for thousands of young men and women, who receive monthly payments for disabled, deceased, or retired parents, will soon be terminated. Studds said Reagan's proposal is short-sighted.

The congressman said he has an alternative to the president's termination of social security payments, college loans and grants. "I propose we make it possible for thousands of students to attend college."

He said, "A dollar invested in college education is not a dollar wasted. It's a dollar invested." The money will repay itself, over and over, because a college graduate is bound to be in a higher tax bracket with a higher income.

Studds opposed Reaganomics. The economy is a complex issue and "it is most dangerous for any leader to say 'I have a simple solution'," said Studds.

"The budget and tax proposals were submitted by the President with faith rather with reason," he said.

Reagan inherited a $100 billion defense budget while a $365 billion budget is projected in the next few years, said Studds.

"Let's not increase our defense expenditures, let's help our children go on to college, instead," he said. The audience responded to Studds' priorities with a supportive round of applause.

On the topic of nuclear weapons Studds said, "We don't need it. It makes us weaker and it's a waste of our resources." Studds said some 6,000 residents of Cape Cod signed a petition last month opposing the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

He described the president's press conference last Thursday as frightening on El Salvador. "The President is very badly advised," he said.

Reagan recently gave $55 million in aid to El Salvador from his contingency fund which doesn't require permission of Congress. Studds said Reagan can dip into the contingency fund for matters where the nation's security is at stake. Giving aid makes it tougher for Reagan to get out of El Salvador, said Studds.

A woman asked Studds how much more money Reagan could send to El Salvador. Studds said there was $250 million left in the emergency contingency fund.

At the conclusion of the El Salvador topic, the audience applauded Studds' stand on decreasing U.S. involvement in El Salvador. In fact Studds said he had promoted a bill which would cease aid to Central America. He hopes the bill receives a recorded vote. There are 100 co-sponsors of the bill.

Studds spoke of the decreased budget for the study of energy resources. The budget for alternatives forms of energy should be doubled instead of cut to zero, as proposed, he said.

Reagan has planned increased cuts for the Coast Guard in his FY '83 budget. As a result of these cutbacks, "people will die who otherwise would have lived," just because Congress chose to save money.

In a U.S. Coast Guard update it was said that 20-25 percent of their boats and vessels were unfit to sail.

Studds is opposed to the institution of a user fee to fund the Coast Guard.

"I've never seen a less thought-out proposal," said Studds. Last year not a single member of Congress would introduce the President's proposal for a user fee, he said.

It is projected that $400 million could be raised yearly from user fees. Studds said he doubts the bill would be introduced this year either. "I think its prospects are bleak," he said.

Both poets will comment on their residency work in the schools.

This reading will conclude the elementary schools' first artist-in-residence program which is designed to integrate professional artists into an educational setting. A compilation of Deer Hill student work was presented in December in "Others Croak Back" (still available) and a similar book of poetry will be published soon from the Osgood students' work.

The public is invited to attend the reading.

Funding for this performance will be provided in part by a grant from New England Telephone through The New England Foundation for the Arts and from the Artist-in-Residence Committee of the Cohasset Communications Councils.

CHS hockey ...

Cohasset led 3-0 near the close of the second period but the next four goals, including the game winner with seconds remaining, belonged to Scituate.

Andy Pottenger scored the game's first goal midway through the first period. Sean Curran got a goal six minutes into the second period and was assisted by teammates Joe Hoffman and Lee Wilson.

Mike Nedrow put the puck past Scituate with 47 seconds left in the second period. The Nedrow score was set up on swift passes from Don O'Neill and Pottenger.

Scituate's co-captain Dave Darmell, an OCL all-star, put his team on the scoreboard 10 seconds after Nedrow's goal. Sophomore John Devereaux assisted on that powerplay goal with 36 seconds remaining in the second period.

Cohasset is 17-1-2 overall and finished undefeated 9-0-1 in the SSL.

Five Cohasset icemen were named to the SSL all-star squad but played for Skippers in the exhibition contest. Danny Bowen, Dom Capedelli, Rich Evans, Jack McNeill, and Andy Pottenger were selected to the team.

Four wrestlers advance at sectionals

Four Cohasset wrestlers won top spots at the South Sectional Division II tourney which was hosted by the Skippers last weekend.

Among 27 teams, the Cohasset squad tied for 10th place with Algonquin (75½ points). Dedham won their fourth straight title with 160 points. Bridge-Water-Raynham placed second and Duxbury finished third with 121 points.

Senior co-captain Torin Sweeney won all his bouts in the 134 pound weight class except for the final versus Ross Porter of Shrewsbury. Porter edged past Sweeney, the hometown favorite, by a 4-2 score.

In the semifinals, Sweeney beat one of Scituate's finest, Tom Teare, by an 8-3 margin. Sweeney had defeated a Duxbury opponent to advance into the semifinals. Sweeney finished second among some 27 participants who participated in his weight class.

In dual meet competition Sweeney was undefeated 12-0 for thee season in the 134 pound division.

Coach John Leone spoke of Sweeney's success, "It is quite an accomplishment just to make it into the finals."

Senior Bob Donahue won fourth place honors in the heavyweight division. He was pinned by Walpole and Dedham wrestlers in the semifinals and consolation rounds.

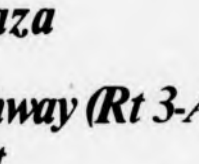
Donahue had truimphed over the Dedham wrestler, in their first bout, earlier in the tourney pairings. However the Dedham heavyweight wrestler pinned Donahue in their second bout and wound up in third place. Donahue pinned a Rockland opponent and secured a four-point victory over a Bridgewater-Raynham wrestler to qualify for the semifinals.

Co-captain J.T. Price and David Rourke both had sixth place finishes for Cohasset. Coach Leone said Rourke wrestled exceptionally well in the 169 pound class. Even though Rourke weighs 152 pounds he managed to reach the semifinals after losing his first bout.

Price, who wrestled at 157 pounds and captured sixth place, had an impressive tourney performance said Leone.

About 1,000 people attended the tourney's final round of competition on Saturday night, said Leone. All totalled, officials refereed more than 370 bouts during the two-day tourney.

Leone was pleased with his team's tourney scoring. "It's a nice way to finish up the season," said Leone.



Senior Torrin Sweeney (on top) applies the pressure to Tom Teare of Scituate en route to a win at last week's sectional tournament. Right, Cohasset's Lee Reid, a sophomore, wrestles in the 114-pound class.

DANCE CANCELLED

A dance scheduled for Friday at the High School was cancelled.

AFS TRIP

Twenty members of the AFS Club are going to spend March 4 to 7 in Lebanon, N.H., as guests of the Lebanon Club. They will be attending classes for one day and skiing for the remainder. Members of the Lebanon AFS Club will be coming to Cohasset sometime in May as their part of the exchange.

AFS DANCE PLANNED

The AFS Club will be having a dance before April vacation — a good time with Mr. Doerr's band playing. Date will be announced soon.

CHS BENEFIT CONCERT

"When the Spirit Says Sing," an exhilarating adventure in Black Music as seen through the life, soul, and experience of Don Oliver will be presented in a benefit concert at Cohasset High School March 3, at 7 p.m.

The concert will feature Don's illustration of how American music is rooted in Black music, from the work songs of slaves to spirituals, blues, and gospel through jazz and rhythm and blues.

Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students. Proceeds of this concert will go to benefit the Cohasset Metco Scholarship Fund. For ticket information call Phillip Burrows at 383-6105 (days) or 331-6443 (nights).

NEW DATE FOR BOOSTERS DINNER

The new date for the Winter Sports Banquet will be Wednesday, March 10 at 7 p.m. in the High School cafeteria. All student athletes and their coaches are invited as guests of the Boosters Club. Parents are encouraged to attend for a nominal fee of $4 per person. Due to limited seating other family members cannot be accomodated. Advance reservations can be sent to P.O. Box 511, Cohasset by March 5 or you may pay at the door. Support your team with your presence at the banquet.

BOOSTERS CLUB "THANK YOU"

The Cohasset Boosters Club would like to extend a generous "thank you" to all the students, administration, custodians and wrestling parents and munchkins for their help and superb cooperation in pulling off a most successful South Sectional Wrestling Tournament. Over 200 pancake breakfasts were served with over 17 gallons of orange juice — an accomplishment in which everyone was a contributor. Congratulations to all the Place winners!

RELEASE

Mr. F. Allan MacDonald, the Director of the Alternative School, is appealing to the community-at-large for volunteers.

The Alternate School budget has been cut in half, and the services of students can only be met with YOUR help.

Here is a chance for the community and schools to work together for the benefit of these youngsters enrolled in Mr. MacDonald's program.

If you are willing to share your "expertise" in the following area, please contact Mr. MacDonald at Cohasset High School, 383-6100: psychology, different cultural backgrounds, boxing, drums, singing, music, nutrition, typing, math, accounting, U.S. History, world history, religion, automotive, radar, astronomy, literature, photography, art, science and creative writing.

CHS to host state drama festival

By Ron Emmons

Cohasset High School will host the regional competition of the annual Massachusetts High School Drama Festival, Sat. Feb. 27.

Seven one-act plays, or scenes from longer works, will be presented by area high schools between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Admission will be $2.00 for the entire day. Because no one will be admitted during a performance, the time schedule printed below should be noted.

From this regional festival, three schools will move on to the semi-finals on March 14.

Two schools from each of the six semi-finals will then compete for the state title in Boston on March 26 and 27.

The Cohasset Drama Workshop's production will be a cutting of Wendy Wasserstein's Uncommon Women and Others, adapted and directed by Ron Emmons. The play is a collage of interrelated scenes, beginning with a reunion, six years after graduation, of five close friends and Mount Holyoke classmates, played by Missy Barcomb, Susan Douglas, Kirsten Moore, Michelle Shea, and Amy Urmson.

In a series of flashbacks, we see them, along with two fellow students (Maureen Buckley and Nancy Walls) and their housemother (Samantha Barrett), in their college days, and learn of the events, some funny, some touching, some bitingly cynical, which helped to shape them into the distinct and different individuals.

Tom Stanford, as the voice of the college catalogue, provides the background against which the girls' college life is presented.

Stage manager for the production is Tina Birmann.

When originally presented on Broadway, Uncommon Women and Others was acclaimed by critics:

"funny, ironic, and affectionate comedy"

— The New Yorker

"The real triumph of Uncommon Women is that you leave the theatre caring deeply about its characters."

— The New York Post

The Cohasset Drama Workshop's record reflects the quality of the group's productions. Since they first entered competition four years ago, they have never failed to qualify for the state semi-finals, and have twice proceeded to the state finals.

In 1979 they won the state finals and went on to represent Massachusetts in the New England Drama Festival, a showcase for the best in high school theatre throughout the six-state area.

Competing in the Cohasset regional will be the following schools:

10:10-10:50, (Norwell) the Devil and Daniel Webster,

11:00-11:40, (Hanover) Vanities, scene one

11:50-12:30, (Hingham) The Taming of the Shrew, lunch break

1:15-1:55, (Scituate) Adaptation,

2:05-2:45, (Cohasset) Uncommon Women and Others,

2:55-3:35, (Weymouth North) Childhood, and

3:45-4:25, (Nortre Dame) The Bald Soprano.

Awards will be presented at approximately 5:30 p.m.

No one will be admitted during the performance of any play. John Lehman, drama editor of The Patriot Ledger, and Marie Clark and Martha Jones, professional actresses, will serve as the judges for the regional festival.

Black music benefit concert at CHS

"When the Spirit Says Sing," an exhilarating adventure in Black Music as seen through the life, soul, and experience of Don Oliver will be presented in a benefit concert at Cohasset High School March 3, at 7 p.m.

The concert will feature Don's illustration of how American music is rooted in Black music, from the work songs of slaves to spirituals, blues, and gospel, through jazz and rhythm and blues.

Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Proceeds of this concert will go to benefit the Cohasset Metco Scholarship Fund. For ticket information call Phillip Burrows at 383-6105 (days) or 331-6443 (nights).

Karen Golden

From Cohasset to the glamour of N.Y. fashion

By Patricia Desmond

Karen Golden has gone from the quiet life of Cohasset to the glamour of New York's fashion industry.

"She's just climbing the ladder there," said her mother Doris Golden. "She really enjoys it."

Karen is a fashion designer and merchandizer for Perry Ellis. As you read this she'll be in Hong Kong "looking for samples of material, the best buy, putting colors together, handling all the inner makings of the clothes," as her mother explained.

She isn't designing as much as she used to these days. Instead she's in charge of men's merchandizing for Perry Ellis.

"She really enjoys meeting people," her mother said. "It's a marvelous opportunity for a smalltown gal."

Just this month, Karen, was featured in "More" magazine which is Japan's answer to "Vogue" and about three times as thick and glossy.

She did the modeling job after first refusing the work.

"It's not her forte," Doris explained.

"But they had wanted to open up Perry Ellis fashions in Japan. They (people from the magazine) asked if he would send a model. The model didn't meet what they wanted."

Karen was approached at her New York office by a representative of the magazine. She hesitated but

For new fiscal year

School board seeks $3.7 million

By Donna Cogliano

The school committee voted last Wednesday to submit $3,766,350 as their fiscal year 1983 proposed budget to be printed in the annual town meeting warrant.

The vote was 4-1 to send the tentative budget to the town accountant's office with member Martha Gjesteby opposed.

As the meeting wound down, a heated discussion evolved when Gjesteby recommended cuts through elimination of an "extra" administrator in the central office in order to meet the advisory committee guidelines.

"Ten years ago we did not have a business manager. We had a bookkeeper. Now, with a smaller system, we have a business manager and two bookkeepers," she said.

In these days, School Supt. Eugene Crowell said many schools, hospitals, and institutions have found the need to employ business managers in order to run most efficiently. John Raftery, business manager for Cohasset Schools, has saved the school system more than his salary in securing special grants.

Crowell said, "I would never support eliminating a business manager."

Gjesteby defended her proposal, "It's a matter of economics."

School Committee member Richard Conley said to Gjesteby, "Your role is to support quality in education, not to meet advisory guidelines. If we don't meet their guidelines, I don't care."

Crowell defended other administrative positions. He said the vice principal at the high school was invaluable in regard to the disciplinary factor and that elimination of an elementary school principal could not be considered unless a school is closed.

The $3,776,350 proposed FY83 budget is $64,109 above the advisory committee's guidelines and $37,500 below the school superintendent's request. The proposed budget represents a $141,875 increase above this year's budget.

The committee started with a proposed budget figure of $3,813,850 and reduced it by $37,500 within the passing of an hour.

Staff salary cuts amounted to about $31,500 in savings due to resignations of teachers who will probably be replaced by those with less seniority, on a lower pay scale.

Legal counsel and contracted services were reduced by $2,000 each. And $8,000 was cut for maintenance work which was originally appropriated for correcting drainage at the High School. The committee was informed at the meeting that the drainage situation could be corrected at considerably less expense than anticipated.

There was an unanimous vote by the school committee to reinstate Jeffrey Dodge as a full-time

Cable T.V. poll

The Cable TV Advisory Committee is in the process of polling the town to see whether people want cable in Cohasset and what they are concerned about it the service is offered here.

A questionnaire — for the committee — appears on page 9 of the Mariner this week. Townspeople are asked to get it back to the committee through town hall.

Committee members also plan to go door to door with questions on cable to get a broad sample of the feelings of townspeople.

Citizens group aids crime prevention

There is a citizens advisory group working with the police department now on the crime prevention program.

The three residents will be working with Police Chief John DeBassio and Crime Prevention Officer Richard Fairbairn to pave the way for a police program that will involve the community.

The committee includes Martin Corry of Pleasant Street, Bruce Edmonds of Pond Street and Ray Remick of Rice Island.

The civilians will oversee all the fund raising for the program, as well as approve police department purchases for crime prevention related projects.

"We would look to the advisory committee as to the appropriate ways to fund the programs," the chief said.

"A bank account will be set up for donated funds.

"The police department will not be soliciting funds or handling the money."

The three men will also serve to coordinate the community's involvement with the program.

Officer Fairbairn completed an 80-hour course on crime prevention in January. He has begun work on some home security surveys since then.

Last spring the police department began getting involved in a crime prevention program. People signed up for surveys and some signed out for the police department engraver as part of the Operation Identification program.

Ice hockey Skippers advance in tournament

The Cohasset ice hockey team walloped Seekonk, 8-0, last week and advanced to the quarterfinals of the Eastern Mass. Division II hockey tourney.

The blue line of seniors Sean Curran, Jack McNeill and junior Danny Bowen combined for six of the eight Skipper goals. Curran fared better than a hat-trick and scored four goals plus an assist in Cohasset's tourney debut.

Steve Bowen tended goal for Cohasset and stopped 24 shots to shutout Seekonk, the Southeastern Conference champs.

After a scoreless first period, Cohasset exploded five goals in the second period. Coach Tom Burnell said he was not disappointed in first period play because his team has skated well. "I told the team to keep the pressure on, as they had in the first period and the goals would start to go in," said Burnell.

During the first period action the Skippers outshot Seekonk 12-9. It was a game in which everyone played well said Burnell. Curran, who had four goals was in the right place at the right time, said Burnell.

Don O'Neill scored the game's first goal at 2:39 of the second period. Richie Evans passed to O'Neill, who faked a shot and then flipped the puck over Seekonk goalie, Rick Dietz.

Curran lead the scoring in the second period with two goals and an assist. Dom Campedilli and Evans contributed a goal and an assist each.

Cohasset got right down to business in the third period as McNeill scored at the 40 second mark. Campedelli assisted on the goal.

Curran scored for the third time on a power-play goal at 3:29 with passes from Danny Bowen and McNeill. And before a minute had passed, Curran scored his fourth goal with Campedelli and Bowen earning assists, once again.

Cohasset meets Franklin in the quarterfinals at Salem State on Thursday, 5:30 p.m. Burnell said his team will be out to pressure the Franklin defense. The Skippers overall record is 18-1-2.

Cohasset's week ...

McKinnon office hours

State Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) announced this week that a member of his staff will be available to Cohasset constituents at Town Hall, Wednesday, March 24, at 7:30 p.m.

If these hours are inconvenient, please call his office at 722-1646 and a staff member will be glad to arrange another time for an appointment.

Margie's license renewed

The common victualer's license for Margie's Seafood was renewed for 1982 by the board of selectmen last week.

Mussels permit issued

Gerald Pattyson of Parker Avenue was granted a permit to take mussels from Little Harbor for a $5 fee.

The decision was made last week by selectmen at their regular meeting.

The permit is only good until March 31. The mussels can't be taken from the harbor later in the year since that's the time they propagate.

Stately oaks, okay hardwoods, lead the way to the Beechwood Congregational Church.

Dog ordered restrained

The new dog officer, Joanne Cogill, recommended last week that a dog owned by Beryl Sullivan of Government Island be ordered restrained.

The selectmen followed her recommendation.

The dog had accompanied the son of the owner to Smith Place in mid-February. He went after two different cats in the neighborhood and the boy was not able to restrain him.

In an unrelated matter, the selectmen authorized payment of $32.75 to have the telephone company put a phone at the dog officer's home that will work with the answering device obtained for the last dog officer.

Meeting within a meeting

There will be a special town meeting within the annual town meeting, according to Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary.

He said it will be possible to use the same warrant for both meetings.

Holding a special on the April 3 date of the annual town meeting would mean that money appropriated for those articles could be spent right away. Money appropriated by the annual town meeting cannot be used before July 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

Clark said there are seven articles pending for the special town meeting, including the dump articles which were not acted on at the special called for December and adjourned to February.

Meanwhile the school committee is working to have the regular budget article postponed in the hope more money might be available for the school budget. If the revaluation comes in as high as some officials expect, the school system could meet Proposition 2½ guidelines while increasing its budget by about $150,000 over last year.

Town spraying conflict

The selectmen have held off on issuing the contract to spray the town for gypsy moths over a question on insurance.

Apparently there's a conflict on the amount of insurance the low bidder would be carrying.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, said the man will not take out additional insurance to reach the level recommended by town counsel. The selectmen are going to check to see if the level is necessary.

Studds is co-op speaker

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is pleased to announce that U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds will be the guest speaker at a monthly Brunch sponsored by Co-op 5, an association of Democratic Town Committees on the South Shore consisting of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield and Scituate. Congressman Studds, who is Chairman of the House Subcommittee on the Coast Guard and a member of the House Foreign Relations Committee has been one of the most active and hardworking members of Congress. He was commended during his freshman term as one of the outstanding members of his class and has since been recognized as one of the most diligent and articulate Representatives in Washington. He will speak to the Co-op members on issues of local, state and national importance now before the Congress.

Reservations may be obtained at $5 per person from the Town Committee Chairmen. In Cohasset, Donna McGee at 383-9114; in Hingham, Greg O'Meara at 749-2933; in Hull, Anne Scully at 925-0888; in Marshfield, Rep. Philip Johnston at 722-2140; and in Scituate, Joan Hefner at 545-1593.

Reservations are a must.

Conway opens campaign office

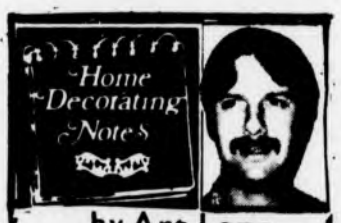
Jack Conway of Cohasset, candidate for the 10th Congressional Seat, has opened the first of a trio of planned campaign offices with South Shore Headquarters at 80 Front St., Columbia Building, Scituate Harbor.

Conway and his staff set up the campaign office this week for operational headquarters for staff and volunteers in his "Call Conway to Congress" campaign to unseat the incumbent congressman.

The telephone number for the new office is 545-6080.

The second planned office opening will be the Cape Cod Headquarters which will open in the near future in the newly-built "Conway Country" building on Route 134 in South Dennis.

Prospective sites for a third headquarters, for the New Bedford area, are now being scouted, Conway said.



Local lottery receipts

Cohasset received $50,632 from the state lottery commission in 1981. In the 10 years of the existence of the so-called Game, the town has been given $315,205.

St. Patrick's dance

St. Anthony's Sociables will hold their Seventh Annual St. Patrick's Dinner Dance at St. Frances Cabrini Hall in North Scituate on Saturday, March 13.

A social hour with cash bar at 7 p.m. will be followed at 8 p.m. by a traditional Irish dinner featuring Connemara corned beef and County Cork cabbage.

Like some magicians, decorating and design professionals sometimes use mirrors. These reflective devices can be used to fool the eye and impart a feeling of spaciousness. Mirrors should reflect something, be it an adjoining room or the out-of-doors. Otherwise, they tend to lose their charm. Even an entire wall may be fittedwith mirrors. This can effect drama in a room when used correctly. A mirror's frame, where used, should reflect the motif of the room in which it is installed. A mirror should also be hung low enough as to be useful to a person of average height. With these tips in mind, a mirror can be a natural brightener for almost any room.

Putting a room together can be a very trying job and the end result may not be quite what you expected. This is where BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE can help you. Our staff enjoys the challenge of helping you even with the most difficult decorating problems. Whether you have a modest or large budget we can accomodate you. Call us Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 at 545-3624 or stop in to 763 Country Way in N. Scituate. Mister Card and Visa welcomed.

DECORATING TIP: Try to not hang mirrors or pictures that are wider than the furniture beneath them.

music teacher. The vote to restore Dodge from part-time status to full-time followed the committee's decision to establish music as a one semester requirement for junior high school pupils.

The board voted to rescind a policy set two years ago which made music an elective for junior high students. Starting next year, seventh graders will be required to take one semester of music before they can graduate from the eighth grade.

For this past school year students were required to take a semester each of the three other "living art" subjects in art, home economics and industrial arts. Music has been reinstated as a "living arts" requirement.

Crowell recommended the requirement change but cautioned school committee members that scheduling for music courses might result in small sized classes.

While board members condoned small music classes that might develop, Vice Chairman John Langmaid III frowned on the need to keep four first grade teachers with the declining enrollment.

"I don't want to have to get up on the town meeting floor and try to justify class sizes of 18," said Langmaid.

Crowell said that since his arrival to the Cohasset school system, he has been disappointed in watching class sizes grow larger, particularly in the junior high school. With Proposition 2½, we're trying to keep class size below 30, he said. Crowell recommended that first grade classes not exceed 20 so that pupils could receive the much needed individual attention.

Crowell called on elementary school principal John Creamer, and Stephen Hart, assistant to the superintendent, to speak in defense of the average 18-student first grade classes.

Creamer said first graders are unique because halfway through the year they begin to read — that takes place better in a smaller class.

Hart was concerned with recently low test scores in the first grade. Development of listening skills are difficult to teach in a large sized classroom, he said.

The committee also voted to ask selectmen to arrange an adjournment of the annual town meeting from the first Saturday in April until the first Saturday in May to allow time for revaluation figures to be certified. The vote was 4-1 with Gjesteby opposed to the adjournment.

A press release explaining the school committee's stand on fiscal planning was to be released. The vote to issue the release was 4-1 with Gjesteby opposed.

Crime prevention fight...

Patrolman Fairbairn on security measures are those already involved through the Operation Identification project.

The surveys concentrate on suggestions for doors and locks. But advice on using the existing locks is part of the program.

According to Fairbairn 50 percent of the burglaries in this country last year involved entry through an unlocked door or window.

He's in the process of putting together a log of the homes where the engraver has been used, keeping track of the numbers engraved, rather than of the objects in the homes.

"There are some communities where they keep track of what is in the homes. But most people don't really want to have a listing of their valuables on record somewhere outside their home."

He said he tells the people in the program to keep their own list in a safe place, like a safety deposit box.

The town's Boy Scouts have been involved in handling some of the engraving. Fairbairn said he hopes to get a list of the homes already done by the Scouts.

As the program progresses Neighborhood Watch groups are to be formed.

Chief DeBassio said the citizens' group might be involved in setting up meetings for the crime prevention officer and deciding which programs might be appropriate for the town.

He pointed out that Fairbairn is on the road on regular patrols, besides doing the crime prevention work.

"There are only a limited number of hours for the work," he said. "I expect the citizens group will be a great assistance to us."

Under the direction of Marion Anderson, associated professor of music, the college choir is the largest vocal group on campus. The choir gives performances throughout the academic year, including an annual Christmas concert. This season's repertoire is highlighted by an upcoming performance of Bizet's "Carmen" with the Portland Symphony Orchestra in a concert version of the well-known opera.

The event was sponsored for the first time in five years by Springfield College where Erin is a sophomore majoring in Health Fitness. Erin's team placed seventh out of 16 teams competing in the medley relay and for her participation, she received a certificate from the New England Women's Swimming and Diving Association (N.E.W.S.D.A.). Visiting her during the weekend were her mother and dad, sister Kerry and Alise Palimeri.

Recent arrivals are: Charles and Carol Wyman of Ledgewood Drive, William and Joanne Grew of Flintlock Ridge, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Richmond of Aaron River Road, John and Thompson Hughes of Gammons Road and Richard and Chris Burbridge of Beechwood Street.

☐Having often noticed that certain patterns of behavior in man and nature can be paralleled, the large gathering of gulls in Little Harbor Sunday called to mind our recent town meeting. Obviously, there was no lack of quorum but then the discussion may have centered on the town dump in which they have a vested (or is it feathered) interest.

Formerly with a Boston firm, Mr. Roy has been a resident of Cohasset for 15 years. A graduate of Georgetown University Law Center in Washington, D.C., he specialized in divorce and family law, wills and estates, workmen's compensation, taxation and civil litigation.

In Cohasset, he is a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals, a legal director of the Cohasset Community Center and trustee for the Cohasset Little League and the Cohasset Sailing Club.

☐In the years that he has taught science at Cohasset High School, Stephen Gilmarten has made many friends among his fellow teachers, his students and their parents. Recently, they learned that he will be taking a leave of absence for three years. Although they wish him only the very best, they can't help thinking of what they will miss — his jokes, for instance, which they have learned to appreciate, the tunes he whistles in the hallways, his laughter and his very special ability to understand and to help.

"They picked her up in a van at 6 a.m. There were about six Japanese men and one woman who was the interpretor. They went to Brooklyn Heights and snapped about 100 pictures.

"Then they took her to the Brooklyn Bridge and gave her a bicycle. The words by the picture say something about this being the average American woman going to work.

"Well of course the average American woman doesn't take a bicycle over the Brooklyn Bridge," Doris commented.

The story line with the other photograph is that Karen was selected from 100 young women interviewed. It says she's one of the leading young women in an executive position in New York.

Doris said the translation from Japanese describes the Perry Ellis fashions as happy.

The magazine is now available on news stands in Japan. Karen called home Sunday morning to say somebody recognized her when she picked up a copy.

"She loves her job," Doris said, adding that she and Karen's father, John, are proud of her accomplishments.

Karen is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Parsons School of Design. She's been living in New York City the four or five years since her graduation from Parsons.

She travels extensively in her work. She just returned from Germany where she and other company executives spent time going to textile shows. Later this month she will be going to Italy for the upcoming collection.

"She says she can relate to Perry Ellis' clothes," Doris explained.

Steven D'Onofrio wins ROTC scholarship

Steven D'Onofrio, a graduating senior at Cohasset High School, has won a four-year scholarship to the college of his choice which participates in the Air Force ROTC program.

Steven was told by Captain Cotter, Air Force ROTC Admissions Counselor, that he was among a select group of high school seniors selected by the Air Force ROTC Scholarship Selection Board to receive scholarships next fall when they begin college. "When you register for college, you will have your tuition, books, and lab fees paid and also receive $100 a month tax-free from the Air Force."

The Commandant of AFROTC, Brigadier General Chris O. Divitch of Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, certified Steven has been selected to receive the scholarship, "as a result of meritorious achievement in academic studies and extracurricular activities, high standards of physical fitness, and a demonstrated desire to serve his country in the United States Air Force."

A review of academic and extracurricular achievements of those selected showed that they ranked among the top ten percent (10%) in class standing and attained an average SAT score of 1240 in college entrance examinations.

Steven is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. D'Onofrio, 96 Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset.

Vocational education

Cohasset will get some vocational education money despite news last month that the state would eliminate the funds.

Under the presently proposed plan, the town will get about $3,800. Last year a grant of about $4,000 from the same program was used to buy a small computer.

Pilgrim 1 safety

Pilgrim I tested its alarm system last week.

We think that should be the signal for people outside the test area but not so very far away to take alarm.

The plant opened 10 years ago. The test was the first.

What happens to the people of Cohasset in the event of an accident at Pilgrim? We won't hear the sirens. We won't be given those potassium iodide tablets to protect our thyroids. Someone somewhere considers us outside the area of danger.

For some time, people have been led to believe the Nuclear Regulatory Agency was looking out for our interests. The NRC was there to protect the public from nuclear accident.

The day the NRC announced that Boston Edison was being fined stiffly for two years worth of safety violations was the day more than one person wondered out loud about the adequacy of the protection the NRC gives us all.

Today we want to wonder more loudly about the safety of the residents of this community in time of trouble at Pilgrim I.

Back in the 50's there were real evacuation shelters prepared in the event of a nuclear attack. People still have the remains of the days of the basement bomb shelters here and there in town.

Since then the danger of a nuclear problem has grown just because of proliferation.

So now there is Pilgrim I down Route 3 a way. And the experts have decided that despite the fact that they can't protect us from the acid rain that originates in the factories of Ohio, we'll all be safe as long as we're outside the 10-mile radius of the plant.

People in Duxbury, south Marshfield and parts of Plymouth are being told that "in the unlikely event of a serious accident at the Pilgrim Nuclear Power Generating Station," as the state-funded booklet says, they should travel to Hanover Mall where they will find a reception center.

It doesn't seem adequate. And since the state and federal government haven't come up with better answers and a better plan, it seems local people should begin studying the question of the safety of the plan and what alternatives there are.

Defending the new school budget

Commentary

The Cohasset School Committee would like to take this opportunity to make its Department budget position clear to the voters of Cohasset. In no way does the Committee intend to circumvent the mandate of Proposition 2½, nor does it ask that monies be taken from other town departments for School Department spending.

We fully understand that if we did this we would eliminate other services which are necessary to our Town. Instead, we are asking that consideration be given to adjourn the April Town Meeting until the first Saturday in May in the hope that by that time the revaluation of the town properties will have been duly certified by the Massachusetts Department of Revenue.

By now you all know that if this amount exceeds $230 million dollars of assessed valuation, that the Town may use this figure as its basis for increased calculations under Proposition 2½ instead of the $225 million dollar figure presently being suggested by the Advisory Board. This would allow the Town to raise an additional $132,000 to be used by all departments for various needs. We stress, again, that this complies with Proposition 2½.

If the new figures are not available until after May 1, then the School Committee will live within the lower limits, and as responsible fiscal managers, we will be ready to meet that eventuality. We ask for this consideration because during the last three years we have drastically cut our school budget. For two years in a row we have absorbed our School Department salary increases without going to the Town for supplementary funds. Like all departments, we have faced double digit inflation, and in order to keep within the 2½ mandates reduced our FY '82 requests by $180,000. This amount is approximately ⅓ of the total reduction of the whole Town under Proposition 2½.

This year we have again planned to absorb our own contractual obligations, which amount to $230,000. The Superintendent's budget as submitted to us in December of 1981 was $101,609 more than the $77,766 recommended by the Advisory Committee. As a result of our February 24 meeting, we have been able to cut $37,500 from our budget to reduce the difference to $64,109. We will be receptive to suggestions for future budget reductions that will not further damage the quality of the education to which our children are entitled. We will cooperate with all boards and departments but ask the Town for its consideration if additional dollars are available under Proposition 2½. We believe that those dollars will be available and, therefore, we feel it is our duty to the students of Cohasset to ask for this Town Meeting delay.

Your School Committee has not been the free spender that some people would have you believe. Here in Cohasset our budget requests for this year are less than they were in 1980. The percentage of increase of the various budgets throughout the community over the last seven-year period show the schools by far to have one of the lower increases of any department.

We are continuing to work with our new Superintendent to find better and more economical ways to deliver quality services to our students. The performance of this year's senior class points to our quality. We have just received information that we have four National Merit Scholars; we have eight honorable mention; to date we have thirty-six early admissions to top colleges out of a class of 146. In academics, sports and community activities, our student body continues to excel. Because of this and our past record of fiscal responsibility, we ask that the Town consider making use of the $132,000 which may become available under Propostion 2½ if the revaluation exceeds $230.6 million dollars.

School Committee briefs...

School Committee member Jack Langmaid brought up the question of a cut list for the budget this week.

Just last Wednesday the committee voted on a preliminary budget. Next Monday, March 8, the school committee will be holding its public hearing on the budget which is above the guideline recommended by the advisory board.

"Maybe we will be asked at the public hearing," Langmaid suggested.

Richard Conley, another member, said he thinks the committee should just listen that night.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said he has no formal list of what he would cut if the town insists the school system stay within the guideline.

The school committee's answer to the discrepancy is that is the revaluation is certified at the expected figure, Cohasset would be allowed to raise its tax levy enough to provide for the higher budget.

The committee wants town meeting to hold off voting the budget until revaluation is certified.

School Committee member Martha Gjesteby, the lone vote against the budget, has said she feels declining enrollment is enough to justify some reductions in support staff.

School officials are giving up the idea that an override of Proposition 2½ might help ease the constraints on the school budget.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell told the school committee this week that based on discussion with an expert from the state Cohasset would be ill-advised to try to override Proposition 2½.

"It might help some communities for a year," Crowell said. "But it could work as a disadvantage in the second year."

School committee authorized a group of high school teachers to rewrite the humanities curriculum for Grade 9.

Bill Kite and Joseph Bouchard, part of the team teaching the course which combines English with social studies, told the committee the revision will try to keep the two subjects working on the same levels.

The course begins at the beginning of time and runs to the Renaissance.

The team of six teachers will be paid $1,000 for the work which will be done after school or during free time in the regular day.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the work will cost less done in this fashion. Until now when curriculum work was done, teachers worked summers to accomplish the task.

Good drama

The production of "A Man for All Seasons" over the weekend by the Cohasset Dramatic Society was filled with emotion and all manner of excellence.

Rosanne Ring, directing her first play for the club, pulled all the right strings together.

Costumes, sets, lighting, everything involved in the play was done well.

Ben Duffy as Sir Thomas More brought the right mix of authority and hesitation to the character. The entire cast and production crew deserves our acclaim.

The cast, all superb, included Bob Schultz, Carl Slotnick, Wayne Miessner, Ellen Kelly, Julia Jordan, David Wadsworth, Bob Julian, John Rice, Fred Koed, Stanley Campbell, Scott Ketcham, Sydney Browne, and David Barrett.

Coastal Zone presents film

The Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management invites interested citizens and groups to attend a showing of the film "Portrait of a Coast" on Tuesday, March 9, at 7 p.m. in Trueblood Hall, Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street, Cohasset.

This extraordinary documentary (parts of which were filmed on the South Shore) describes the dramatic and ever changing coastline of Massachusetts. In a visually beautiful and simple fashion, the film explains and demonstrates complex physical and biological processes of the coast, such as erosion, overwash and rising sea level and their interaction with shoreline development and stabilization efforts.

"Portrait of a Coast" was filmed over a four-year period by Jim Gabriel of Cape Cod and is narrated by Robert J. Lurtsema of WGBH Radio. The thirty-minute documentary was a finalist at both the 1981 American Film Festival and the 1981 Audubon International Environmental Film Festival.

For those who would like to gain a better understanding of the coast where they live, work or play, "Portrait of a Coast" is essential viewing, providing new insights into the coast's beauty, power and constancy of evolution.

After the film, Coastal Zone Management Geologist Jeff Benoit and South Shore Coordinator Fran Schofield will be available to answer questions from the audience.

Cultural Assoc. tea

The South Shore Hellenic Cultural Association, affiliate of the Panagia, Pope Memorial Church in Cohasset, would like to extend an invitation to attend its Membership Tea on Sunday, March 14, at the Cohasset Historical Society's Lothrop House, Summer St., at 3 p.m.

Public hearing scheduled for cable

A public hearing on the question of cable television is set for Tuesday, March 30, at town hall.

The town's Cable TV Advisory Committee hopes to have an official of the state cable regulatory agency plus representatives of companies interested in the franchise on hand to provide answers about cable and the franchise process.

The town has not yet made a determination to move on a cable license. That decision as well as the actual award of a license are up to selectmen.

Ann Bailey, director of development for American Cablesystems, the company that holds the licenses in Quincy and Milton, sat through the study committee's meeting last Wednesday at town hall. While there were no other cable companies represented, people in cable businesses expect the same companies would end up applying here that have been pushing for franchises in nearby communities of Scituate, Norwell and Hingham.

American is an applicant in Scituate.

Several members of the study committee say they have been hearing negative comments on the installation of cable in town.

With a time table moving toward providing the 52 plus channels cable can offer to the community, it will be 1984 when a system goes on a line.

Part-time worker hired for parking tickets

A parttime worker will be hired for the selectmen's office to help process parking tickets.

Processing the tickets has been tying up the office, according to both Arthur Clark and Peg Ramsay.

In handling the tickets, Clark, who is the temporary parking clerk, must accept fines and hold hearings on disputed cases.

The treasurer's office has refused to accept the collections.

Clark said he is being deluged with calls and letters asking for more information about the complaints that go back two years.

He pointed out that the fine for one ticket a day would pay the salary of a parttime worker for about three hours a day. That day — last Wednesday — $278 came in the mail.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she thought the worker could be cut back from five to three days after the backlog of tickets is handled.

The town pays a data processing agency to work with the collection but money is sent to town hall.

About the Mariner Survey

Our poll was unscientific from start to finish.

But the results reflect the interest of more than 150 Mariner readers who took the time and energy to fill in the form and get it back to us for tabulation.

We got quite a few exclamations in the margins of the survey on issues that engendered strong opinions. We were told "I don't care" should have been "I don't know" or the like.

Only a few people in town who replied to the questionaire came out in favor of casino gambling in nearby Hull. We got more comment on that question than any other.

Some people only answered one question.

Someone said the issue should be rewritten asking who might favor organized crime, traffic problems and vermin.

The Mariner Survey results

1. Should the town keep the present school bus system? 112 yes 41 no 8 I don't care.

2. Should the town hire a commissioner of public safety? 96 yes 109 no 10 I don't care.

3. Should the town upgrade to meet state regulations for the present landfill operation? 76 yes 59 no 21 I don't care.

4. Should the high school auditorium be renovated? 54 yes 89 no 6 I don't care.

5. Should prams at the town dock be charged $25 a year to tie up? 126 yes 32 no 8 I don't care.

6. Should private floats pay a town harbor user fee? 145 yes 12 no 2 I don't care.

7. Should the North Cohasset fire station be sold to the highest bidder? 86 yes 71 no 4 I don't care.

8. Should the town push for an access to Wompatuck State Park opposite Winter Gardens? 81 yes 74 no 6 I don't care.

9. Should the fire and police departments be combined? 38 yes 95 no 5 I don't care.

10. Should names of those accused of criminal wrongdoing be published in the Mariner? 79 yes 76 no 11 I don't care.

11. Is the town's bus service adequate? 86 yes 71 no 5 I don't care.

12. Should commercial haulers and businesses pay a fee for all trash brought to the dump? 96 yes 25 no 6 I don't care.

13. Would you purchase cable television if it came to town? 71 yes 86 no 15 undecided.

Amy Whorf exhibit at Art Center

The public is invited to attend the opening reception of the Amy Whorf - Tom Chesley Exhibit on Friday, March 5 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

These two artists represent two contrasting artistic viewpoints: Amy Whorf is a photographer who finds geometric shapes in the environment and Tom Chesley paints large, muted paintings with subtle tones, primarily of the sea.

Amy Whorf will present a portfolio of Scotland entitled "My Heart's in the Highlands." She works predominately in black and white using a 35MM camera. Amy is interested in "lines, shapes, and interrelating masses in the environment."

She finds that "chance occurence" in nature fascinating. She transforms realistic subject matter into geometric shapes.

Her photographs are marked by sharp contrast and a crisp tone, sensitively done. Amy has had two one-person shows, one at the Hingham Public Library, and has been in several group shows. She has won several awards, including an honor award from the Boston Globe and first prize in 1980 at the Hull Harbor Festival.

Tom Chesley has been painting the sea for the last four years; recently he has focused on the horizon of the sea. Tom was educated at the Hartford Art School and at the Museum School, Boston. He has had several one-person shows, including one at Boston City Hall, and has been in many exhibitions. In 1979, Tom was awarded a grant called the John Anson Kittredge Educational Fund in North Andover, Mass. The DeCordova Museum in Lincoln, Mass. has three of his paintings in their permanent collection.

The Amy Whorf - Tom Chesley Exhibit will continue at the South Shore Art Center through March 27. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 12-4 and Saturday, 10-1. For further information, call the Art Center at 383-9548.

School committee briefs ooc

Stephen Gilmartin, a junior high school science teacher was granted a three-year military leave of absence by the School Committee last Wednesday. The school board unanimously approved the leave, effective March 3, with deep regret.

School Business manager John Raftery was appointed to the Governor's Council on the distribution of Federal block grants. Raftery was sworn in last week for a four-year term.

Window repairs will soon be made at the Deer Hill School. Last Wednesday the school committee authorized the Knight, Bagge, and Anderson architectural firm of Boston to open bids for repairs of deteriorating window joints at the school.

There is good news regarding the drainage problem near the Sullivan gymnasium at the High School.

According to Francis Bagge of the Knight, Bagge, and Anderson architectural firm of Boston, drainage repairs could be solved by in-house maintenance workers. Instead of the originally projected cost of $10,000, Bagge said the problem might be corrected with expenditures of $2,000 or $4,000.

In the past, the Sullivan gymnasium floor has been damaged due to heavy rainfall. Relief is on the way for what school committee chairman Irene Brown described as a problem concerning lakes of water, not puddles.

A program on "Mainstreaming — Teaching Children about Handicaps" is underway at the Joseph Osgood School.

Programs on blindness have already been held. Physical handicaps, deafness and mental retardation are coming up as topics to be presented by people from the community.

Gypsy moth coming

The good news is Cohasset is not on the list of towns the state thinks will be impacted the most by the coming spring plague of the gypsy moths.

The bad news is that we're listed on the places where moderate damage is expected — and moderate does not mean light.

The compilation is the best guess of the state Bureau of Insect and Pest Control.

New health center to open in harbor area

A new health center will be opening by the harbor in May. The center, titled "Life Preserver" will offer a Holistic approach to health care.

Mark Mincolla will direct the health center which will be located behind the Reflections Hair Salon on Elm Street. In coordination with the salon, facial massages and skin care will be available from a trained and licensed esthetician.

The health center will offer several programs on nutritional counseling, hair analysis, and meditation techniques. In addition to skin care with all natural products, vitamins will be sold at the Life Preserver.

Mincolla said, these vitamins are out of Concord, California, and can't be bought on the market anywhere - they are only sold to doctors.

"They are the Rolls Royce of vitamins and I'm carrying them only because I believe in them," he said.

Mincolla has a Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology from Franklin Pierce College in New Hampshire and a Master of Arts in Holistic health and nutrition from Goddard.

He has practiced holistic health for himself over the past 12 years. Nutritional health has become more popular in society recently along with athletic exercise, said Mincolla.

Mincolla has already spoken with many of the medical doctors in town. "We in no way intend to be diagnostic or prescriptive. We don't want to compete with the medical professions," said Mincolla.

Intentions of the health center will be to act as counselor, consumer advocate and to provide guidance for individual health needs at the community level. "We hope to fill the void where people are interested in caring for themselves better," said Mincolla.

For further information about the health center, contact the people at Reflections Hair Salon. Evening seminars will be offered prior to the May opening of the Life Preserver.

Basketball night

On Friday, March 5, there will be a fun night of basketball beginning at 6:30 in the Sullivan Gym at the high school. There will be special events which the young athletes from the Recreational Basketball League will participate in prior to a Varsity-Faculty Basketball game.

There will be: layup contests for both the 4th & 5th grade boys and girls leagues; All-Star game for 6th & 7th grade boys, All-Star game for 6th, 7th & 8th grade girls and All-Star game for 8th & 9th grade boys.

During half-time of the Varsity vs. Faculty game, the Jr. Varsity Boys and Girls teams will compete against each other in a shooting contest.

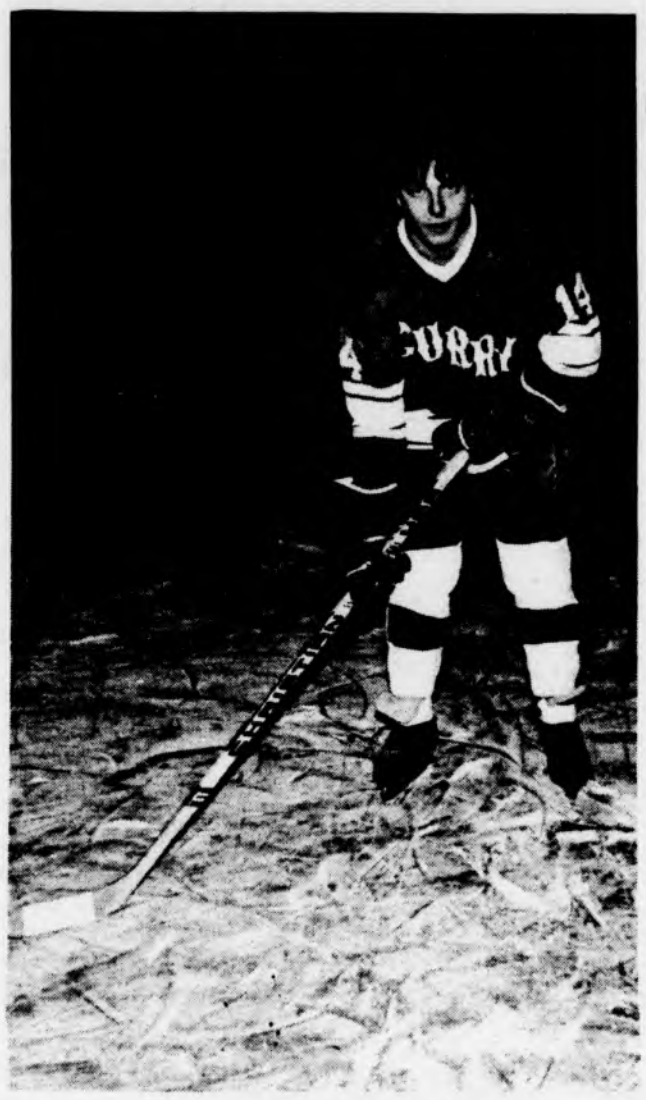
McCullough skates well for Curry hockey

Cohasset's Joe McCullough recently completed his sophomore year on the varsity ice hockey team at Curry College in Milton.

McCullough returned to Curry late, but just in time for the second semester, due to a broken leg he sustained in a recreational football game this summer. After three operations on his leg, McCullough made a remarkable recovery and skated consistently strong for Curry throughout the '81-82 season.

He started out as a center forward but was switched onto defense for the remainder of the season. McCullough, who notched nine goals and eight assists for a total of 17 points, said he was comfortable with change of position.



The 20-year-old defenseman said the most noticeable difference between college and high school hockey is the faster skating and harder hitting at the college level.

Curry finished the season with a record of 13-6-1 with wins over M.I.T., Roger Williams and Western New England College.

McCullough is a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School where he was a standout on the football and hockey teams. This past fall, he was an assistant football coach at CHS. He is a business major at Curry and is involved with student government.

Even with a hectic college schedule, McCullough will take timeout to attend the Skipper's quarter final tourney game at Salem State on Thursday.

McCullough is happy with the high school team's success. "They have the talent and a good coach," he said.

SANDY LANE

IS NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

IT IS FAMILY-STYLED

SANDY LANE is a restaurant which serves a well-rounded family style menu. It is located on the shore line of the Atlantic Ocean in Marshfield, Massachusetts. It has an absolutely breathtaking view from each of its oceanview windows. It was formerly known as the Rexicana Dance Hall and also Noah's Oceanside. After being purchased in late December 1981, the present owners, Betty & Vin Turner, closed the premises down and completed extensive renovations, opening the restaurant on Lincoln's Birthday February 12, 1982. As of this writing the Chef, Staff and Management have received nothing but the highest of praise for their outstanding (if not spectacular) food service.

Seahawks hockey: Squirt C's win Cohasset invitational

Coach Frank McGovern's Squirt C's highlighted the Seahawks February Tournament play as they captured the Cohasset Invitational Hockey Tournament with a hard-fought 4-3 triumph over Quincy. Defenseman Terence Shea was the "Man-of-the-Hour" in the Title Affair for the C's as he notched two tallies including the game-winner, David Orpen and Sean Noonan had scored earlier for the Seahawks while Damon Sparrow, Tony Muzzi and Eric FitzPatrick chipped in assists. In preliminary round action in the C's had downed W. Roxbury 4-1, blasted Canton 8-1, and nipped Quincy, 2-1 to gain the championship berth. Orpen (2), Shea and Noonan dented the nets against W. Roxbury while Sparrow picked up an assist. "Puck-poppers" in the Canton contest were Stephen Boardman (2), Noonan (2), Shea, Sparrow, FitzPatrick and Brian Pompeo and credited with assists were Boardman (2), Sparrow (2), Orpen (2), Pompeo, FitzPatrick and Colby Mahoney. In the Quincy encounter, Pompeo and Shea busted targets whil Noonan and Mark Resnick added assists.

The Pee Wee C's did not fare as well in tournament play, however, as they were defeated by Weymouth 4-2, W. Roxbury 8-5 and Canton, 5-0.

In the Kiwani's Tournament held at the Quincy Youth Arena Seahawk entries were unable to make it past the quarterfinals.

The Bantam A's clobbered Hyannis 10-2 and outlasted Brookline 8-5 in opening round action before falling prey to a powerful Newton club 4-0. Charlie Lersch and Bobby Weisslinger, both had a "Hat Trick" and two assists to pace the A's win over Hyannis while Chris Tatum, Joe Finn, Jamie Kelly, and Kris Hublitz added single tallies. Matt Glennon served as "Chief Playmaker" with three assists and Bobby Salvador (2), Steve Remedis, Kelly and Tatum also were credited with set-ups. Weisslinger also led the Seahawks' attack against Brookline as he tallied twice and set up three other scores. Additional Seahawks who lit the scoring lamp were Kelly (2), Jamie Chisholm, Glennon, Phil Thomas and Salvador. Contributing assists were Steve Remedis (2), Finn (2), Lersch, Tatum and Mike DiLorenzo.

The Pee Wee A's also advanced to the quarterfinals where they were whitewashed by Troy, N.Y. 6-0. In the opening round the A's nipped Dedham 3-2. Ned Flaherty, Seth Webb and Jeff Hartwell hit the bullseye while Mickey McCarthy had the lone assist. The Seahawks edged Midfairfield, Conn. 5-3 in the second round. Leading the A's Marksmen was Flaherty with a pair of goals while McCarthy, Hartwell and Danny Hoitt gunned in single tallies. Webb and Hoitt chipped in assists to aid the attack.

The Squirt A's were sent to the sidelines early as they suffered consecutive losses to Reading 5-2 and Milton 6-1. In the initial encounter John Zimmer and Jeffrey White accounted for the A's scoring while assists were credited to Chris Olivieri and Billy Hingston. Olivieri notched the lone Seahawk goal in the second contest after being set up by Zimmer.

In the Cranberry Tournament held at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke, Seahawk teams staged a strong showing but were unable to bring home any titles.

The Bantam B's reached the semi-finals before they were eliminated by Woburn 2-1. David Cogliono netted the Seahawk score. In previous action the B's had whipped Reading 6-3 and edged Plymouth 2-1. Russ Goulart (2), Richard Saia (2), Michael Cooney and David Flaherty were the gunslingers in the first affair and Flaherty and Chris Townsend fired the bullets in the second contest.

The Pee Wee B's were sent home after losing a heart-breaking triple overtime game to Weymouth 5-4. John Meschino and James Misakian had a pair of tallies each in the contest while Danny Pompeo (3), Todd FitzPatrick (2) and Dicky Chase provided the playmaking. The B's had bested Plymouth 6-4 earlier to reach the quarterfinals. Meschino (2), Misakian (2), FitzPatrick and Jamie Hoffman knocked in the goals while Brian McGovern, Pompeo, FitzPatrick, Jason Clark and John Goffar added the assists.

The Squirt B's were beaten in the finals by Plymouth 4-3. Dennis Peacock, Michael Dundon and Brian Pompeo scored for the Seahawks while Dundon, Kevin Quinn and Jon Mahoney received assists. Earlier the B's had swamped Pembroke 8-2 and Woonsocket, R.I. 10-3. Scoring goals in the Pembroke contest were Peacock (2), Dundon (2), Michael Moog, Mark Resnick, Pompeo and Mahoney. Assists were dealt out to Mahoney (3), Pat Glennon, Pompeo, Resnick, Christ Ventolieri, Moog and Paul Norton. Jon Mahoney and Paul Norton notched "Hat Tricks" in the R.I. match-up while Dundon added a pair of tallies and Pompeo and Peacock had single markers. Providing the playmaking were Pompeo with four assists, Danny Kessinger, Peacock and Resnick with a pair, and Cole Hughes, Dundon and Moog with singles.

The mites also reached the finals where they were beaten by Holbrook 4-2. Earlier they had beaten Duxbury 5-2 and trounced Johnston, R.I. 11-2. Pat Henderson staged a one-man show in the Duxbury game as he gunned in four goals. Paul Frey had the fifth tally and Henderson, Alfie Rogers and David Lambie notched assists. Gregg Salmaine made it a two-man show in the R.I. affair as both he and Henderson blasted home five goals. Kevin Townsend had the final tally and Frey and Townsend each were credited with a pair of assists.

School committee meeting

The school committee worked over a press release with word by word precision during the meeting Monday night.

The press release which was adopted by a vote of 4-1, with Martha Gjesteby opposed, was to explain the action taken at the committee's meeting last Wednesday (Feb. 24) when a preliminary vote was taken on the school budget.

Gjesteby had other changes in the budget in mind. She sought to have band reinstated at a cost of $1,500 while also seeking reductions in other areas. She attributed the possibility of reductions to declining enrollment.

Treasurers' office lists residents owed unclaimed money

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane this week released the names of Massachusetts residents who are to receive more than $31 million dollars under the State's unclaimed money law. Treasurer Crane noted that more than 100,000 individuals are entitled to claim accounts which range in amounts from $25 to a single largest unclaimed account worth more than $250,000.

Under the State's Unclaimed Money Law, bank accounts, insurance proceeds, uncashed gift certificates, payroll checks, security deposits and other accounts which have been inactive for five years or more are declared abandoned and reported to Treasurer Crane's office. Crane then attempts to locate the owners to return more than 10 million dollars to the rightful owners or legal heirs of these abandoned accounts.

While Treasurer Crane feels that compliance with the law is improving, he pushes for tougher enforcement. "Banks and other institutions are supposed to try to find the owners," said Crane, "but I feel they don't try hard enough. How can anyone fail to locate unclaimed account owners such as 'The Boston Red Sox,' Harvard University, or the United Cerebral Palsy Foundation?" My office will see that these monies are returned to those who can use them best, the rightful owners."

In concluding Treasurer Crane noted another aspect of the Unclaimed Money Law. "Until claimed, all monies are kept in the State's General Fund where they are invested for the benefit of everyone who pays taxes here in Massachusetts."

A sampling of unclaimed accounts include those of Jimmy Carter for President; Bnai Brith, Worcester; Jimmy Fund; James Cagney; Boston City Hospital; Boston Red Sox; Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston, Treasurer Patrick Butler; Harvard University; Wang Laboratories; Paul Tsongas; Boston College; United Cerebral Palsy and Derek Sanderson.

School Board and advisors agree on new budget on with moderate increase

By Patricia Desmond

The advisory committee will back the school department being given $74,940 — should the revaluation be certified as high as officials to expect.

The committee vote attached the string that the money be used for the high school roof repair and auditorium renovation.

But School Supt. Eugene Crowell looks upon the recommendation as resolving the difference between the two boards on the $3.7 million budget.

The school budget, as proposed by Crowell was $101,000 above the advisory committee guideline for arriving at Proposition 2½. The school committee by 4-1 is seeking a budget $64,000 more than the guide and $37,000 less than administration sought.

But under the administration's prior plan, there was no money allocated for the auditorium and roof repair.

At the public hearing Monday on the school budget, Crowell disagreed with two residents who thought the recommendation still left the school system with the need to make reductions in the operating budget.

"As you can see there's $9,369 where we're apart," Crowell said explaining the advisory committee vote of last week.

"Perhaps that will make a little happier evening."

When a former school committee member Patricia Walsh proposed a list of cuts, Crowell replied that the bottom line is all that town meeting will vote on.

"The advisory board is advisory and reacts to the bottom line," Crowell said. "They have said they are willing to give us 55.3 percent of that money we feel is going to be available and they are recommending that they would like to see it used for the high school auditorium and roof or hall renovations.

"There are a couple of problems in that it may not be a school committee priority. We have a serious problem in repointing at Osgood and at the high school."

He went on to say it may turn out that the high school roof only needs patching, and the renovation program was something he wanted to see done in phases. He mentioned three to five years.

"Town meeting has the final say and once that budget is passed, it's the bottom line."

Walsh brought up the point that at this time in the school year only $1.9 million of the more than $3 million budget has been spent.

There is $1.6 million left or 45 percent of the budget. All supplies have been purchased and only a third of the school year remains.

No one explained to Walsh what the money was being held for — or how much money would be left as surplus.

Candidates announce

Three candidates this week announced their intentions of racing for the two school committee seats.

Two out of the three are already on the school committee.

Irene Brown, committee chairman, will be on the ballot in April looking for another three year term.

Martha Gjesteby, committee member, is also running for reelection.

The new man in is Joseph Nedrow.

The election is a vote for two positions on the ballot.

At the school committee budget hearing this week Gjesteby and Brown showed up on opposing sides. Brown backed the overall committee request for $3.6 million. Gjesteby wants changes in the budget like the reinstatement of the high school band — something she'd pay for by cutting administration.

Nedrow attended the budget hearing but has yet to announce where he stands on the issue of spending. He said he expects to respond to questions from the Communications Council soon. See announcements on page 4 .

The Jump was a money maker

By Donna Cogliano

Judging by the smiles, screeches of laughter, and the steady clickity clack of jump ropes against the gymnasium floor by enthusiastic participants, the benefit was more than a financial success.

There were no losers at this athletic event. When the final horn sounded — everyone came out a winner.

Some 270 Cohasset students jumped rope last Wednesday during a three-hour period to raise money for the American Heart Association. The jump rope marathon was held at the high school's Sullivan gymnasium from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

According to Physical Education Director Marilyn Watson, who coordinated the nation-wide fundraiser for Cohasset, we had a far better turnout than anticipated. Students were divided into teams of six. They collected pledges from townspeople for varied amounts of money per minute which would total 180 team minutes.

The Deer Hill School had the best representation with 140 jump ropers, while 88 second and third graders, and 40 junior/senior high school students also participated. The students were given a brief rest every half hour.

The record player paced the tireless jumpers with tunes from such groups as the Cars, Boston and Chicago. The afternoon event resembled a huge recess. Six grader Amanda Sweeney said jump roping is something that she often does at recess each day.

Several different styles of jump roping were demonstrated at the school-wide event last week. There were those who stumbled and got tangled in the rope after every two or three revolutions — but they kept trying. There were many teams with two students jumping in between while several groups tried to perfect three and four in the middle.

The "double dutch" style of jumping was another popular style. Double dutch jumping consists of two end students swinging two ropes in opposite directions.

One boy was spotted jumping the backwards for much of the afternoon, while one girl managed to jump successfully without bending her knees.

Naturally everyone jumped at an individual pace. Some students only jumped very fast at double-time rates for as long as they could hold out, while others chose to jump slow and easy.

A group of boys jumped in relay — two swinging and two or more jumpers in the middle clapping their hands to the beat of the music. Duos of jumpers moved together with each student holding onto one end of the rope while jumping inside.

Perhaps the most professional jump roper, of all 270 participants, was a high school senior, J.T. Price, who quietly jumped his criss-crossing rope with steady short jumps off the floor. A nearby

Water Dept. still looking for federal $

The water department was nosed out of consideration for state funds for the three phase grant designed to replace the leaky mains on Atlantic Avenue and Border Street and survey pipes system-wide by only half a point.

Water Superintendent Ben Curley hasn't given up on the project which will cost about $752,000 over three phases. Half of the money would be paid by the town.

Curley explained the other communities granted funds by the state must now come up with their share to continue.

"With Proposition 2½, it could be some of the communities won't be able to come up with the money," he said.

Cohasset is next on the list and the first phase of the program involves only $10,500 from the state to be matched by the town.

The water department has an article in the annual town warrant for the funds "just in case."

The first stage calls for the system-wide leak detection project.

The second stage would replace the water mains along Atlantic Avenue from the motel to Sandy Beach. It would cost a total of $487,825, half to be paid by the town and half to come from a grant.

Pipes in that section of town are about 100 years old. So far this year there have been seven leaks in water mains in town. Six were on that stretch of terrain.

Curley explained that the ground movement near the ocean puts more stress on those pipes.

The other phase calls for a total expense of $254,175, half to be paid by the town, for replacement of water mains along Border Street.

Beware of canned salmon

The Board of Health wants to warn local residents to be wary of canned salmon.

It has been advised by the Federal Drug Administration that consumers should carefully check the coding on the 7¾ ounce cans of salmon to determine possible contamination of botulism.

All codes of the 7.75 oz. size cans produced at the Ketchikan, Alaska, plant in 1980 and 1981 are under recall. The product under recall can be identified by the letter/numbers "K13" in the second, third, and fourth positions of the top line of the two line code. The "K13" must be preceded and followed by a letter, for example, HK13A/Q708. There are other Alaskas processors of salmon which have coding systems which could have a "K13" in their codes; however, the "K13" will not be in the second-fourth positions. For example K13 () () or K13() in the top line of K13()() or ()K13() in the bottom line.

If a salmon can with the coding illustrated as "()K13()" on the top line, is on your shelf, return it to the place of purchase and notify the Board of Health, 383-1664.

Low turn out for concert

The turn-out for the Metco concert was disappointing, according to School Committee member Jack Langmaid.

"I was disappointed first by the community that they would not attend this fundraiser and secondly there was not enough emphasis placed on attendance by the student body.

"I don't think the music department showed up. The whole thing was very disappointing to me."

On the other hand, School Committee member Diana Kornet praised the program itself.

The program was a capsule of black music history.

Fire chief search

The fire chief search committee updated selectmen last Wednesday on their procedures on screening candidates for fire chief.

A public hearing will be held Thursday, March 18 at town hall for input from citizens regarding the qualifications for the new fire chief. Chairman of the fire chief search committee, John Thompson said, "We want to know the qualities townspeople think are important in a fire chief."

The committee will advertise soon for the opening and expects to receive applications by April. They will screen applicants and interview some in May. Thompson said the committee hopes to recommend three candidates to selectmen in June.

Chairman of Selectmen Henry Ainslie said the board hopes to name a new fire chief in July.

The fire chief search committee has met three times in February. They have prepared a standard application form to be filled out by all applicants.

Update on police detective

Police Chief John DeBassio said last week the appointment of the town's first detective is up to ongoing union negotiations.

He said he would like to have a detective on staff — if he could afford it and if the negotiations allow it.

"I would not want to be told I had to have a detective by the contract," DeBassio said. "I'd want the right to have a detective.

Right now the patrolmen, sergeants and lieutenant are all uniformed officers.

Tsongas staff available

Senator Paul Tsongas is sending staff member Shirley Simons to meet with residents from Scituate, Hingham and Cohasset Monday, March 15 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Weymouth Town Hall.

No appointment is necessary.

No action on request to delay T.M.

Selectmen did not act on a request from the school committee last Wednesday to adjourn town meeting from April 3 until May 1.

School committee chairman Irene Brown favored the May 1 date so that the town would have results of its property re-evaluation from which the tax rate will be based.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said postponement would be detrimental to the town. The town needs to act on the special articles.

She said deficiencies in this year's budget should be paid by money raised from taxation in this fiscal year.

"If the meeting is delayed, the articles might have to be funded out of surplus account which is already low," she said.

Brown and school committee member Diana Kornet were interested in postponement of articles 4 — the town's FY '83 bottom line budget figure. Kornet said the school committee budget would be greatly affected if, "we only knew for certain what the certification was."

The School Committee is planning and spending more than it could under 2½. The committee expects revaluation will change the bottom line.

McArthur said it's too early to decide on a postponement since there is the possibility that more information might arrive three or four days before the town meeting.

Kornet said the school budget will not be able to stay under the advisory committee's suggested level-funded budget amount because of many negotiated contracts from last year. She said, it's a tough figure to swallow especially with the inflation of supplies.

School Board advisors agree...

About 20 people sat through the budget hearing. The vote on the school committee figure is expected next Monday at the meeting which begins at 8 p.m. at the high school.

Lloyd Prescott asked about ratios of teachers and administrators to students.

"I congratulate the school committee on its endeavor in trying to save money in most fields," Prescott said.

He went on to criticize the committee for failing to cut administration.

There are 33.2 teachers at the junior/senior high school, 13 at Deer Hill and 13 at Osgood. Another 10.5 teachers are assigned to special education for a total of 69.7.

There are 1414 students enrolled.

There are nine fulltime administrators funded by the town including: the superintendent, business manager, two high school administrators (principal and vice principal), a principal at Deer Hill and one at Osgood, plus director of special services.

There is also a director of guidance who works as a guidance counselor and a director for the Metco program funded by the state.

There are eight secretaries plus other support staff.

Frank England, another former committee member, said the budget should be broken down into the same categories used last year. The budget from last year was not written as it was spent, because the salary negotiation was completed after town meeting. Money for the raises was hidden in various accounts, according to Crowell, who explained that is the way the town always handles the situation.

Watercolor demonstration at Art Center

Ruth Wynn will demonstrate watercolor techniques on Sunday, March 14 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Wynn will demonstrate how she creates an interesting glaze-like effect in her paintings by spraying over dry areas. This program will be followed by an informal reception where the audience can meet and talk to the speaker.

Wynn has won 12 major awards in the last seven years. She is a member of the American Watercolor Society, Allied Artists in New York, Guild of Boston Artists and the Salmagundi Club, N.Y.

"Beginning and Intermediate Basic Drawing," given by Virginia Moore, will begin on Monday, March 15 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center. This is a foundation for students planning to learn to paint or to develop skills in the use of pastels. This course includes the study of composition, structural form and tonal values, using charcoal and working from still-life. Perspective and light and shade will be studied.

Moore studied at the Mass. College of Art and graduated from the Art Institute, Boston. She has taught both privately and in the Hull Adult Education classes.

The school committee candidates...

Irene Brown

Irene E. Brown, 35 Norfolk Road, present Chairman of the Cohasset School Committee, announces her bid for reelection to her third term.

A 16-year-resident of the town, Mrs. Brown is the mother of three graduates, Donna, Matt and Heidi, and has a fourth child, Mark, attending the high school. She has served as a member of the Recreation Commission and was instrumental in establishing the position of Recreation Director.

In addition, she was Treasurer of the Cohasset Youth Hockey for three years, and has been the Treasurer of the Cohasset Swim and Recreation Trust for the past five years. Other community activities include service as a Girl Scout leader, coach and manager of the North River Girls' Fast Pitch Softball team for three years, original member of the Cohasset Boosters Club, and as a volunteer for the United Fund, Heart Fund and American Cancer Society campaigns in Cohasset.

Because of her volunteer service in the Osgood and High Schools and her membership on the Deer Hill Communication Council, as well as her experience on the school committee, she feels she can continue to be of great service to the schools and the community in the coming years.

Bentley trained, Mrs. Brown's position as office manager in a manufacturing firm keeps her current in business and budget practices. As a school committee member, she has served on three of the five negotiation sub-committees resulting in fair and equitable three year contracts in all cases.

Declining enrollment and limited funds will make difficult decisions inevitable in the very near future. In order to provide the children of Cohasset with the quality education received by their predecessors, it will take a positive attitude with full cooperation between administration and school committee to attain that goal. Mrs. Brown's common sense approach to all situations, as well as her dedication to the town of Cohasset, are two attributes that she feels should serve her well.

Next year, Irene and her husband Jim will have three children in college, and as homeowners, know full well the cost of living pressures.

"Like all other Cohasset taxpayers, we have to stretch our dollars as far as they will go. The same stretching will have to be applied to the School Department, and I am willing to continue to work towards that end."

Mrs. Brown feels that America's future energy is the mind power of our children and therefore will strive for equal learning opportunities for all students.

Martha Gjesteby

Martha Gjesteby announced this week she is a candidate for re-election to a three year term on the Cohasset School Committee.

In addition to the school board, Mrs. Gjesteby is presently serving the town on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. Formerly she was a member and secretary of the Cohasset Planning Board, a member of the Cohasset Capital Budget Committee, member of the Cohasset Community Center's Board of Directors as well as Membership Chairman.

School related activities included: Chairman of the Cohasset School Communication Council Steering Committee, Co-chairman Senior High Communication Council, Co-chairman Junior High Communication Council, and member of the Cohasset Boosters Club. She was elected Secretary of the School Committee and was appointed by the school committee as Delegate to the Massachusetts Association of School Committees Convention for two years, to the Physical Education, Health and Athletic Sub-Committee k-12, Job Descriptions Sub-Committee, Negotiations Subcommittees for Secretarial and Cafeteria Contracts, and Sick Bank Sub-committee. She helped with the initial implementation of the High School Math Lab as a volunteer.

Mrs. Gjesteby feels a school committee member should primarily be interested in continuing to improve the curriculum for both college bound youngsters and those going directly into the work force, while being ever mindful of fiscal responsibility.

Martha and her husband Arne, have resided on Old Pasture Road for over 21 years. They are the parents of three sons: Erik, Rolf, and Nils, and a daughter, Ingrid, all educated in the Cohasset Public Schools. She is a graduate of Simmons College with a B.S. in Chemistry, and did graduate work at Harvard University and Harvard Medical School.

Joseph Nedrow

Dr. Joseph R. Nedrow of 21 Fairoaks Lane this week announced his candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee.

A businessman with three children in Cohasset schools, Nedrow feels he will bring a different perspective, background, and a set of experiences to the school committee than is presently represented.

His educational credentials include a bachelors degree, two masters, (one from Harvard University) and a doctorate in administration and management from Wayne State University.

During 1975-76, Dr. Nedrow served the White House as a Presidential Exchange Executive assigned to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Long active in educational affairs, Nedrow has served in a variety of elective and appointed positions at the local, state and national level. These include school committee participation in The Rochester, Michigan Community Schools, Chairman of the Advisory Committee to the Oakland County Community College and Past-President of the Michigan Chapter of the American Society for Training and Development. Conway lauds plan to 'save' Peddocks Island

Jack Conway says the environmentally-based Peddock's Island Trust's proposal to save a 185-acre Boston Harbor island site from commercial development is a "fascinating idea that could not only serve the South Shore and Boston communities but could be a $100,000 tax winner for the Commonwealth."

"For years commercially-oriented groups have had their eyes on Peddock's Island," he said during a recent mid-winter inspection tour to the site, located off Pemberton in Hull.

Conway is hopeful that the MDC will approve a request by the Trust for a "management designation so that this plan can be implemented."

The proposal, which is "a necessity, not a luxury, will allow us to polish this golden jewel that now lies tarnished and unused in Boston Harbor," said Conway, who is also President of the Plymouth County Development Council.

Conway said the plan calls for $11.1 million in total development funds over the next decade; $2.6 million of which will be sought in grants and contributions; $2.1 million in sales and leases and $6.6 million in financing.

As an advisor to the non-profit Peddock's group, Conway will speak in favor of their proposal at the MDC public hearing set for 9:30 a.m. March 25 at 20 Somerset St., Boston.

In a letter to MDC Associate Commissioner Dyanne C. Tosi, he said he sees the group's proposal as "striking an excellent balance between the crucial need to generate business activity, taxes and jobs, while, simultaneously, preserving the fragile environment."

Impressed with the "comprehensiveness of the idea," Conway noted its impact will fall into three basic categories; education, recreation and overnight accommodations.

"The educational programs will range from formal university training to individual, family and group programs, varying in length from a few hours to a week, semester, or a summer."

"Then, too, the island would make an ideal base for M.I.T. Sea Grant and 20 other colleges which have formed the Massachusetts Bay Marine Studies Consortium for the teaching of interdisciplinary marine courses. Plus, Tufts University has expressed a firm interest in an aquaculture demonstration program that could be used on Peddock's as a testing station for harbor shellfish studies," Conway observed.

"Class and conference facilities that, under the plan submitted by Peddock's Island Trust Executive Director Michael Westgate, would be set up for educational purposes, would also be rented to such groups as the Greater Boston Convention and Tourist Bureau, which has expressed an interest," Conway said.

The plan also calls for a resident "colony of 10-20 people under the direction of the New Alchemy Institute and the Star Foundation. The colony will concentrate on waste recycling, energy production and fishing and farming hydroponics projects that will often be open to the public," Conway noted.

The island's old military village (Fort Andrews) is to be rehabilitated and Conway said, "we are looking to bring in some 10,000 visitors in 1983 and as many as 200,000 yearly by 1993."

Special events such as summer concerts in cooperation with Boston Harbor Cruises and puppet shows, coordinated through the Children's Museum are all part of the recreation package Conway reported. "Moreover, we're hoping to set up island shops that will feature books about the flora, fauna, geology, archeology, biology and history of the island, the Harbor and marine artifacts."

Not only can Conway see "the tremendous recreational value of this plan" but he also visualizes a "marina of over 100 slips, catering to the yachts' owners and day-trippers, at Peddock's Island."

He also stressed the "soundness of that part of the plan that calls for accommodations ranging from camping to family bungalows to a comfortable island inn."

"Having overnight facilities for families, individuals, youth and older groups, will let us take care of everyone ranging from the student who only needs a hostel-type space, while studying, to the family that requires inn-quality facilities," Conway said.

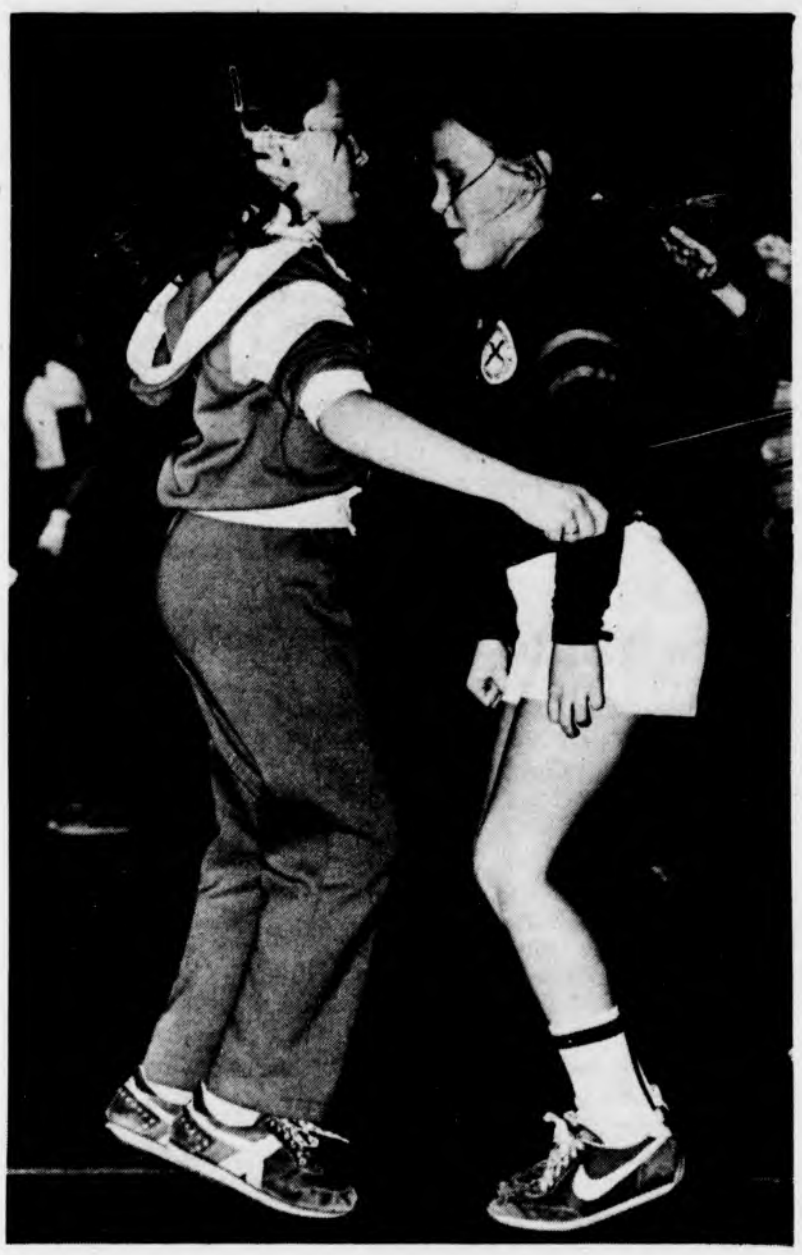
around town

☐It seems that quite a few residents of Cohasset crossed paths in the Alpine regions of Austria and Switzerland during the February vacation. According to Tom Lucas who led a group of skiers from the South Shore area to Innsbrook and Lech, the skiing and weather was fabulous. At least 18 Cohasseters were seen on the slopes or sunning themselves: the O'Connells of Sohier St., the Cooks of Pond St., the Sullivans of King St., the Hickeys of Nichols Road, and the Higginsons of Atlantic Ave. Comments ranged from awesome, fantastic, let's do it again!



☐They may have lost the final game but members of the Cohasset High School hockey team certainly won the admiration and approval of everyone who attended last week's game at Salem State College.

"They certainly don't have to take a back seat to anyone," said Bill O'Connell, a follower of Cohasset hockey for many years. Mr. O'Connell who has also coached various town hockey teams praised the players and their ability.

☐Take over 60 pounds of potatoes, 40 pounds of fresh haddock right from the boat and a lot of hard work and organization by a small group of dedicated workers and you have some of the many reasons why the recent chowder luncheon at the Beechwood Congregational Church was once again, as it has been over the past years, a resounding success.

Of the 100 or so people who attended the event, everyone was given the chance for a second helping of the hot and hearty New England specialty and, in addition, there were delicious homemade cakes for dessert.

☐Residents of the Senior Citizen Housing at Elm Street are very anxious that another supermarket replace the A&P which is now closed. Waiting in the long lines at the only supermarket now in town is very difficult, notes one resident. In addition, she pointed out that many of the housing residents use the bus shuttle to shop and they're also worried that while they're waiting they may miss the bus.

Nicole Woodland Allison Korbet

☐Every year, members of the junior class at Cohasset High School sell carnations to raise funds. This year, one junior lucked out with one especially generous buyer who bought $10 worth of flowers and then filled out each of the accompanying cards with, "You are my only one."

☐The second session of Chinese cooking classes have now begun at the Community Center and class members continue to be amazed at the delicious and filling dishes that can be prepared with only a small amount of meat.

At a recent class, a pound of meat was used in a dish which eventually fed 11 people and there was actually food left over. In addition to the stir-fried meat and vegetable dish, there was stir-fried zucchini, rice and a cucumber salad to be enjoyed by everyone once they had overcome the difficulties of using chopsticks for the first time.

☐Having just taken up knitting again after a long time, I was delighted with the story of a friend's experience in her first knitting class. It seems that of the pair of mittens she eventually created — one was long and skinny, the other, short and fat.

Her husband, having been shown the pair, helpfully suggested that she knit one more which was bound to match one or the other. She, however, had her mind on what she thought was a far better solution to the whole affair and eventually donated her creation to Goodwill as a tax writeoff.

Anti-casino group lobbies the G.O.P.

Members of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., staffed an informational booth at Saturday's Republican State Convention in Boston.

Describing C.A.C.G.'s efforts at the gathering, President Carol Oteri, of Hull, said, "Our format was basically the same one we used at last spring's Democratic Issues Convention. However, it is clear to me that in the past year people have become even more informed about the real issues involved in the push to impose casino gambling on the state of Massachusetts. I like to think that our organization has played a significant role in getting the facts about casino gambling to the grass roots level in every corner of the Commonwealth."

Oteri continued, "We certainly came away with many requests to do programs and talk shows around the state. Stockpiles of some of our literature were depleted by early afternoon and requests for buttons to be sported by supporters exceeded our wildest expectations."

Asked about the positions taken by leading gubernatorial candidates on casino gambling, Oteri said, "When the conventions and primaries are over we are certain to have only anti-casino candidates carrying the banners of the major political parties. Too many people are against casinos for anyone to take a pro-casino stand and still hope to be elected. They've all read the Becker Poll, which found that two out of every three people polled statewide were against casinos being legalized here."

C.A.C.G.'s convention activities followed a similar presentation earlier in the week at the State House. Legislators, aides and other interested persons viewed a documentary film about the lessons to be learned from Atlantic City's experience with casino gambling. Research materials were also distributed. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) welcomed C.A.C.G.'s volunteer workers and praised them for their efforts to maintain the quality of life in Massachusetts.

fessor, he has taught courses at both the undergraduate and graduate level.

Nedrow's Cohasset activities include coaching youth soccer, Secretary of the Hockey Boosters, Chairman of the Education Committee for the Second Congregational Church, Assistant Treasurer of the Village Fair, and for the past three years has been the Fair's "Santa" on the Common. Additionally, the family belongs to the Cohasset Golf Club, Tennis Club, Sailing Club and the Swim Center. His wife Ruth and children Mike, Jill and Margo are also active in these and other Cohasset activities.

For the past 16 years, Nedrow has been employed with the General Motors Corporation. He has had a wide variety of increasing responsible positions, many of them involving GM's educational programs. These include Director of Education and Training for the Pontiac Motor Car Division, Assistant Director of GM's Placement and College Relations Activity where he had the overall responsibility for coordinating college recruiting efforts involving over 100 colleges and universities. Additionally, his responsibilities included administration of GM's Tuition Refund Program, the GM Scholarship and Graduate Fellowship Program, as well as Funded Research Grants to colleges and universities.

As a Staff Executive for Research, Policy and Planning in GM's Central Office in Detroit, Nedrow gained experience in analyzing and dealing with complex issues.

Since 1978 he has been GM's New England Regional Manager responsible for all matters of an Industry or Government related nature in each of the six New England States. In Massachusetts, he represents his company with the Massachusetts Business Roundtable, the New England Council, The Associated Industries of Massachusetts and the Massachusetts Public Affairs Council.

"General Motors encourages its executives to participate in community affairs and with my background and interest in education, the school committee vacancy is the one area of community service where I feel I can make the most significant contribution to my community," Nedrow said.

Public discussion

Recently a public official was treated shabbily by some members of her board.

The official, who was trying to make a point not well taken by some other members of the board, was not accorded the common courtesy of being able to have her say uninterrupted by asides, comments, derision.

We think the public interest is best served by full discussion of the issues. And the Mariner is happy to provide space to those who oppose our views.

The right to discuss the issues at hand is extremely important to democratic process. Let's hope we never become such a closed society that only one party line is tolerated. Let's hope there will always be room and encouragement of free thought, free speech and public dissent.

Matter of fact, we've noticed there is too little public discussion of issues as it is in town.

If people were all meant to think the same way, the Goddess whould have made most of us as robots.

This is not to say Cohasset government doesn't work — it works well. Perhaps it could work even better.

Now that the town is approaching its yearly elections and town meeting session, we think it's time for people who have ideas on town government to step into the foreground and discuss items like the implementation of budgets in the coming year.

There's often more discussion of issues facing the town at the Log and Line than in open committee meetings.

With all the bright minds and creative ideas that dwell within Cohasset, there should be more innovation in government, more discussion of alternatives.

Saving the band

Wouldn't it be great to restore the high school band to the budget?

If — as the superintendent says — the school budget is so tight as to preclude the band from being funded at last year's level of $1,500 (the uniforms and instruments are already owned by the school system), then it seems time for the band parents to come out of the woodwork and offer to put on a fund-raiser akin to the Music Circus extravaganza last summer for athletics.

In a school system like Cohasset, where no other programs are being eliminated, it seems a shame to reduce the opportunity for musically-oriented youngsters.

Indeed it would seem that since this year's budget proved to have $16,000 — already identified — available for maintenance expenses unlisted in the budget voted last year, it would be highly likely that the band program could be kept on without providing specific funds. The program seems to be small enough to be carried on the same way the drainage for the field behind Sullivan gym was managed.

Rep Studds travels the local roads, hits Reagan economic policies

By Patricia Desmond

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds moved out of his regular meet the people format over the weekend to bring his message of opposition to Reagan's way to the Democrats who brunch with the Co-op Five and the new inductees of the Cohasset H.S. Honor Society.

Studds had no prepared texts to spout at the audiences. He kept to the style of question and answer informality that has marked his open meetings at local town halls.

In case you are unaware of the Congressman's position, he and President Ronald Reagan differ on every issue it seems possible to disagree on.

"Americans undeniably hunger for strong leadership and very much want the President to succeed. But I must question — with genuine regret — whether trusting for yet another year in the "riverboat gamble" of this Administration's economic recovery plan is a risk we can reasonably ask the American people to take," Studds said recently.

"Last July when President Reagan signed into law the legislation implementing his spending and tax cutting program, he declared, 'America is better off today than she was yesterday. America is more confident today than she was a day ago. And the economic possibilities for all Americans are greater than they were 24 hours ago.'

"And how far have we come since then? Interest rates have bounced about in a dizzying enough range to have thrown the housing and auto industries into virtual depression. The number of business failures recorded in 1981 was the second highest since World War II. Unemployment likewise flirts with the record high for the post-war period. And — as a result of the recession, the tax cut, and bloated defense spending — we face federal deficits in the $100 billion range for at least three consecutive years.

"Less than 12 months ago, however, when the Administration presented its revisions to the fiscal year 1982 budget, there was no hint of this apparently unavoidable downturn in its economic forecast.

"In fact, the Congress — over my opposition — granted the President virtually everything he sought in both his budget and tax program. Unfortunately, the economic assumptions upon which the President's latest budget is based are once again 'rosy' and unsupported by either previous economic experience or common sense. This time, the Administration forecasts a moderate recovery in the second half of 1982 — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has even predicted that the economy is going to come roaring back in the late spring — with real economic growth averaging about five percent annually for 1982-1987. At the same time, the Administration predicts that the inflation rate will continue to decline, unemployment will fall this year, and short-term interest rates will decline to 5.5 percent in 1987.

"This notion that economic activity can shoot up while interest rates drop is, I fear, little more than beguiling fancy. This economic scenario is all the more tragically fallacious when one recalls the Administration's commitment to a monetary policy which would steadily reduce the rate of money supply growth and credit from the 1980 levels to just half those levels by 1986. In my view, the President's policy is setting the stage for a dangerous scramble for severely limited credit between federal borrowing to finance the Administration's record high deficits and the investment needs — once the predicted recovery from recession begins — of the private sector.

"True believers in the magic of combining supply side stimuli and restrictive monetary policies may dismiss criticisms of the President's economic forecasts as nit-picking or worse. But to understand the importance of scrutinizing these economic assumptions, we need only look at the enormous growth of the estimated federal deficit for the current fiscal year. Last summer, based upon overly optimistic assumptions, the Administration forecast a deficit in the range of $40 billion. Barely eight months later, we face a deficit of about $100 billion. Almost three-quarters of this explosion in the deficit can be traced to faulty economic assumptions. Higher interest costs on the larger national debt alone accounted for an additional $7 billion in deficit for this year. Moreover, none of the net increase in spending or the deficit results from policy actions by the Congress."

Studds has been holding meetings in his district ever since he was elected 10 years ago. Often the tone of the meetings sounds like a miniature United Nations forum. Questions of foreign policy have frequently been debated — usually the people in the audience hold the same left of center positions the Congressman has been known for.

Studds now faces what observers say will be the toughest battle of his career. Jack Conway, Realtor, is out for the Republican nomination for the seat, now listed at the 10th District.

Conway is already moving about the district, talking about campaign issues. Studds' people aren't even ready yet to come out with an official statement announcing the re-election campaign. But Studds is making more appearances — on weekends — lately.

Meanwhile in his Hanover office, the pace is still moving forward with unhurried effort.

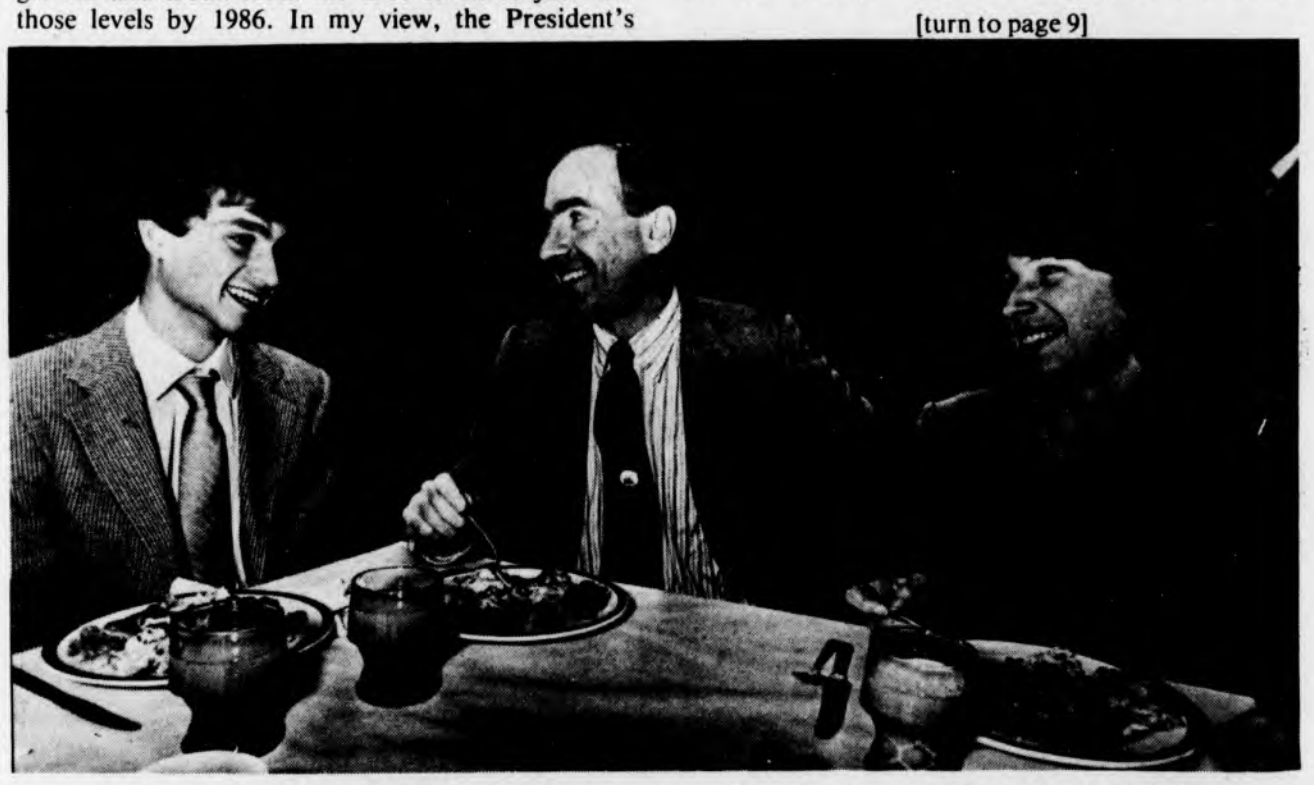
Issues aren't resolved in the Hanover office. Concerns are funnelled from the staff workers back to the Congressman in Washington — to other federal agencies — to someone who may be able to help with the problem at hand.

That's what the office is there for. Problems.

Alexander See runs the Hanover office. His official title is South Shore Regional Representative. There are people with similar titles at offices on the Cape and in New Bedford, the other ends of the district.

Ask See what he accomplishes in the office and the answer is self-effacing.

He is obviously a man who believes in the stands Studds takes.



"Every day I make a list of 10 things I feel have to be done," he said, taking time from his schedule to explain the inner workings of the office.

"I also know there is no way they will all get done."

He talks about everything being an emergency by the time people call in the Congressman's staff.

On his desk there are stacks of manilla folders. On the floor there are more folders, crammed with infor-

A bow to CHS Hockey and it's fans

Letters

Dear Townspeople:

On behalf of the Cohasset Athletic Department, I would like to thank the community for the tremendous support you have given the hockey squad, following them from one end of the state to the other.

The 1981-1982 hockey squad brought the community together as a single unit, cheering a group of 23 young men and three coaches to a 18-2-2 record.

The athletes of Cohasset are both fortunate and thankful for the support given them by school officials, teachers, parents, businessmen, students and loyal supporters. The success of any athletic program is proportionate to the above-mentioned groups. Also, not to be overlooked, was the exemplary behavior of the student body during the tournament.

The 23 hockey players have given all of us memories that will be talked about for years. From Boston College in December, to Salem State in March, these young men gave the community of Cohasset a reason to be proud.

Water Dept. warns on sodium count

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Water Department has been notified by the Mass. Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering that the drinking water supplied by us has a sodium content of 23 mg/1 as shown by the average of quarterly samples collected during the year.

The "Drinking Water Regulations of Massachusetts," (Section 6, Table C) require that analysis shall be repeated quarterly if the level of sodium exceeds the Maximum Contaminant Level of 20 mg/1. The following information is submitted in conformance with the "Drinking Water Regulations of Massachusetts."

Since many persons suffer from diseases which are, or may be influenced by dietary sodium intake, and since others may wish to restrict sodium intake for other reasons, it is desirable that the sodium content of drinking water be known to the consumer. Those affected can, by knowing the sodium concentration in their drinking water, make suitable adjustments to their diets. In extreme cases some may even wish to use alternative sources of water for drinking and food preparation; if you are on a restrictive sodium diet, you should consult with your physician about this matter.

We feel the excessive level of sodium in our water supply is caused by state, town, business, and private parties for control of snow and ice on roads, walks and parking areas.

Removal of sodium from water by methods currently available is expensive and inefficient, therefore, the most practical ways of keeping sodium levels within limits seem to be:

A) Preventing, insofar as possible, the sodium from being introducted into the water.

B) Encourage programs and practices by Public Works Departments, business, industry, and private citizens, to ensure sensible salting of pavement, proper storage and protection of salt stockpiles and proper disposal of waste products.

Example of sodium content of common foods in a typical diet:

Two cups of milk, 226 milligrams of sodium; one egg, medium size, 56 mg.; three slices of bread, 465 mg.; one serving of green vegetables, 50 mg.; one serving of fruit (citrus), 6 mg.

It is important to note that about 2/3 of the daily water intake of the individual is through food and only about 1/3 from water itself.

House approves money for Straits Pond

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, called the Mariner Tuesday to announce near approval of state construction of a $30,000 automatic gate at Straits Pond.

The bill carrying the money was engrossed Tuesday by the House and sent on to the Senate.

Rep. Murray said the gate will replace an ancient one at the pond on the border of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull. The new gate is supposed to help solve the recurring problem of algae and midges which bother the neighbors along the water.

mation.

See is relucant to take credit for anything the office accomplishes.

"Because there are always other people involved. We don't do anything here in isolation. There are individuals, town officials, others always involved.

"We respond to the needs of the constituents."

Among the projects he and other people are responding to are details dealing with Con Rail's decision to cut out service to Hanover and other communities, the reductions in the Coast Guard budget, changes in copywrite laws that may mean jobs at Halliday, funding for the Cohasset sewer treatment plant (mainly the function there has been information gathering), South Shore commuter boats, and other issues of local and federal convergence.

While See was talking, two women outside his office answered the phones and worked on issues affecting individual constituents.

Most of the cases the two women deal with involve Social Security.

"We don't pretend we can solve all the world's problems. We try not to be a third cog on a wheel," See said.

"Many times all we are doing is helping someone deal with a bureaucracy."

He said there are times when people misunderstand the purpose of the office and will come to him with a question that really should be directed to town government.

They might want the Congressman to get involved in a zoning argument or something of that nature.

The office steers those people politely back to the local level.

"It's a high volume, treadmill existence here," See said.

"The volume of problems is growing partly because the population is increasing and with the government cutbacks there is more confusion.

The district was growing at such a rate that 63,000 people were loped off in the recently redistricting.

Weymouth and Rockland were taken off the district and Hanson added on.

See said the job is frustrating but he finds satisfaction in knowing his work with constituents helps to enable the Congressman to do his job.

That job is undefined in our society.

"He is a legislator. With the laws generated there's a huge government operating in a complex society. We try to help people deal with that."

Cub Blue & Gold dinner a success

By Linda Farrag

The Cubs signed a personalized thank you card and it was sent with a picture, taken at the Blue and Gold dinner, to Mike O'Connell.

The Blue and Gold committee and the other members of Pack 38 worked very hard to make the dinner a successful, fun, and enjoyable family night. The special highlights were having the parents present their sons with the achievement awards and badges they earned and having the opportunity to meet Bruin defenseman, Mike O'Connell and his wife, Rosemary.

On March 3 the Old Mills District hosted a public forum on Special Needs Scouting. The District formed a special committee to encourage participation by handicapped boys (and girls as Explorers) in scouting. The well-organized program had excellent speakers.

Moderator was John Murphy, Hingham School Department.

Al Taylor, chairman of Committee on Scouting for Handicapped, explained the special needs couting program.

Doe West, executive director of the Mayor's Commission on Physically Handicapped in Boston, presented awareness to dispel misconceptions of the disabled.

Attorney H. Furman of Hanover spoke about the legal aspects.

Dr. Golden of Cohasset spoke of the medical aspect of scouting and special needs.

Aileen Cahill, committee member of Troop 4 Hingham, presented a slide presentation, "Dennis is Special." From the slides we saw her five-year old son, Dennis, a cancer patient. We toured his life from his home, school and hospital to become more familiar with his way of life. The presentation was turely an educational, learning and moving experience.

Mark the following dates on your calendar:

The next Round Table District meeting will be April 7, at the South Jr. High School on Rte. 228 in Hingham. All parents are invited.

The Cub Scout Hikeathon on March 27 at 10 a.m. at Hingham's Wompatuck State Park will begin. The boys will meet at the administration building in the park. It will be a hike of 5 kilometers (approximately three miles). Scouts will take pledges from patrons.

March 28 will be the Pack 38 committee meeting at the Parish House, Cohasset.

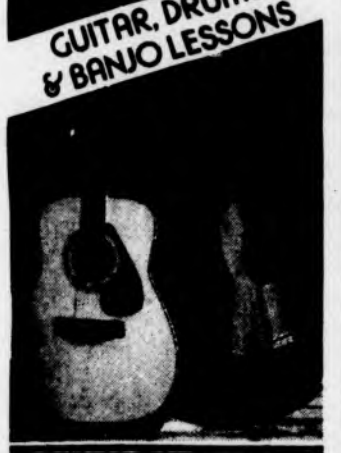
The Pinewood Derby is coming around the corner on March 31. All the boys are busy creating their race cars.

The Cub Scout Father and Son weekends are going to be in April, May and June. The Old Colony Scout Reservation is offering a new program for Cubs and their dads or close male adult relative (18 or older).

April 17 the inners from the Cohasset Pinewood Derby will compete in a District Derby at Rockland High.

Pawtucket Red Sox will host a Mass. Scout Night on Friday, June 4 at McCoy's Stadium in Pawtucket, R.I. (25 minutes from Canton off Rte. 95, with free parking). Tickets for Cubs, Scouts, Explorers, and adults and family members will be available at Council Service Center on March 15. The cost is $1 per ticket. Pre-game festivities will include honor guard of two Cubs or Scouts from all units participating (to be selected by each unit).

The Jubilee Camporee is on Saturday, June 12, at Bridgewater State College at 1 p.m. A Scouting Extravaganza that all Cub Scouts and their families should plan on attending. Please register early.



The pack meetings will be March 31 and April 28.

The Cub Scout bowling will complete the first session on March 24. A new session will begin for 8 weeks on March 31 from 3-4 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center. The cost is $10 for the eight weeks, including bowling shoe rentals. All scouts are welcome. For registration call the Center at 383-0088 after 3 p.m. to speak to Bill O'Connor.

The Tom Sawyer play will be on April 21 at 2 p.m. at the New England Life Hall, Boston. Tickets must be purchased in advance.

Look for the coming April Cub Scout registration. We plan to see all our present scouts and hope to have new members enroll so they too can share our new 1982-1983 Cub Scout Year.

Dr. Mike Equi will be talking to the Cub Scouts on Monday, March 22, at the Parish House, 3 to 4 p.m. He will be talking about good dental habits among other topics.

Why wasn't Gjesteby invited?

On Martha Gjesteby's complaint that she was not told the school committee was listed on the selectmen's agenda, School Committee member Diana Kornet said: "You voted against it (meaning the request made by school committee that the town meeting be postponed).

"We went there to explain our reasons to selectmen."

Kornet and Irene Brown, school committee chairman, attended the selectmen's session.

Committee member Jack Langmaid said he too had not been invited.

"I did it (went to the meeting) as a courtesy because Mr. (Arthur) Clark said it would be nice," Brown said.

She explained she went as committee chairman and had just happened to mention it to Kornet.

The Gjesteby position

[The following is the response of one school committee member to the appearance of two other members at Selectmen's meeting last week. Ed.]

Mrs. Irene Brown
Chairman, Cohasset School Committee
Dear Irene,

I was quite surprised to learn from one of our selectmen about the meeting some members of the school committee had with the board of selectmen, on Wednesday, March 3. In fact, the selectmen asked why I could not be there.

As you are the School Committee Chairperson, and it is your responsibility to see that all the School Committee Members are notified of all school committee matters, I have a few questions that I would like answered now, and I feel I deserve an answer in public.

1. When did the School Committee decide to attend a meeting with the Selectmen?
2. How was it decided that Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Kornet were to represent the Committee?
3. Why was I not told about the meeting?
4. I understand that you and Mrs. Kornet made a statement to the selectmen that they were the only members able to attend, when, in fact, I hadn't been notified. Why?

Although I attended a short concert with you and other members of the school committee at the high school early that evening, I would have been very happy to attend as well the meeting with the Board of Selectmen.

Sincerely yours,
Martha K. Gjesteby

On postponing town meeting

(The following letter was sent from the School Committee to Selectmen last week.)

Mr. Henry Ainslie, Chairman
Board of Selectmen

Dear Mr. Ainslie:

At their Feb. 24 meeting, the Cohasset School Committee voted 4-1 to request the Board of Selectmen to adjourn the Town Meeting from April 3, 1982 to May 1, 1982. The purpose of the delay would be to allow time for the Massachusetts Department of Revenue to certify the re-assessment of town property.

If the Board would like to discuss this with the Committee, please notify us so that a mutually agreeable time might be arranged.

Irene E. Brown, Chairman
Cohasset School Committee

HELPING A FRIEND — George Sechen, 12, swings for the Heart Fund at the Deer Hill School last week. (PHotos by Greg Derr)

The Big Jump Rope

Money maker...

MARATHONER — Ted Crow, 17, moves with quick athletic ability at the Jumpathon for the American Heart Fund.

eighth grader said the senior had completed almost two hours straight of jumping.

Price, co-captain of the wrestling team, said he likes rope jumping better than running because you can do it anywhere, anytime since snow and cold weather can't interfere. He said, "It's better for your heart and lungs...it makes me breathe harder."

Price recently broke the high school record for most jumps in a minute. The record was previously held by his brother E.T. during the past four years.

Sixth grader Steven Ford seemed to be getting a tough workout. He said he drank many cokes throughout the afternoon for relief. The Boosters Club provided free drinks and cookies for the participants. Rosee Duffy, Joan Brown, and Ruth Nedrow were served youngsters at the snack bar.

Members of the Communications Council ironed on special "Jump Rope For Heart" transfers onto students' T-shirts. Susan McNamara, Jayne Nussdorfer, Karen Kierkendhl, Joanne Shepherd, and Mary Reidy did the ironing.

Watson said physical education instructors throughout the school system recently instructed students in aerobic dance, jogging, jump roping and heart monitoring to coincide with the jump rope marathon. The event was sponsored by the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (AAHPERD).

The entire physical education faculty helped with supervision at the three-hour jump rope session. Nancy Kealey, Everett Dorr, Dennis Kuntz, Clark Chatterton, Helen Pratt and Michael. High school PE major also watched over the jump marathon.

Incentive prizes will be provided for students who collect the most money from pledges. Anyone who collects $10 receives a jump rope. A baseball cap with the jump rope for heart logo on it, goes to those who collect $25 and students who bring in $50 or more get a gym bag. Each member of the team that collects the most money will win warmup suits.

The amount of money raised by the jump rope event won't be known until all the pledges are collected. Watson said one team reportedly had over $400 in pledges.

SWEET HARMONY — From left, Jennifer Thompson, George Schulzinsky, Theresa Lennon and Lisa Mercurio, all 15, leap through the paces at the Jumpathon for charity.

DOUBLE DUTCH — A specialty jump is performed with precision by the team of Sonya Butler, Joy Turner and Cheryl Smith at the Deer Hill School's Jumpathon.

Patricia Walsh suggests school budget reductions

Patricia Walsh, ex-school committee member, gave this list of possible budget reductions for Cohasset schools to the school committee at the Public Hearing Monday.

1. Application of Current Surplus to supplies, possibly $40,000 to $80,000, based on experience factors.

Total Budget for this year	$3,614,475
Minus Total Expenses
July 1, 1982 to Feb. 27, 1982	1,974,139
applicable to that Budget per
Town Accountant	left $1,640,336

This $1,640,336 is approximately 45.38 percent of the total.

Almost all supplies for the year have been purchased.

Approximately $2,643.55 borrowed from operating funds by school lunch revolving account has not been repaid.

Summer salaries withheld for many teachers (5 out of 26 pay periods) have not yet been expended.

Only four months or 1/3 of the school year remains to be funded.

2. Savings from Business Office Administration possibly $33,550.

When Superintendent Crowell was hired from Danvers, his salary was approximately $34,000, and he had been Business Manager for several months as well as Superintendent.

The present salary of Superintendent is $41,000 plus 7.7 percent, which equals $44,147. The present salary of the Business Manager is $31,152 plus 7.7 percent, which equals $33,550.

The School Committee has reserved in the $18,000 Salary Reserve Account monies which could amount to as much as a 7.7 percent increase for the yet non-contracted salaries for next year. This means that the Cohasset Schools could be paying as much as $77,707 for these two positions next year, whereas, Danvers, a much larger school system with approximately 4000 students, was paying at $34,000 only two years ago. In 1972 there were 1992 pupils in the system and one bookkeeper, now there are two bookkeepers and a Business Manager.

3. Cohasset High School Teaching Staff: One Teacher or equivalent fractions, $19,567.

Declining enrollment in the High School is not addressed in this budget. As of January, 1982, there were 126 students in Grade 6 (moving to Grade 7). Guidance Office transcripts report the graduating class at 149. Difference of 149 minus 126 equals 23, or one less class in grade 7 — not including students who may transfer to private schools.

This year 854 students were budgeted, next year you are budgeting for 825, a difference of 29 students in fact.

Note Social Studies is predicted to be down 54 pupils (two classes).

Note Science is predicted to be down 43 pupils.

There are some very small foreign language classes which might be combined.

4. Reduce by ½ Custodian added to High School staff last year, $6,635, ½ times $13,270 equals $6,635.

Deer Hill Head Custodian decided that he could get along with two instead of 2½ custodians, a rare thing in these days of institutional bureauocracy. (This is the same head custodian who saved about ½ the fuel costs in the school by cutting back and closely monitoring the heat). Another custodian left our employment at the high school. In a case like this, at a time of natural attrition, and without hurt feelings, the school department could have hired ½ or part time custodian. However, they employed one full custodian, despite the fact that with a drastically declining enrollment in the schools (there were 1992 students in 1972, 1414 students are budgeted for September. Fewer students mean less trash disposal, supplying of washrooms.

5. Physical Education Teacher reduced by ½ of one position systemwide, $12,931.

In 1971 there were 702 pupils at the Osgood, and Deer Hill also had a similar number another year, but teaching staff has not been cut back, although each school will have less than 300 pupils. High School will also have fewer pupils (about one class). Phys. Ed. teachers said to be working in Special Needs, but Mr. Hart admitted not charged to that budget, where could get state reimbursements. In fact lately an outstanding therapist has been employed who actually prescribes physical therapy, and is paid out of Special Needs funds and grants.

6. One position Clerical Aide, Joseph Osgood, $6,846. Position has already been eliminated at Deer Hill.

7. Grade 1, three Teachers and one Certified Aide instead of four teachers, $4,750

	$11,250
Less estimated cost of Aide	6,500
	$4,750

Sixty-eight pupils in Kindergarten plus five retainees equals 73 or 24 pupils/class vs. 18, but would have Aide.

8. Bus Storage, $3,840.

The Cohasset School Committee is presently paying approximately $320/month or $3840/year for storage of buses at a bus contractor's premises.

When the subject of storage came up at a School Committee Budget Meeting, the administration painted a rosy picture of how wonderful the storage at the contractor's was in terms of maintenance. We were told that on these cold mornings, if a bus didn't start, the contractor could rush right out of his home into his yard and start up the bus, change the battery, or whatever was necessary.

Two weeks ago at the School Committee meeting, I publicly asked the Business Manager whether or not he knew that the bus contractor and his wife had been out of state for a while. He answered, "Yes." Although there is rumored to be someone there, in fact for weeks now you could dial the contractor's telephone, day and night, let the telephone ring, and get no answer.

How many taxpayers in Cohasset would like to have the School Department leave the school buses in their yards and receive $320/month while they vacationed in Florida?

9. Reduce the $18,000 Salary Reserve Account by approximately $4,000.

Reduce the percentage from approximately 7.7 percent to 6 percent which is an amount being negotiated elsewhere, or

10. Flat rate increase the Supt. and Bus. Mgr. increases to $1500 each, $2549.

11. High School Administration: Reduce one secretarial position to ½ time, $5712.

Originally had responsibilities for Curriculum Coordinator and full time Media secretarial work, as well as Library Curriculum Coordinator has been abolished, Media cut to ½ time and most library books come in preprocessed.

12. Decrease Music and Art the 10 percent (equals ½ day each), $2362, arbitrarily added to Osgood Budget in face of fewer classrooms of students Osgood and Deer Hill. 10 percent, $11,254 equals $1,125 plus 10 percent times $12,372 equals $1,237.

13. Reduce Fuel Oil Budgets, $7,780, prices rapidly plunging world market.

Osgood	$29,770
Dear Hill	48,682
High School	79,160
Total budgeted	$157,612

5 percent would be $7,880.

14. Gasoline budgeted at $13,000, reduced five percent would be $650.

15. Reduce one Playground Aide Osgood or Deer Hill, $2100. It is expected to lose one by attrition, moving out of state.

16. Electrical wiring budgeted at $3500 systemwide, reduce $2,000. We are no longer changing lights over to fluorescent. Work all done.

17. Osgood Open Space Supplies, reduce $1,066.

Same $3,200 carried over as had last year, but going from three classes to two classes.

Note ordering of three plan books, three class record books 100s of tests, 55 dozen pencils for 52 pupils.

18. Grade 5 next year probably the 86 enrolled in 4th grade Jan. 1982 actual.

Grade 4 next year probably the 81 enrolled in 3rd grade Jan. 1982 actual.

Why not drop one aide? The 4th grade did without one, when aide sick ½ year.

Or at least drop ½ aide.

Dropping ½ - 1 Aide, estimated $3,679 - $7,358.

19. Osgood Maintenance

Roof, $1,000 budgeted, reduce $500.

Most of the roof is slate. The rest was redone only a few years ago. Janitors have told me that the usual repair is getting up there with a bucket of black patching tar.

Sewerage, $720 budgeted, reduce $400.

The Osgood was pumped only a few months ago, and is only done every 3-4 years.

20. Deer Hill Workshops and Conferences $300, reduce $225 to $75.

Only $25 was budgeted last year. The Osgood usually allows $25 per grade. Apparently the teachers rotate attending. Why reduce field trips for youngsters to 0 from $500 budgeted last year, and increase the teachers' trips? Which is more important?

Moreover, when teachers go to conferences there is a "hidden" cost in substitutes of approximately $30/day.

21. Thoreau's Walden, reduce by several copies.

The English Department is ordering 30 at $1.95, equals $58.50.

The Alternative School is ordering 30 at $1.50, equals $45.00.

The Alternative School only has 15 pupils presently as Mr. MacDonald told the Communications Councils.

The English Department budgeted 20 copies last year and have also purchased many copies in previous years.

Can't they share?

Cohasset High School

Student Teachers

By Patty Walsh

This year, Cohasset High School has revived an old program — student teaching. Leslie Jones and Ed Young are two ambitious individuals who plan on some day becoming teachers. Attending Williams College and Northeastern University respectively, each became a student teacher at CHS practicing within the English and Social Studies departments.

To fulfill her Winter Study's Project, Leslie Jones looked into student teaching last year. To her great dissatisfaction she discovered that she could not choose the department and the grade level she would be instructing. Having been an AP English student at CHS a few years ago, Leslie thought of asking Mr. Emmons to be her faculty sponsor. Because he knew her as one of his best AP students, he allowed her to instruct his AP class and his poetry class during this past month of January.

As a result of her experiences at CHS Leslie now appreciates the large amounts of time that go into teaching. In addition, she now knows how frustrating teaching can be when the teacher is faced with student indifference. One of the most important aspects of teaching, Leslie ascertained, is the necessity of good rapport between the students and the teacher. She feels that the teacher must be interested in his subject in order to keep the students' attention. In the AP classes, she says, the students are generally self-motivated. However, she found other classes slightly more challenging to teach because the teacher must keep the interest and motivation going within the students.

In the beginning, Leslie "felt self-conscious" in front of the students and had "difficulty receiving feedback from them." She believes she has improved, and as a student in one of her classes, I certainly agree. Sometimes she lectured and had difficulty stimulating discussion, but after about a week, Leslie managed to learn from Mr. Emmon's style — which allows the students to discover the answers within themselves. Student teaching at CHS has been a rewarding experience for Leslie, and she hopes to go on to teach at a college.

Edward Young of Scituate first became interested in the student teaching program as a graduation requirement for education majors. His professor chose Cohasset High School because of its "good reputation." CHS is well-known for having a "professional staff." As an excellent school, CHS would give Mr. Young the opportunity to learn more about teaching.

Ed Young

The low pay teachers receive does not disturb Mr. Young because "any income is better than what I make presently," and he feels he can "adjust to the new style of life." He agrees that student apathy is a problem, but there are many ways to interest students. The running of a school, he feels, is no different than the operation of other business hierarchy.

So far, Mr. Young has observed the different teaching styles of Mr. Sheehan, Mr. Bouchard, and Ms. Robbins. He is slowly working his way into teaching. In February he began instructing four classes under the close supervision of the regular teachers.

Mr. Young likes the school because here, he says, "students challenge you and always want to know a little more." Also, he receives many searching questions which delve deeply into the subject at hand; questions such as "What are Roman houses made of?"

In his experiences Mr. Young has learned that a teacher must present his material well and he must emphasize what is important. Mr. Young has found that his presentation must be interesting and easily understandable by the students. Since he has observed three different teaching styles, he now has the background to draw upon these styles to discover what style is best for him.

Mr. Young wants to teach because he likes adolescents, as demonstrated by his seven years of involvement with the YMCA. He feels that teaching will continue this involvement. He feels a general knowledge of US history "helps personally in that it brings a common background to students."

Mr. Young wishes to thank the teachers in Cohasset High School for being helpful and making him feel at home. His goal is to become a teacher, either in the New England or Texas areas. He wants to "shoot for his best" as a teacher by being well-prepared and by trying different methods until he finds a comfortable teaching style.

Mr. Emmons feels that student teaching is "the best kind of apprenticeship" and that "every new teacher should practice for one year." Leslie has had a "taste of teaching." She has experience instructing and has found that she likes it. How valuable student teaching is depends upon whether the person teaches or watches. The student teacher should be "doing." Mr. Emmons believes that "teachers have a gift which must be perfected and polished by experience, not just by the number of years, but by the enthusiasm of learning."

Leslie Jones began planning her lessons last fall. Mr. Emmons feels that it is necessary to carefully match the student teacher with the faculty advisor and the high school, like the AFS program matches the exchange student with the host family.

Also, Mr. Sheehan feels that this "beneficial" program is "a learning experience for both the student teacher and the supervisor." As Mr. Sheehan stated, "the student teacher program is a very positive one."

Dispatch from Dogpatch

by Suzanne Bird

"We're running ahead of schedule — thank God!" Everyone's been working hard, memorizing dialogue and dance routines. The chorus, says Mrs. Goff, is doing "beautifully."

Even though Mrs. Goff has seen the high level of enthusiasm evident in all the cast members, she never saw this spirit of enthusiasm displayed so forcefully as when the "wives" were rehearsing their dance routine. The wives dance and sing to "Put 'Em Back the Way They Was," which Mrs. Goff classifies as "a show-stealing number."

Costumes and set construction are also well on their way. Barbara Conte is in charge of costume design and all of the artwork for the show. Grace Wilkins, a "magician with a needle and thread," is making the costumes. Grace requests that "all handy needles give me a call."

Mrs. Goff especially appreciates the work of Stage Manager Danny Hall, who handles responsibilities ranging from aiding in setting up rehearsals to fitting in for a missing actor. When asked to describe Danny, Mrs. Goff debated whether to call him "Mr. Organization" or "Mr. Come-through-in-a-pinch."

All in all, the senior class play is moving along beautifully, and it more than promises to be entertainment worth seeing. Tickets go on sale in March. Without a doubt, this year's senior class musical will be the best one yet!

New Penalties

by Suzanne Bird

You've probably heard about the recent crackdown on drinking and driving, but do you know what the extent of the crackdown is? Aside from stopping cars suspected to be driven by people under the influence, police in some areas run spot checks, stopping every tenth car. Do you know the exact penalties for driving under the influence, and do you know how one is classified as such?

The following list of penalties is the "New Policy Guidelines for Quincy Court" concerning driving under the influence:

FIRST OFFENSE

1. 30 days House of Correction
2. Three to nine days committed, to be served on weekends where appropriate.
3. Remaining sentence to be suspended conditioned upon the defendant completing an alcohol education or other rehabilitation program as prescribed by probation.
4. Payment of $200 fee for rehabilitation program.
5. Defendant shall lose the right to operate a vehicle for a period of 30 days.

SECOND OFFENSE

1. Ninety days House of Correction.
2. Nine to 30 days committed to be served weekends where appropriate.
3. Balance of sentence to be suspended upon condition that the defendant attend five A.A. meetings a week for 30 weeks and pay a fee of $250 for the supervision of such program.
4. Loss of license as mandated by statute.

THIRD OFFENSE

1. Ninety days House of Correction.
2. Loss of license as mandated by statute.

The penalties are harsh, and are enforced strictly. Driving under the influence is a serious offense. But what, exactly, is "driving under the influence?" It has nothing to do with how drunk you are, or what your tolerance for alcohol is. Driving under the influence means that your blood-alcohol level is at a certain percent. In Massachusetts if you have between zero and five percent alcohol in your blood (registering .00 to .02 on the breathalizer), you are not guilty. If you have between six and nine percent, your chances of being convicted are 50 percent. Above ten percent you are classified as "driving under the influence." Breathalizers and blood samples are used to monitor the blood-alcohol level, or the BAL.

One drink will put the BAL at 2 percent, a second drink will put the BAL at 4 percent, and so on. If your BAL is around 40 percent you are in a comatose condition. The body burns alcohol at a rate of 2 percent an hour, so it is recommended to time yourself if you are driving in order to keep your BAL between 0 and 5 percent. (This does not mean that all people are fit to drive with an alcohol level between 0 and 5 percent. Remember, the BAL is not an indication of tolerance.)

The penalties for driving under the influence are severe. Is it worth the risk?

It's happening in Cohasset

Little League registration

We would like to emphasize that skating ability and previous experience are not important.

Registrants will receive free instructions from members of the Seahawk coaching staff during the month of April practice sessions. For further information please call Mark Salvador at 545-5414.

Aerobic Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Dept. will accept by phone, registrations for both morning and evening Aerobic classes which will be taught by Margaret Watson, professional dance/exercise instructor.

Participants may sign up for either one or both classes. The fee is $10 for one class and $18 for both classes.

This program will be conducted through the self-supporting, Revolving Account Fund. The programs are scheduled to begin March 24 and 25.

The class will consist of a dance warm up, strenuous calisthetic work on the floor, an over-all dance stretch and work on Jazz choreography. A dance combination will be taught each week.

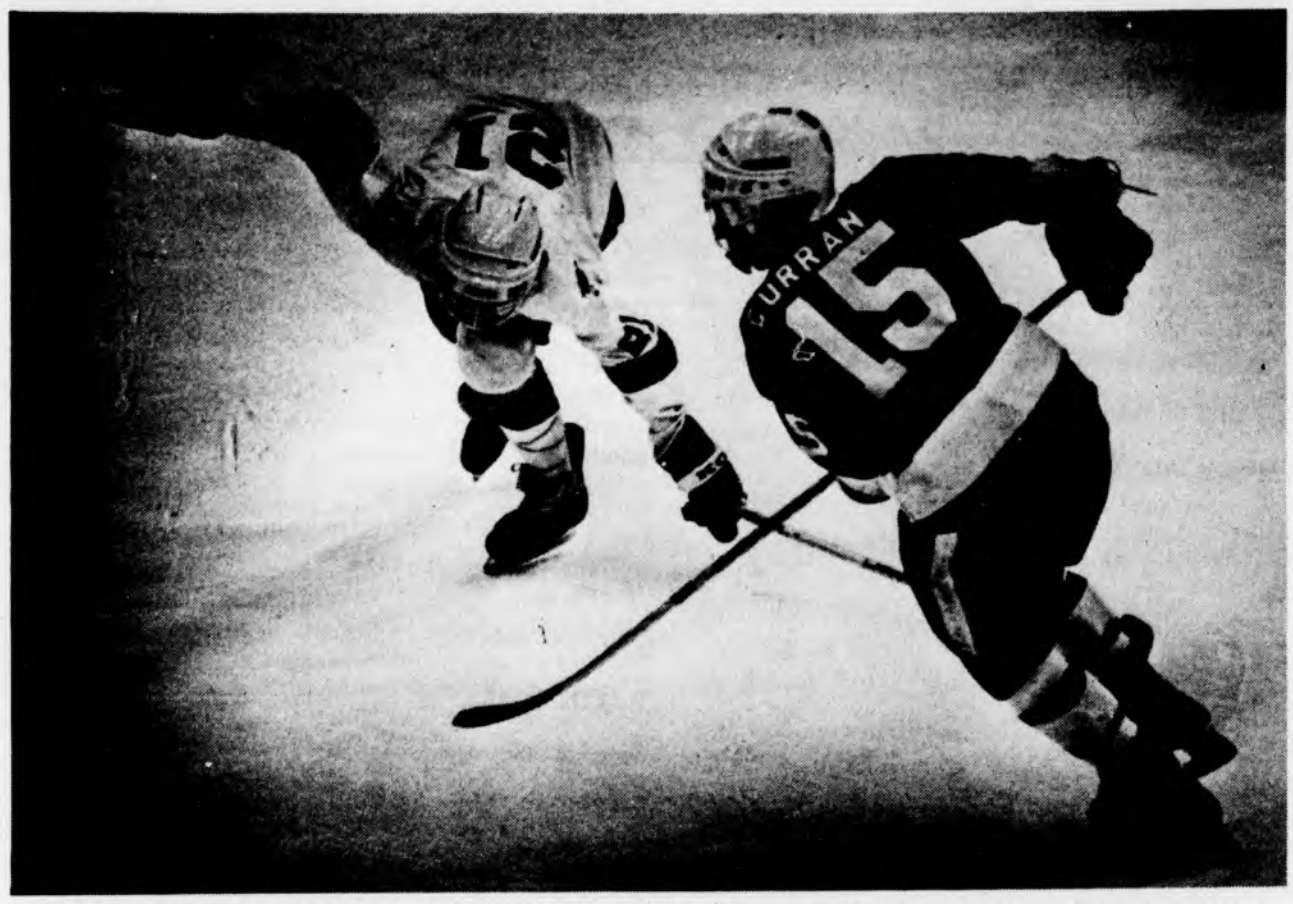
Cohasset falls in tourney action, but goalie Bowen shines

The Cohasset High School ice hockey team was eliminated from the Eastern Mass. Division II tourney last Thursday, by Franklin, 2-1, at Salem State.

Franklin played better hockey and many say they deserved to win the quarter final contest by an even higher score. The victory advanced the Panthers to the semi-finals and hopefully they won't meet up with other hot goaltenders like Cohasset's Steve Bowen.

The Skippers were outshot, 33-12 at the end of the first two periods. Bowen, the senior Cohasset goalie, kept his team even with the Panthers during a scoreless first and second periods.

Coach Tom Brunell said, Steve probably played the best game of his High School career.



Though the Cohasset icemen came out storming in the third period, it was the Panthers who scored twice. Franklin scored first while Cohasset was shorthanded. The second goal was scored by defenseman Tom Bissanti, of Franklin, who drilled a slapshot from the point which deflected off the skates of two Cohasset defensemen and into the net.

The Skipper's all-scholastic defenseman Dom Compedelli escaped three Franklin defenders and drove the puck past the Panther goalie at 11:18 of the third period.

Campedelli spoke of the Franklin squad, "They had the territorial edge" and kept the puck down the Cohasset end, for most of the game. "The score was close only because Steve Bowen held us in the game," he said. "Franklin was the best team we've played all season — we were on defense for most of the game."

Bowen said, "Franklin stopped us at their blue line with their strong defense. Basically they were all over us." The Panthers were "definitely" the best team Cohasset played all season — they had three solid lines said Bowen.

"Over the past few years we figured this would be a strong year for Cohasset hockey...and it turned out that way," said Bowen. He said that at the beginning of the season, when the coach has scheduled Don Bosco as a non-league contest —he thought the game would be out of reach. But the Skippers tied Don Bosco 3-3 and won the Christmas Tourney. Bowen said the Don Bosco game and Christmas tourney wins boosted the confidence of Cohasset players.

COHASSET FORWARD Sean Curran (no. 15) makes a move which throws his Franklin opponent, (no. 12) off balance.

Cohasset's senior co-captain Jack McNeill said, "We've never faced a team like Franklin that could check well and skate with us. He said the Skippers were a little jittery, "Not nervous but in awe...we didn't play our game."

"It was a great season," said McNeill. "We realized how good we were once we beat Duxbury, 7-2. We had doubts about how good we were but the Duxbury win started us thinking about the tourney."

Senior co-captain Joe Becker said, "Franklin was very well prepared for what we could do. Their defensemen met our players at the blue line everytime."

"Bowen played unbelievable...I was surprised the score wasn't more like 6-1 or 7-1," he said. Except for the Scituate game, Becker said, Cohasset played well all season long. He said none of his teammates were disappointed with the Franklin loss. "We were glad to get as far as we did."

Coach Burnell said I'm not disappointed in losing because we lost to a very good team. "We gave it our best shot," he said.

The Skippers won the South Shore League title and finished the season 18-2-2 overall. Cohasset loses nine seniors to graduation and will have 14 players returning. Burnell thinks Cohasset can have another strong season next year, but it depends on how much the younger players develop over the spring, summer and fall.

Gymnastic show Friday

The Cohasset girls gymnastic team coached by Andrea Palardy will perform in their annual show on Friday, March 12 at 7 p.m. in the Sullivan gymnasium at Cohasset High School. With a perfect record of 10-0, the team, once again, clinched the South Shore League title. A small admission fee will be charged and refreshments will be available.

The Recreation Report ...

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations by phone for a Walking for Exercise and Fun Clinic for all aged residents.

The program by design, is ideal for the entire family and will begin on Sunday, April 18, at 1:30 p.m. The Town Hall parking lot will be the point of departure and return. Those who wish to park their car there may do so.

The format for the clinic is very basic; walking for most people, is a semi-strenuous form of exercise that has positive effects on the cardio-vascular system and fundamental body condition and tone. Also, certain and varying psychological and social aspects of a positive nature are evident as a secondary benefit with this form of exercise.

It is however, strongly suggested that any individual regardless of age, who may be in doubt as to his physical condition; be it hypertension, foot problems, back ailments, diabetes, or lack of recent exercise, etc. consult his physician before participating in the program. Others may wish to consult a physician as well, as most all forms of exercise have the potential to bring to the surface undetected, undiagnosed, or latent conditions that have been asymptomatic prior to an exercise regimen. The Walking Clinic will offer participants the opportunity to improve general conditioning in a relaxed, social atmosphere while affording the benefits of group exercise, ie: discipline, motivation, socialization, etc. The individual will only compete against himself, rather than others. Therefore, each participant may engage himself to individual limitations, slowly building stamina and endurance by setting his own pace and goals.

The program will meet each Sunday afternoon, at 1:30 p.m., Town Hall parking lot for eight consecutive weeks, weather conditions permitting.

The fee for the eight week program is $8, payable by check to the Town of Cohasset. A 50 percent discount will be offered to other children from the same family. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis for an extra $1 fee charge (ie: $9).

Cowens will conduct basketball clinic at CHS

Dave Cowens, former Celtic and National Basketball Association All-Star, is coming to Cohasset on March 14 at 2 p.m. Cowens will be conducting a basketball clinic in the Sullivan Gym at Cohasset High School and children of all ages are invited to attend and urged to bring their parents and cameras.

The event is being sponsored by the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and all proceeds will go the to promotion of amateur basketball at all levels in Cohasset. There will be a $1 donation taken at the gate. The clinic is expected to last between one and two hours and a concession stand will also be available.

Basketball players and their parents from communities surrounding Cohasset are also invited to attend and a large turnout is expected to cap the 1981-82 basketball year. Advance tickets are available from Larry Shultz at Deer Hill School or from any member of the Basketball Boosters Club.

Slumber

By Jeff Giles

Winds break over the forest of ice
Waves of laughter still in the void
The sleepers struggle-lost in their dream
To pass through walls of celluloid

Sounds dissolve in the colorless blaze
Souls in the frenzied rush
Watchtowers melt in the distance
The sentinel stands alone

And in the broken waters
That run below the land
Frozen jungles clutch at daylight

Faces writhe
In the light of the dawn
The sleepers awake — crying out loud
The campaigns of winter press on

Everything in Nature cointains all the powers of Nature.
Everything is made of one hidden stuff.

Silvia reports on Republican State Convention

By Richard J. Silvia

Roy Shamie, inventor and John Lakian, financial genius, won the Republican Party's endorsement for U.S. Senate and Governor Saturday at the Sheraton Boston.

They are both highly successful businessmen who have never run for office before.

Although they represent different generations, Shamie 60, and Lakian 39, there is a remarkable similarity in their message. Government can no longer stumble along with politicians who cannot properly manage the Commonwealth's resources in the best interest of its citizens. Their candidacies may represent a new trend toward successful business leaders offering their skills to fill the management void in the public sector.

Shamie swamped Pro-Lifer Dr. Mildred Jefferson 1,010 to 334. He's a confident and tough campaigner with a knack for quotable quotes.

"Ted Kennedy is FAKING IT IN MASSACHUSETTS," Shamie insisted. "What has Ted done besides dream about his coronation?"

John Lakian's hard fought first ballot victory over his three rivals was tempered by calls for party unity. He received strong support statewide including the South Shore.

The tally was: Lakian, 780; Robinson, 466; Card, 105 and Carbone, 29.

Rep. Leon Lombardie was a unanimous choice for Lt. Governor.

A 39-year-old Westwood businessman John R. Lakian once again demonstrated his tenacious ability to score a convincing victory in the other fellow's ballpark by outscoring Beacon Hill's best by an overwhelming 780 to 466 delegate votes.

Lakian grew up in a Worcester three-decker, attended public schools, then graduated from Boston University in three years. A Vietnam combat officer, he lives with vivid memories of his men and himself advancing under hostile fire in Asian rice paddies.

"I always wanted to know that my commander had been under fire as we were," he said.

He founded Fort Hill Investment Managment Corp., which rapidly grew to a multi-million dollar success.

A political novice, Lakian's unusual ability to organize and manage became evident at the 1980 GOP National Convention, where he caught the eye of many party regulars.

Responding to the experience issue in Boston Saturday, he emphasized, "Massachusetts should be run like a business in the interest of all of its citizens. Voters are frustrated with the extremes of bad government. The issue should be, have you ever balanced a budget, met a payroll or successfully managed other people's finances?" He emphasized, "A pro-business candidate can be compassionate, pro-woman and pro-education."

"I represent a new generation of Republicans ready to lead the Commonwealth into the later part of the 20th century with new ideas and vitality."

Seventeen-year Beacon Hill veteran and House Minority Leader Bill Robinson appealed for party support for his nomination emphasizing his years of dedicated service to the party.

"I supported 2½ when it was tough going. When you needed me I was there...climbing the ladder one rung at a time."

Bill Robinson is respected as a legislator and human being. How unsettling to stand in his shoes, looking over the bright TV lights and photographer's gadgets at so many old friends waving "LAKIAN" hats and posters."

The battle for delegates had been fought in every corner of the state for the last few months. Yet many delegates had not made their final decisions until they had shared opinions with friends and allies and digested the candidate's final pleas. After Lakian's impressive first ballot victory, it was evident that most undecided delegates had become supporters of John R. Lakian.

Bill Robinson must decide to either stay in the gubernatorial race, thus relinquishing his House seat, or file for re-election to the House by April 27.

Representative Andrew Cord, who ran Vice President Bush's successful campaign in Mass. has the same options but is committed to staying in the primary race. Andy won 105 delegate votes.

St. Patrick's motif at Historical Soc. dinner

By O. F. Ingram

The Cohasset Historical Society will add a St. Patrick's Day motif to its decor and menu for its March 16 dinner meeting that will feature a sound-slide show salute to the famed Hull Life Saving Service.

The dinner meeting, beginning at 6:30 p.m. and open to the public, will be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House. Tickets at $6 may be reserved by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr., at 383-0773 or Curator David Wadsworth at 383-6930.

Individual table decorations in the traditional green of St. Patrick's Day will be created by a ladies' committee of the Society and offered for sale at the end of the evening.

To complete the St. Patrick's eve flavor of the occasion, a home-cooked old-fashioned boiled dinner will be served by ladies of Dorothy Bradford Chapter, Eastern Star, under the direction of Mrs. Adele Hackett of Weymouth.

The feature of the evening will be the showing of "Shipwrecks, Savers & Survivors," a sound-slide film created by Anne Garrison of Cohasset and Renie Kramer of Marshfield as a project of the New England School of Photography on commission from Judith Wiers, chairman of the Hull Life Saving Museum.

Miss Garrison is the daughter of Frederick and Nancy Garrison of Cohasset and granddaughter of the late Mrs. Ralph Scripture, long-time Cohasset public official. The show premiered last August 1 as a major element of the U.S. Coast Guard's birthday celebration in Hull, and was acclaimed as a dramatic portrayal of the exploits of Hull surfboat crews, including those of the lengendary Captain Joshua James.

Selectmen accept Oliver flag

Mrs. Richard Oliver donated a flag in memory of her husband to the town which was accepted by selectmen at their meeting last Wednesday. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the flag will be flown on the Common.

Mariner

The wedding checklist ...

invitations ... flowers ... clothes ... music ... minister ... cake

The following is a timetable meant for the bride-to-be. The day after you decide to be married.

— Begin thinking about the important things. Has he met your family? Do they get along? If there's a problem in that getting along now, does it matter to you, because it probably won't be any different?

— Talk about what you expect from each other — like faithfulness, help with the housework, support through future schooling, etc.

— Talk about what sort of wedding fits your style — formal, semi-formal or quiet elopement. Also talk about how much money is available and whether you'd like to see it spent on the wedding, the honeymoon or your home.

— If you opt for a formal wedding at a plush place, make your reservation immediately. Some places are booked more than a year in advance. You may need to change your choice of date radically to fit into a tight planning schedule.

— If you're planning a religious ceremony, make sure your church or synagogue is available before you leave a deposit with the restaurant.

— Decide where you both prefer to live. Talk about what lifestyle you are comfortable with.

Four to six months before W Day:

— Choose your attendants, draw up the guest list and make sure you know how the bills will be paid.

— Choose your rings.

— Visit department stores to list your preferences on china and other assorted items you may be lucky enough to receive.

— Send your photograph and engagement announcement to the Mariner if you haven't already.

— Begin searching for the perfect wedding outfit. Select your attendants' dresses and colors so the rest of the wedding party can shop on their own.

— If you need to order major pieces of furniture, do it now. Upholstered furniture usually takes six months for delivery.

— Find a very good photographer whose samples you like and whose work you can afford. The pictures are the only part of the day you're going to have to show your children — unless you count each other.

— Hire an orchestra, if you've gone for the formal route. Make sure you have the necessary support people for any wedding plans — whether you want a magician at the reception to entertain the children, or a clown bearing balloons for the one you love, or a folk guitarist to change the sound of the ceremony.

— If you're writing a marriage contract or your own vows, this is the time.

— Think about whether you and your betrothed have ever had a serious argument. If you answer no, think some more about whether the two of you are being honest and realistic. If you answer yes, think about how you both react to extreme disagreement — did you say you'd call the whole thing off and then go along with the other person's way of doing things, holding your own thoughts in check. If that's you, think about pre-marriage counselling. It's much easier now to find out where the trouble spots are and try to work them out than to face a divorce later.

— Order the wedding invitations.

— Make sure you have reservations for your honeymoon and wedding night.

Two months before:

— Order the flowers.

— Start shopping for the extra clothes you'll need, if you haven't already.

— Make sure your parents have met. Make sure the mothers know about the wedding party colors and plan to blend with them.

— Select the wedding music.

— Arrange for the rehearsal and party.

— Choose a gift for your attendants.

— Make sure your clergyman has whatever he needs to perform the ceremony. Does he want you two to take a course of study? Does he need Baptismal certificates? Etc.

— Check on details for the license. (This is more complicated after the first time.)

One month ahead:

— Send out the invitations. (We know someone who forgot this step.)

— Order your wedding cake.

— If the napkins, favors and other paraphernalia of a reception are coming along with a package, make sure you know what you want and will have it.

— Will you need a special police officer?

— Will people from out-of-town need special accommodations?

— Write down everything as you receive it. This list is important as the gifts start to pile up.

— If you're showered, write thank you's right away.

— Make sure you have a place to live.

One week left:

— If you are not beginning to panic, you're probably not in touch with reality.

— Organize your clothes for the honeymoon.

— Make sure everything you want for the wedding day is on hand — like something old, something blue.

— See about having your hair done on wedding morning.

— If you're taking a car on your honeymoon, make sure it's serviced.

— Have a wonderful bridesmaids luncheon.

Two days:

— Pack for the honeymoon.

— Pack your going away clothes separately and arrange for them to be at the reception.

— Make sure you and your betrothed still like each other enough to go through with this. Don't let the momentum keep you from enjoying the minutes.

— Make out all the checks needed to get you through the wedding day.

— Have your rehearsal and enjoy the party.

The last minute:

— Have your hair done.

— Remember the rings.

— Try to relax and enjoy your day.

The meaning of an old tradition

The throwing of rice and old slippers should never be omitted, 19th century brides were advised. The custom is descended from antiquity, rice meaning fertility and plenty, while the old shoe is supposed to invoke the favor of the "fickle goddess of fortune."

When 'I do' meant forever

By Patricia Desmond

The world was a simpler place back in the days when saying "I do" meant forever.

He would be strong and provide.

She would be nuturing, self-sacrificing, the mother of unknown children, the caretaker of the home.

It was a world I grew up believing in. After all, Doris Day could manage. It was a world my friends accepted without doubt.

There were more young women in my graduating class at college who wore diamonds on their left hands than there were seniors with jobs lined up for the coming lifetime.

At one party sponsored by a department chairman toward the end of the year, one of the top students in the field, my friend, Doreen, was asked whether she'd be entering graduate school fulltime or be taking a few years to start her career.

"I'm getting the degree I want right after graduation," Doreen said, loud enough for most everyone at the party to hear.

"I'm getting an MRS."

Yes, those were the days. People believed in true love. Eternal love.

My friend Doreen is divorced now. So are many of the young women who grew up with the idealism, romanticism and promise of the 60's. So am I.

It doesn't mean the end of hope and love. It just means the end to silly dreams and great expectations that never had a prayer of materializing.

Marriage is still around. But fewer people slide into the institution with their eyes closed tightly by love. And that's a wonderful change.

A much younger friend of mine became engaged just last month. She doesn't look forward to her marriage as some sort of goal to be accomplished. She doesn't look to that day — in May of 1983 — with dreams of rose-covered cottages.

Therese is so much wiser than we were back in the 60's. I hope that saves her some of the pain.

Therese is not moving into a marriage from a college dormitory, though. She's been on her own for some time now.

She has her own career moving at all the speed that can be hoped in times of economic troubles. She's known her betrothed for five or six years.

"We still don't know each other very well," she confessed. "That's what this year is for. We're good at talking things out. We're going to find out more about each other. What he wants. What I want."

The basis of her love is more open to negotiation than to dreams.

I guess that's a sign of the times.

The idea of marriage means something more flexible to her and her young man. It's still the same basic package — a commitment based in love. It's just that the love is less blind.

Solemn vows mean forever to this special couple.

The big wedding bash is back

By Bucky Yardume

Word is the big wedding bash is back!

The bridal gown with a train longer than most still on rails. And veil. Veils! They date to the time the bridegroom didn't get to see what he was getting til it was too late. A full complement of maid or matron of honor, bridesmaids, ringbearer, flower girls, best man, ushers in ascots, pearl vests, cutaways, striped trousers, gloves, top hats, even spats. The white carpet treatment!

'Pre-game' warmups like bridal showers, bachelor dinners and dress rehearsals.

THE main event with full pomp and ceremony, organ pealing, a soloist warbling, 'Oh, Promise Me,' the setting looking like the Flower Show. And weeping mothers, Dads are of sterner stuff. Either that, or they're in absolute shock at the prospect of the bill.

The vows are some different. It would be rather unrealistic to pledge troths 'til death do part in view of the marriage merry-go-round these days. The soloist might better render 'Change Partners.'

One part of the ritual always was scarey—"If anyone here objects let him now speak or forever hold his peace." At least it is when the bride's old man keeps muttering, "What does she see in that bum?" And the bridegroom's mother keeps hissing, "What does he see in that empty headed little twit?" Some hold their peace through the rites but make up for lost time thereafter.

Then, the apres-spree in some fashionable establishment, fountain bubbling bubbly, orchestra lilting, cameras flashing, a full-course sit-down dinner, open bar.

They're cred'ting the trend to the gala Prince Charles-Lady Diana nuptials. That was fine for them. Both sides of the aisle are loaded.

In view of the general economy, though, timing for a return to the big splash is, to say the least, incongruous. To put it another way, yikes!

Tradition places most of the fiscal burden for festivities squarely on parents of the bride. If mom isn't already back to work, she will be. The custom dates to days of dowries, as often in the form of goats, sheep, camels, horses, cattle, or donkeys as hard cash.

There was something to be said for the practice. Not much, but something. After all, it did provide the newlyweds with some wherewithal to subsist. An army isn't the only thing that travels on its stomach. Sometimes, the bridal bartering worked in reverse. To get himself a bride who was a 10, a young buck might have to shell out plenty. On the other hand, the pop with a daughter at 2 on the scale had to offer a camel caravan as bait for you swains.

Marriages weren't made in heaven, either, but by the families, sometimes with the assistance of a matchmaker. Man, what a responsibility! Now they let the kids make their own mistakes. Statistically, there's some question who's better at it.

For the bride's parents to have to foot the lion's share of the tab, though, is patently unfair. An even split would seem more equitable.

Except for those born with silver spoons in their mouths, young couples never have had it that cushy starting out. But the log cabin and south 40 was easier come by than the traditional rose-covered cottage these days, even with second mortgage and other fiscal gimmickry that put you in hock longer than anticipated life spans. Downpayments look like what you used to pay for the whole house. Or a young couple finds an apartment and bang! The joint's converted into a 'luxury' condo right out from under the connugial couch.

Nevertheless, most couples and their parents opt for the event rather than taking the hard cash and splitting. The theory is you only go the route once so go for the gusto. That was the theory, anyhow.

Careful planning down to the most minute details is universally recommended.

That precludes the bridegroom's winding up like that chap in the TV commercial perusing his hotel bill in sticker shock and asking the haughty desk clerk, "17 for pancakes?"

Speaking of the 'moon,' time was the wedding trip traditionally was to Niagara Falls. Now it's anywhere from the Caribbean to Europe. Who needs the Love Canal?

All the planning in the world won't guarantee a hitch here and there.

Take an occasion when at the height of the solemnity as the good vicar was about to begin uniting bride and bridegroom, the hushed whisper of the best man was heard clearly in the hush as he advised the elderly pastor, "Sir, your fly is unzipped."

It's times like that when you find out if you have it all together.

Without marriage

Reflections of a 20th century newspaper: "After a man has got to a certain age without getting married the women say of him that he has a dead love in his heart. If it is a woman, they say it is because she never had a chance...Every woman who has a parrot that swears and a hired man that chews and drinks, has just so much less use for a husband."

Before the vows — critical issues should be faced

During the winter months, many couples plan the details of their June weddings and arrange for caterers, musicians and photographers, but a leading Boston-area psychotherapist cautions that most couples tend to ignore important psychological factors.

"Despite public awareness of the difficulty of achieving a good marriage, and despite escalating divorce statistics, the average couple still tends to focus on relatively trivial issues instead of facing up to such critical issues as fidelity, children, illness, drinking habits, changes in the family, money matters, and defined areas of responsibility," says Eileen M. Salame, MSW, senior therapist and director of group therapy for Boston-based Family Counseling and Guidance Centers.

"Even with the passage of time," says Salame, who has counseled couples for more than twenty years, "couples still emphasize romance and fun and hate to face up to the 'practical' considerations that make marriages work. Engaged people who spend most of their time disco dancing seldom sit down to share their deep-seated fears and feelings or discuss what kind of parents they plan to be and how they intend to resolve any differences of opinion."

Salame says she tells young couples to observe carefully how their intended spouse "does business" with friends and relatives. Since compromise in marriage is not always possible, she says "the art of negotiation" can become very important, and she cautions that too much giving-in can boomerang.

"Marital difficulties are similar to traffic problems," she says. "At a busy intersection with no traffic signal, people who exercise patience and take turns find it easier to get to their destinations. The same is true of marriage partners with different interests."

As for love, she feels that people who think love happens out of the blue are apt to confuse love with sexual infatuation and not think about the work that goes with any deep relationship. "A better approach to love," she says, "is to think of it as a way of life in which the well-being of another person is at least as important to you as your own well-being. With that as a base, the 'work' enters as a basic reality."

Key factors in the challenge of coexisting in harmony, she explains, "are the willingness to see another person as he really is; being aware of the differences in personalities and the flaws that will probably always be there, and being able to work towards improvement and change while knowing that it will never be complete. That's what compatibility means."

On the subject of change, Salame says, "Many people think they can change a partner after marriage, but most people change very little. Mark Twain summed it up when he said you couldn't throw habit out the upstairs window, you had to coax it down the stairs one step at a time."

She would like to see better training on marriage at the high school level to help young people face up to the "practical" realities that can make marriages work. "If individuals looking for partners took the same approach employers do when hiring new people...observation, testing, references, training... many ill-fated marriages could be avoided."

For many, she feels that pre-marital counseling is advisable to help people talk out their problems and think things out, using the counselor as a sounding board. "Counselors don't tell people what to do," she says. "They help people come to know themselves better."

Family Counseling and Guidance Centers, Inc. provides individual and group counseling and serves the Boston metropolitan area from locations in Boston, Braintree, Danvers, Framingham and Marshfield.

Privacy was a stick

A courting stick — a hollow reed reaching as far as eight feet — was demurely offered courting couples in colonial days in the name of privacy. While the rest of the family was gathered in the kitchen (the warmest room in the house), the couple could whisper to each other through the hollow reed, while the rest of the family went about its activities.

What to do when the honeymoon tan fades

It happens to all brides. When your Bermuda tan has faded, wedding gifts unpacked and curtains are up, you know the party's over and it's your turn to entertain. After being the guest of honor at all those parties before your wedding, with a sinking heart you realize the bride and groom are due to give their first party. Not to panic, for even if you have never done more than boil water, you can turn out a perfectly acceptable dinner with the aid of packaged foods, a simple cookbook and a little imagination. While dinner is bubbling and baking away in the kitchen, a hostess who has planned ahead, can relax with her guests for an hour or so before eating. Wine or cocktails can be enjoyed with this

CHIPPED BEEF DIP

2 T heavy cream
1 8 oz. pkg. of cream cheese
1 8 oz. pkg. of chopped chipped beef
1 T horseradish
1 medium onion, finely chopped
Dash of Worcestershire sauce

Soften cheese and add cream, onion, horseradish and sauce. Mix well. Shape into balls and roll in chopped chipped beef. NOTE: Beef may be added to cheese with other ingredients and balls rolled in chopped nuts or parsley. Wrap in saran wrap and chill until ready to serve with crackers.

If you're like most young brides today, you're a working wife and that leaves precious little time to clean the house, see that the silver is polished, dishes shiny clean, to plan a centerpiece and cook as well. However, armed with a basic cookbook such as "Fanny Farmer's," or "Joy of Cooking," some advice from the corner butcher and a peek at the supermarket's frozen foods display, you can turn out a delicious meal. A carefully seasoned steak or roast is easy to prepare and is substantial, as well as simple to prepare. If you want to experiment, try a fancy dessert such as Cathy Perea's

CRANBERRY CREAM FREEZE

2/3 c. graham cracker crumbs (can be purchased already crushed and boxed in supermarket)
2 T sugar
4 T butter or margarine, melted
1 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1/4 c. sugar
1 pt. vanilla ice cream
1 16 oz. can whole cranberry sauce

Combine crumbs, sugar and margarine. Pres into bottom of 8" springform pan. Beat together cheese and the remaining 1/4 c. sugar till fluffy. Beat in ice cream, a heaping tablespoon at a time. (Let ice cream soften in refrigerator while preparing crust.) Pour over crust. Stir cranberry sauce and drop by spoonfuls onto ice cream mixture. Cover, freeze about four hours. Serves 8.

Another good idea for your dinner party is to go all-out on decorations, for even the simplest meal will be more appealing if served on your best china, with a centerpiece of flowers. Fresh flowers are expensive at this time of year, so a plant in a decorative basket, or an arrangement of silk flowers last longer and are colorful. Candlelight does wonders and just before you light them, add an oil and vinegar dressing and toss this

SPINACH AND ORANGE SALAD

1 bag spinach, washed and broken into pieces
2 cans Mandarin oranges, drained
Sliced red onion

Toss spinach, oranges and onions and add dressing. Serves six.

An important thing to keep in mind when planning your party is to seek foods that can be prepared ahead of time, stored in the refrigerator or freezer and warmed that evening, if for instance, you have made a casserole the previous weekend. If you should decide to serve steak, you could bake potatoes while you serve drinks and the chipped beef dip, toss the salad and transfer the cranberry cream dessert to the refrigerator while the steak broils and plug in the coffeepot. Light the candles and, voila! your first dinner party is underway. May it be the first of many!

Stubborn Dutch girl starts a tradition

The bride-to-be who is showered with gifts before her marriage owes a debt of gratitude to a stubborn little Dutch girl. According to legend, her father refused her a dowry because she insisted on marrying a miller, her true love, rather than the farmer he had chosen for her. The miller won her hand and they lost the dowry. But their friends, seeing their plight, sought to make up for the dowry with what became the first bridal shower. They gathered and rained china, linen, pots and household goods on the young couple.

A second marriage takes courage

By Edna O'Brien Talbert

It takes a lot of "guts" to consider a second marriage.

What happens when that knight in shining armor becomes tarnished and rusty and you wake up one day sitting in Probate Court seeking a divorce? The very last thing on your mind is remarriage. In fact, just the thought of it would probably have most of us handing ourselves over to the men in the little white coats and being committed.

Today, five years later and speaking as a formerly married, presently single parent who is currently engaged to be married, there are times when I still question my own sanity. You see, a divorce is a shattering thing. It took years to rebuild by self-image, my life, my children's lives, and my career into where I was comfortable with myself, could handle my own life and finally felt as though I could make it alone.

Having faced the hot water heaters bursting, grabbing all the kids in the middle of the night and throwing them in a car so I could drive to the emergency room to have one of them sewn back together, handled the finances, and made all the decisions, made me realize how independent I had become.

Marriage the second time is going into a commitment with your eyes open.

Then, along comes a special someone, in my case, Don Weaver, who showed me the things that were missing in my life. I had been working so hard to keep things together that I had forgotten what it was like to have someone to share with, to communicate with, to care about and to care for me.

Marriage the first time is walking into a relationship blind. You don't know what you are getting into and have no idea of what lies ahead. Marriage the second time is going into a commitment with your eyes wide open, not to mention carrying along a lot of fear from your past.

The problems that face a second marriage are numerous, or you can look at the opposite side of the coin; the rewards of a second marriage are plentiful. It comes down to weighing one side against the other and making a choice.

With children on the bride's side and children on the groom's side, you can look at your prospective family as either a handful, or the big family you've always wanted. (Just think of the fun at holiday time and on camping trips.) For us, we feel like the "Brady Bunch" whenever we go some place. A simple excursion to McDonald's can take some adjusting — instead of coming out with a dainty little paper bag, you return to the car with a shopping bag full of "Big Mac's." Quite a change, especially if one of you has been living alone!

Another thought is the independence you've gained — are you going to have to give it up or can it be incorporated into this new marriage? This is a difficult thing for there are few role models to follow. Most of us were brought up with a father who worked outside the home and a mother who worked in the home. What do we do with two professionals, both of whom need a "wife"? We have discussed this and decided it is important for him to retain his masculinity and me to retain my feminity and for us to share in the work load and share in the fun. Now, will this be easy? I don't think so, but with the key word, communication, I think two families and two independent people can meld into a unit.

The next thing on the "list" is finances. He has some, you have some, how do you go about combining it when you've been touched by a divorce? Something that has recently come about is a Pre-Nuptial Agreement. To us it seems like sound advice. This enables us to fulfill our responsibilities to children from our previous marriages and then go into this marriage saying "I choose you" and separate our past from our future.

Where to live? Oh, this list does go on — his house, your house, or a new house? Ideally, a new house would be great. In today's economy, perhaps, either his or your's and do a little remodeling to make it "ours."

Another thing to consider that has major consequences is children — his children, your children. How do his feel about sharing their father? How do your's feel about a "new daddy" coming to live with them? How do all the children feel about the new sibling order that will come about with this marriage? Don and I feel extraordinarily fortunate in this respect. We've taken our time, done a lot of things together as a "family" and yet, perhaps, most important, we've also done things alone — he with his children, me with mine; he with mine, me with his.

We feel it's important to continue having one on one time with each child and one on one time with each other after we are married. This way they will not become resentful and not have to "share" their respective parent 100 percent of the time. For us, one on one time together will be our "soul" time, time for building our life together.

In coming together as a family it is important to let each child know they are wanted, loved and a part of this new family, that they are very special and that this is their home. My six year old made a statement that probably sums it up very well. She said, "I'm going to have two daddies, one that lives with me and one that I visit."

Once it's talked about and worked out, worries over taking such a big step seem to fade and then the fun begins. We've spent many hours planning our wedding, including the children not only in the planning, but also as part of the plans. This has given us all a good feeling. This will be our day, done our way, and the beginning of "our" life.

The decision to remarry does not come easy. Panic has set in at times, unsure feelings, old fears, but in talking out those thoughts and opening the closet door to let all the spooks out into the daylight, we have made our choice. Communication is probably the word that keeps ringing throughout — we talk and talk. Instead of pushing things away, we take them out into the open and look at them.

Don and I have taken much time to work on all these doubts and fears and have made a conscious choice in saying to each other "I choose you."

And if you had it to do over again ... how would you?

By Lois Martin

Ah, the Wedding, the inviolate ceremony forever entrusted to or encrusted in a couple's scrapbook, to be whipped out in future years of shared nostalgia...and warm laughter.

We are no different from other cultures in placing enormous importance on the joining of a man and woman ostensibly for a lifelong partnership. Since our society allows that bond to be a voluntary one, there's excitement, joy, nervousness, expense and tradition.

But if you had it to do over, would you repeat the manner in which you married? Most people who were asked this question said they would do it about the same way. There's a chance that the timeless ceremony of the marriage service/reception/going away outfit/honeymoon is meaningful still. For each person and couple it is special. There's no indication people want to give up feeling, looking and spending special on a wedding day.

Nancy and Jim Wilson of Marshfield married "young," some would say. They'd been "going together" (don't miss any of the traditional fun phrases that have transisted a bit throughout the last generation) for several years before they married in 1957. She was 19 and he was 21. They had a big wedding in the church. Nancy said the plans went awry early, "disaster." The ceremony was delayed 45 minutes. The priest couldn't find the records. But given the gladsome mishaps of those exciting moments, she'd still do it the same way...white roses, two bridesmaids and a maid of honor, the same people and the big reception at what is now the Chateau de Ville.

They drove to Florida for the honeymoon, using money they'd both earned for the unforgettable time. This year their daughter, Susan Kelly, will be marrying...in a church, with a reception...wearing her mother's wedding gown.

Receptions, too, start to sound the same whether you're talking with someone who married 25 years ago this summer or someone who's planning to marry this year. There's the band, the bar, the buffet..."Evergreen" is now competing with "I Love You Truly," but the import is the same.

THE ANTITHESIS

Not all marriages are made in heaven or remembered fondly (and one could suspect this isn't the first place that's been brought to light).

One man said he went to the Waldorf Cafeteria and had a cheeseburger with his bride. That was on Gloucester Street in Boston, not too far away from the Justice of the Peace who married them for $20. If he had it to do all over, would he do it the same way? "No...," he said. "I wouldn't have married her."

There are those cases where women wish they'd had a quieter wedding instead of the splashier one. One woman said she and her intended both planned to have one attendant until the parents said, 'wait a minute.' Her mother and father reminded them the invitation read "Mr. and Mrs...request" so the wedding was to be of their type of choice, they said. The resulting marriage was one with two maids of honor, bridesmaids, junior bridesmaids, ring bearers, full retinue of ushers, but seemingly no regrets. This couple was married in the south. She said down there the reception is in the church parlor, if you will, no bar either opened or closed, a more formal affair, not lacking in joy but not one to be confused with any sort of "bash!"

Another marriage of 25 years standing belongs to an Idyl Wilde Circle couple. They met at the University of Vermont. She asked him to a sorority dance and they sat next to one another in English Lit. A marvelous 1950s type movie and marriage beginning.

They had a large wedding, the long trail on the silk gown. And her daughter will wear that when she's ready for the altar. Because her husband had failed to make reservations, their honeymoon beginning was accommodated in a $5 motel room. So if she had it to do over, she'd make sure there were reservations. Gifts back then sometimes included money for a honeymoon. (Indeed, the family's role in the traditional weddings then and now is major. Nothing has diminished the importance of the cousin with the guest book, the mother of the bride's dress, the uncle from California who's flying in. Our families want weddings to be a big deal. It makes everyone feel better, a conclusion of a childhood, the beginning of a new family. More branches on the family tree.

WITHOUT THE PERFECTION

And there are the jokes, aimed at one's self by long ago brides who don't hold guns at their heads anymore because parenthood threatened to encroach on newlywed territory. Realistically, without endorsing or defining immorality, people today might even admit that young people have been known to live together before marriage. That which was unmentionable save in whispers which preceded hearty laughs, is today met sometimes with philosophical shrugs of shoulders.

Nonetheless candor is surprising and so it was when a woman said she'd been married twice, and wouldn't care to repeat the shotgun one, in 1946. A family wedding, of a smaller size with a local pastor was actually a pleasant event, she said. No honeymoon since he had to go to work the next day. Fifteen years later, she completed (gentler than divorce) that marriage, "got recycled" and now has been married another 15 years to a man with whom she went to school long before the two of them were married to other people.

She'd do it the same way if she had it to do over, the second one. It was a small wedding for which she chose a blue and lace dress that seemed just right for the special day. She was never one for big weddings, anyway.

Another couple, married nearly 10 years, might have a little different reception if that were possible. The trip to Canada "was gross" with a room in the little shack during a Canadien holiday. But the next night they found a great place in a college roommate's townhouse. She was 21. And he got the flu on the way home, so she drove back.

Not all honeymoons are of fairytale, storybook quality. One man, asked if he'd do it the same way again, said, "No, I'd drive more carefully. I got in an accident on my wedding day. But I wouldn't change the church. I wouldn't swap the relatives or the friends who celebrated the day."

He says he thinks he might have married young at 22. But he wouldn't have done anything differently. "I prefer to be young to raise my family. I'm better able to take it in stride..."

Interspersed among the years of long white trains, disconsolate fathers of the bride, stag parties and out of town guests have been less traditional means of marriage. On the beach, in airplanes, in boats, with self-scribed ceremonies as the bride and bridegroom burst into song.

But for the most part, when couples reflect on these traditions about how they started marriage, they find little or no fault in it.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove.
O no. It is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken.
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come.
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

The importance of the reception

By Joan Pinkham

How to celebrate the happiest of life's little celebrations is only the first of many decisions the bride and groom will face.

Once you've set the date and reserved the church, the reception and all it entails is waiting to be planned.

Perhaps you feel a home reception will be warmer and friendlier — less expensive, too. This, too, will require a lot of planning and more lists, especially if you're not having it catered. If you are preparing the refreshments, you can decide on the menu well in advance and include foods that can be made ahead and frozen.

We asked Bette Sieverts, wedding coordinator at the Marshfield Country Club, how to go about planning a reception. Unlike the usual bride-to-be, Mrs. Sieverts is familiar with every facet of the preparations, having been a function manager in Atlanta, Georgia and associated with the Country Club since 1978. Having her at one's side can be very reassuring.

It sometimes comes as a shock to the bridal couple to find that the spot they've chosen for their reception was booked for that particular date by someone else long ago. June, July, September and October are the busiest wedding months and if you have in mind a well-known place such as Hugo's, the Bridgwaye, Casa Berrini, or the Barnside, a year in advance is not unheard of for making a reservation for the reception.

It's also difficult to book some bands at a late date, so if you want your guests to dance at your wedding, music should be given top priority. It's a good idea to hear the group of your choice when they are playing another engagement before deciding to sign a contract with them.

Mrs. Sieverts tells us that the usual sequence of events following a call to a function site such as the Country Club is a first meeting between the manager, the bride's parents and the bridal couple. They would discuss the basics, such as the date of the reception and costs, before setting up a meeting with the coordinator.

"No one wedding is ever the same. There are many choices to be made," Mrs. Sieverts says. "I don't push anyone into decisions. It's their day and it's my job to reassure the wedding couple and iron out all the details prior to the ceremony."

As with any first undertaking, important details can easily be overlooked. Floral arrangements for the church and reception must also include those for parents of the couple, attendants and special relatives such as a favorite aunt or grandmother. A good florist can make daisies or mums look just as attractive as costlier orchids or gardenias. Choose flowers that are in season and if it's that time of year, flowering shrubs from the garden are appropriate.

A wedding coordinator can be of help in arranging transportation to the reception, seating the guests while the photographer is taking formal portraits, arranging the receiving line and other preliminary details such as going over the wedding couple's needs with the orchestra in introducing the bridal party. The cake-cutting ceremony, the couples' first dance together, where and when to change for their leavetaking, all require timing and attention to details if the reception is to be enjoyable for all.

A second meeting with the coordinator is scheduled closer to the actual wedding date. At that time, table decorations are planned, seating arrangements discussed and the head table is given special attention. Nothing is left to chance and details such as the receiving line are gone over together. Some couples dispense with the ritual of a lengthy receiving line at the reception, feeling that an hour or so takes away from the time the musicians could be providing music for dancing. For this reason, some coordinators suggest having the receiving line at the church immediately following the wedding ceremony.

Your wedding day reflects your lifestyle and whether your budget is large or small, attention to each little detail and leaving nothing to chance, will result in a memorable occasion for all.

A memorable beginning for a new life together

By Mike Berger

The Wedding Day leads off with Super Groom madly dashing out of car of Dependable I (one of two best men) and sprinting into the church behind a group of people.

He tried to elude the glimpse of the nine bridesmaids and Beautiful Bride who had pulled up to the church just moments before.

His father remarks, "We have a slight problem. One of the ushers (Super Groom's brother - Forgetful) forgot his tuxedo jacket and instead wore an overcoat. He noticed it just as he got inside the church. He left 15 minutes ago and has to go to Needham."

It was 5:05 p.m., 25 minutes from wedding bells. Needham is 30 minutes from Stoughton and an hour - round trip. Super Groom figures it will be 5:50 p.m. when Forgetful arrives.

On one hand he is relieved that his lateness doesn't matter. On the other hand he knows Beautiful Bride will probably throw a fit when she finds out Super Groom's brother forgot his tuxedo jacket.

Super Groom chuckles a bit. He can picture his oldest brother screaming and yelling at Forgetful "How could you do such a stupid thing?"

Super Groom and the priest had instructed all of his brothers to arrive at the church 45 minutes before the ceremony. It was a good thing.

His oldest brother whom we will call "Prompt" always scolded his brothers if they were late or made stupid decisions or careless actions.

Super Groom and the priest walk to his office and find the rabbi awaiting, with pen in hand, waiting for Super Groom to sign on the dotted line for the wedding certificate. Super Groom is not worried about signing his life away, but keeping the rabbi waiting because he must travel back to New Hampshire after the ceremony.

Super Groom unloads his bag of goodies which includes Manischewicz wine, the glass, a handkerchief, and checks for the priest and rabbi. He relaxes a minute.

Dependable I and II from France arrive, all dressed and looking good. Somehow Dependable II from France had helped Dependable I get dressed (fix his tie and suspenders). Both looked handsome especially Dependable I who looked better than O.J. Simpson who runs out of airports these days.

Dependable II from France keeps asking Super Groom "Are you nervous? There's nothing to be nervous about. Are you sure you want to go through with it?"

Super Groom gazes out of the window at the setting sun. He wonders if he should make one last trip to the bathroom, because there will be no time for that later.

It is now 5:35 p.m. and Super Groom wonders if all is well with Forgetful. He either got lost, is on his way to Providence, R.I. like last night or is battling Rte. 128 traffic.

He's glad Forgetful had borrowed his brother Prompt's Toyota instead of driving his broken down 1969 Volkswagon.

Super Groom chuckles, wouldn't it be great for Toyota to make a commercial using Forgetful driving like mad to get to the wedding? Super Groom hopes the state police will not charge his brother with speeding. That's all he needs.

At 5:45 p.m. Forgetful pulls into the lot and Super Groom hears a resounding, "He's here" from the ushers and bridesmaids. Super Groom is all charged up now. He's ready to open the door when Dependable II says, "Just relax. Father Tom will come and get us when everyone's ready. You will have all these years to be with your wife."

Suddenly, a knock is heard. Super Groom opens the door and who should he see but Beautiful Bride (just a glimpse but enough to ruin the tradition.)

"Always Working," Beautiful Bride's matron of honor had knocked on the door as a joke. Super Groom sees Beautiful Bride's smiling face and veil and hides his face. She is so beautiful he doesn't want to spoil the rest of the tradition.

The organ begins and so does the procession. Super Groom says quietly to himself, "It's time. Don't be nervous. You're all right. The suspenders are fine. The ascot tie is in its right place."

The church is crowded, packed solid. The procession begins. Super Groom is first to walk in from the side entrance. He feels 1,000 eyes on him. He sees an old friend from Gardner and begins smiling. He is happy.

All of the ushers and bridesmaids begin walking. Some are happy, some are somber. Some have no expressions. Super Groom tries to convey through eye contact, "Thank you to each one."

Soon it is time to see Beautiful Bride and her father whom we will call, "Dignity" walking together. Beautiful Bride is indeed Beautiful.

From "The Prophet"
By Kahlil Gibran

Then Almitra spoke again and said, And what of Marriage, master?

And he answered saying:

You were born together, and together you shall be forevermore.

You shall be together when the white wings of death scatter your days.

Ay, you shall be together even in the silent memory of God.

But let there be spaces in your togetherness,

And let the winds of the heavens dance between you.

Love one another, but make not a bond of love:

Let it rather be a moving sea between the shores of your souls.

Fill each other's cup but drink not from one cup.

Give one another of your bread but eat not from the same loaf.

Sing and dance together and be joyous, but let each one of you be alone,

Even as the strings of a lute are alone though they quiver with the same music.

CHS wins ten year accreditation

The high school will be accredited for another 10 years, if a committee report is accepted as written for the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

That's the maximum accreditation allowed under the system and much more than anyone in the school system had hoped.

The actual vote on the accreditation comes in May. But the committee report, prepared by people who actually visited the school, is almost always accepted.

No other high school in the area whose accreditation has been reviewed recently has won the 10-year seal of approval. In fact people have been saying the five years is the maximum time allowed since the advent of Proposition 2½.

The high school, under Principal Richard Streeter, spent 12 months in self-evaluation, getting ready for the experience. Last October a team from the association came to the school and did their own study. It's the report of those educators that recommends the 10-year accreditation.

New proposal coming

Competition increases for trash

Another trash company — MacDonald Brothers — wants to work with the town to dispose of Cohasset trash.

The board of health, selectmen, capital outlay committee, disposal area study committee and a slew of other officials, are scheduled to meet with the new owners of the Cohasset Heights landfill at 8 p.m. tonight (March 17) at town hall.

The new owners, Barry Bros., gave the town a proposal just before the abortive attempt to deal with the question of the landfill at special town meeting last month.

The board of health, which is primarily responsible for decisions on trash in the town, still has a long list of unanswered questions about the proposal. Some of those questions that have been answered pose additional problems for the town.

Among the questions answered that raise difficulty for the town are the hours of operation if the town contracts with Barry Bros. as a depository for rubbish, the disposal of municipal trash, the disposal of special waste like the dredgings from the Harbor scheduled for next summer, and the traffic flow problems that appear to be involved in the current proposal to use the Cedar Street landfill as a transfer station.

The board of health went over the answers received so far from Barry Bros. at the regular meeting Monday night in the health office.

It was at that meeting that the three members decided to schedule another special meeting to hear from Elaine Kidwell of MacDonald Brothers on a second proposal for trash disposal.

The special meeting will be scheduled sometime before the annual town meeting Saturday, April 4.

Marilyn Sweeney, board member, said McDonald Brothers felt the capping process at Cedar Street could be extended over three or four years.

Dr. C. Michael Bliss, chairman, said MacDonald Brothers should be asked to submit a written proposal right away.

The board hopes the special meeting to go over the alternative to Cohasset Heights might be held next Monday night but the timing depends on the contractor.

Meanwhile Bliss said that in talking to John Barry he got the impression the company considered it was doing the town a favor in accepting Cohasset trash.

Figures for the Barry Bros. proposal involve the number of trips needed to haul away the transfer station trash, plus rental fees, plus a per cubic ton charge.

The overall cost to the town is still a matter of conjecture — estimates peg it at somewhere in the $90,000 a year range.

The company has also given the town a plan for curbside trash pick up at a cost of $166,000 a year.

A straw vote of the people who did show up for the special town meeting indicated they favored plans to do work the state wants done at Cedar Street to keep that landfill open. The vote came after predictions in-

The water treatment plant works

All the water on this planet has been there since the beginning of time.

It's just the quality has been deteriorating ever since man took his first bath in a river.

That's the way Mike Taylor begins his explanation of the operation of the Cohasset Water Treatment Plant.

The plant sits with its wide, picture windows on the banks of Lily Pond. Not too far away, a reservoir feeds the pond.

The water in Lily Pond cannot be drunk as it is.

If you filled a clear glass with it, you wouldn't think of drinking it anyway. The water has a brownish color and some sediment.

What the treatment plant is there for is to purify the pond waters.

The operation of the treatment plant begins with intake pumps sucking the water of Lily Pond into the purification building.

It seems like a ritual ceremony.

The water — looking quite dark and dirty — begins shedding problems in a rapid mix tank. There the raw pond water is sloshed about with chemicals. The idea is the particles will coagulate out.

Added to Cohasset water is chlorine to kill bacteria, lime to sweeten it, fluoride to fight tooth decay, and aluminum sulfate to force out impurities.

In other communities chlorine can be replaced by hydrogen peroxide or ultraviolet light treatment. Anyway, the ingredients in Cohasset water come in stages through the treatment process.

Step two is a flock tank, as it's called. Flock happens to be those little particles you can see in water sitting in a pond. The movement in a flock tank

This Pee Wee is now a Bruin

By Donna Cogliano

The little boy, who skated for the Pee Wee's of the youth hockey program at Cohasset Winter Garden in the 1960's has found home ice in the Boston Garden for the 1980's.

Mike O'Connell, defense man for the Boston Bruins, is living out his boyhood dream and playing for the team he watched faithfully on television as a youngster.

The 26-year-old Bruin's star grew up in Cohasset and lives in Scituate with his wife, Rosemary, formerly Rosemary Evans, of Cohasset.

Life with a pro hockey player...page 18

Mike makes no reservations about his greatest moment in hockey. The biggest thrill of his hockey career was being traded to Boston from the Chicago Black Hawks on December 18, 1980. "It's something I've always dreamed of," said Mike. "It's awfully nice to be back in Boston and play in front of the people that I care for."

Mike vividly remembers his early Christmas present of 1980. He and Rosemary had just finished putting up the Christmas tree when the Black Hawks general manager telephoned — "Mike, we've just traded you to Boston," he said.

"I had no idea I was going to be traded, but that's how this game is," said Mike. The Bruins acquired O'Connell in exchange for Al Secord. About six months later, the Bruins signed O'Connell to a new multi-year contract as he was about to head into his option year.

While most Bruins players live on the North Shore, the O'Connells have settled into a home on Border Street in North Scituate.

"Both of us being from this area, we naturally came back to the South Shore," said Rosemary, "This was home to us."

During their five years of marriage, Rosemary described the moves as a little hectic, "But at the time, you just do what you have to do...you're kind of at the mercy of the team and where ever they want to send you."

"For so many years we had just our personal belongings and the moves weren't too hard on us," said Rosemary. However, the O'Connells had recently purchased furniture and a condominium in Chicago just before the trade. You never know what to expect said Rosemary, "and whatever they decide — you have to move instantly. There's usually no warning. If they call us up tonight and say Mike has been traded, we'd have to go tomorrow."

Mike commented on this year's Bruins season, "I think we're doing all right. We are top four in the National Hockey League. We had a strong spell,

Cohasset's week ...

League to study warrant

On Thursday, March 25, at 9:30 a.m., at the Unitarian Parish House, the Cohasset League of Women Voters will study the Warrant for this year's Town Meeting. Specific articles will be examined and discussed. The public is urged to attend. Child care is available.

Meet your candidates

On Tuesday, March 30, at 7:30 p.m., at the Town Hall, Specific Warrant articles will be reviewed and each candidate running for public office will speak. There will be time set aside for questions. Voters Guide available at the door. The League urges everyone to come out and get acquainted with the candidates running for town election.

Fire chief hearing

The Chairman of the Fire Chief Search Committee, John Thompson, issued a reminder this week that the committee will hold a public hearing at 8 p.m. on Thursday, March 18, at the Cohasset Town Hall.

The committee expects to receive comments from residents on the qualifications and characteristics which should be used in screening candidates for the position of Fire Chief.

The committee will start the screening process shortly after the public hearing. The members of the committee are Edward Dillon, Jr., F. Roy Fitzsimmons, Cordelia Foell, Donald Steele and John Thompson.

Selectman okay warrant

The warrant for town meeting on Saturday, April 3 was reviewed and signed by selectmen last Wednesday. The 46-article warrant calls for appropriations of more than $7.5 million and for some policy changes in town boards and agencies.

Dump review Wednesday

Various town boards will meet with Barry Brothers tonight (Wednesday) at town hall, 8 p.m. to discuss the dump. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur will represent selectmen, who will hold their regularly scheduled meeting tonight.

New beach stickers

Selectmen authorized Police Chief John DeBassio, last week, to look for smaller, pressure laminated beach stickers for the town.

DeBassio was concerned about safety regarding the large size of last year's sticker which was placed in the rear window of vehicles. He said the biggest complaint from residents was that the sticker didn't stay on.

Selectmen briefly discussed the possibility of using a bumper sticker but decided stickers, on the outside, could be removed.

Stickers for the beach, dump, and Government Island will be color coded — three different bright colors. This year's smaller stickers are expected to stick better.

Used water equipment

Ben Curley, superintendent of the water department, informed selectmen last week of several surplus pieces of equipment.

If other town departments have no interest in the surplus pumps and motors, selectmen will advertise and offer the equipment for sale.

Goverment Island bids

Selectmen opened 12 bid proposals for the Government Island Pier project last Wednesday. The board gave the proposals to Charles Fink, chairman of the Harbor Study Committee, for review and recommendations by that committee.

Young swimmers excel

Jennifer Jackson and Christopher Henderson recently competed at the 8-years-old and under U.S. swimming championships among 40 teams of New England participants.

The swim meet was held February 27 and 28 at Attleboro High School. There were 84 girls and 72 boys in the competition.

Jackson, an 8-year-old of 9 Woodland Drive, placed sixth overall. She finished better than seventh place in all eight events. She placed third in the 50-yard freestyle and fourth in the 25-yard freestyle and butterfly.

Henderson, an 8-year-old of 10 Jerusalem Road bettered all his times by several seconds and won the heat ribbon in the 100-yard individual medley.

Henderson and Jackson are second and third graders, respectively, at the Osgood School.

Recreation registration

Registration for classes Tuesday, 10 to 11 a.m., and Thursday, 7 to 8 p.m. for aerobic exercise are still being accepted at the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The program is eight weeks and the fee is $10 for one session, and $18 for both.

Instructors for adult tennis, dog obedience and golf lessons will be needed for spring and summer employment. If you are interested and have prior teaching experience as well as knowledge in the specific area, please call the Recreation office at 383-6792.

Other Programs

New sessions for skating lessons, guitar lessons, and hand caning have recently begun. Classes will be re-registered again in the near future. Please watch for registration notices in local news media.

Cloney to start Cohasset road race

Will Cloney, director of the BAA Marathon, will start the annual Cohasset Rotary Roadrace-by-the-Sea, April 4. The race marks the season's first for the New England Athletic Conference and is being held two weeks prior to the Boston Marathon.

The 6.2 mile race course covers Cohasset's picturesque Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Ave., both well known for their seaside view and magnificent homes.

More than 250 runners, from as far away as Pennsylvania and New Jersey, have registered thus far for this annual event, which will be limited to 800 runners. Applications will be accepted until March 27 with a fee of $5, mailed to Cohasset Rotary Race, P.O. Box 69, Cohasset, MA 02025.

CHS accreditation

The report also calls for the school system to provide the association with two and four year reports dealing specifically with the recommendations, released earlier this year, by the team.

The school committee is already addressing one of the recommendations by authorizing $1,000 for faculty members to write a new curriculum for the Grade 9 Humanities program.

Copies of the report are available to the public at the Office of the Principal, Superintendent's Office and the Paul Pratt Library.

Streeter believes that the action by the Association reflects the dedicated efforts of the teachers and staff, the confidence and backing from the Superintendent and School Committee and the willingness of the community to support its school system.

Rotary Club takes over road race

The Sixth Annual Cohasset Road Race By-The-Sea will come to you courtesy of the Cohasset Rotary and the Runnery Club.

If you remember, last year the race was brought to town by the Jaycees.

Anyway it begins at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 4 in Cohasset Village where hundreds are expected to gather both to run and watch.

The race continues for 10 kilometers, 6.2 miles to the non-racers, and ends back at the starting point by town hall.

Three people can constitute a team for the team trophy category. Classes include separate categories for men and women under 18, from 18 to 39 and over.

The first 800 pre-registrants will receive a race T-shirt for their $5 entry fee. Pre-registration closes March 27. Application forms are available all over Cohasset or call 826-3636.

Check in times for those failing to pre-register are April 3 from 9 to 11 a.m. and the day of the race from 4:10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset Town Hall.

The race is sanctioned by the NEAC.

Breeding parakeets at home

It's a story that began in Zayres about two years ago.

Not an exciting beginning, we'll grant you.

Two regular looking parakeets were bought back then.

The human interest angle here is that they were given lots of love.

Lynn Malloy happens to be the sort of a person who can make birds thrive. That's what she did with the parakeets who happened to be named Tom and Jerry. (Is that a joke?)

Jerry, who has green feathers, began laying eggs about five months ago. Most parakeet owners, we are told, wouldn't have given their birds enough affection to get to that point. For the birds need much more care to thrive than a department store salesperson ever mentions.

Lynn, being a bride herself, took the egg laying quite seriously. She studied books on how to breed parakeets.

The books say the bird must have something called a nesting box. You can't buy it at a discount department store even if you're willing to pay the undiscounted price.

The purpose of the nesting box is to keep the eggs safe, secure.

Lynn enlisted the help of her father, Ted Lovell, who worked with her to build the special box.

In the box Jerry would keep her eggs safely away from Tom.

And so the situation continued for a while. There were the usual complications and most of the eggs failed to hatch.

But just about a month and a half ago, a miracle occurred. One of the tiny eggs hatched.

The baby, who by now can fly about the Malloys' apartment, is named Peepers. The baby is yellow, which brings up an interesting point. His father is blue and his mother, green.

So how do baby parakeets get their color?

We don't know why with parents named Tom and Jerry, he wasn't named Tweety Bird, but perhaps there will be further additions to the family — a tweety may be along.

Now friends of the Malloys are waiting quizically, wondering whether the two cockatoos will be mating.

The Mariner wants to congratulate Lynn and Bob Malloy on their success.

Trash competition...

dicated costs of doing that versus using Barry Bros. would be about the same.

The operation of the private dump will be from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekdays and 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays. There would be no Sunday dumping.

Bliss pointed out to the board that if the proposal were accepted those would be the only hours the town transfer station could be open without risking worse problems.

"If the bins are filled and there's no way of getting them picked up, how can we tell someone he can't drop his stuff at the dump?" Bliss asked.

Barbara Kern, board member, pointed out that with the bins only three cars at a time could line up and dump. There would be two bins rented by the town. Thus six cars could dump at a time.

But the board wants to know whether the bin rental fee would mean that the two was entitled to have two bins at the transfer station constantly.

If the town were only assigned two bins for its money, it would mean there would be times when the operation would move at a snails pace.

Right now six to eight cars can dump at once and there are long lines on weekends.

Commercial trash would have to be taken directly to the private dump. Commercial haulers would be charged $3.50 a cubic yard.

Although large items, leaves and other residential sorts of trash would be allowed, there are still some questions about a few special articles that the plan seems to exclude.

The idea of tonight's meeting is to resolve some of the questions and problems.

Hockey & basketball league playoffs

Both the street hockey and basketball leagues will begin their respective playoffs next week ending the season in which over 400 youth participated. Many thanks should go to the volunteers who coached in both leagues, donating their valuable time and expertise. Volunteers for the two programs numbered over 45, consisting of both adults and high school students. Neither program would have been possible if it were not for the volunteers.

Special thanks should go to Robert Beggan, coordinator for the street hockey program, Larry Shultz, and Peter Chapman, coordinators for the basketball leagues.

Moderator, selectmen worried over paltry crowds at town meeting

Town officials met with selectmen last Wednesday searching for ways to boost attendance at town meetings.

Town Moderator Bill Weeks brought the topic to the attention of selectmen, in a letter, earlier this month which sparked the agenda item on publicizing town meetings.

Weeks said, "I've presided over two special town meeting sessions, both aborted for lack of quorum. I think we have a very serious situation."

"I think it's helpful to meet with your board (selectmen) and other town officials...to get this issue out on the table to improve attendance for annual town meeting and meetings thereafter," he said.

"Other surrounding towns seem to face similar problems, but not to the extent of ours," Weeks said.

Weeks suggested that a banner announcing the meeting be strung over Main Street where the Red Cross publicizes their blood drives. Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie questioned what effect the banner would have on attendance and whether it would be worth $400-$800.

Sewer Commissioner Janet Daggett said the problem is not informing people of the town meeting date — everyone knows when and where it will be held. Townspeople need to be made aware of the consequences of not going to town meetings, she said.

"We assume that the rest of the town knows the consequences of not going to town meeting. Sometimes we lose sight of people's lack of understanding," she said.

Daggett suggested that a formal press release to explain the consequences of not reaching a quorum be sent out by selectmen or the town accountant prior to town meeting.

Jean Cotton, Advisory Board chairman, said the press release could be attached to town meeting warrant.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said, "I think we may need an educational program. I think it's possible that there are many residents of this town who don't understand our form of town government."

School committee chairman Irene Brown said there could be an educational program in the schools where children could learn about town meeting — then they could go home and shame their parents into attending. "We do something like that in our no-smoking campaign," she said.

Perhaps alerting town organizations and groups, such as the churches, would help to improve attendance, said Weeks. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said people need that final push — police cruisers could drive around town broadcasting a reminder on loud speakers.

Discussion also focused on scheduling town meetings for week nights but officials eventually agreed that many residents arrive home from work late and that Saturday is a better time. Weeks asked if the fire horn could be sounded, as in the past, to alert townspeople, of a lack of quorum.

Town Clerk Charles Marks recommended that a bylaw be established to reduce the required 200-quorum for continued meetings.

"The problem of getting enough people really only comes when meetings are held over," said Marks. He suggested that the 200-quorum requirement be reduced to 100 because, "You can usually keep 150 people involved."

Town Accountant William Signorelli said participation is the real problem. "Requiring fewer people to participate doesn't solve this," he said.

Daggett said the town should not move in any direction to reduce the already low participation.

Signorelli said apathy has developed over the past seven or eight years and we have not been able to start meetings on time. "I remember when we had 800 people at a meeting, he said.

"Less than 10 of the people are making the decisions for this town," said Signorelli. As each meeting progresses, voter attendance dwindles. Officials agreed that reaching a 200 quorum is one problem while keeping 200 people, for the entire meeting, is another obstacle.

Ideas seemed endless for improving town meeting attendance as town officials shared their proposals at the selectmen's regularly scheduled meeting.

According to Police Chief John DeBassio, Scout leader Arthur Lehr has been searching for project ideas for his troops. DeBassio said the Boy Scouts and other groups could conduct a telephone campaign asking voters for a commitment to attend town meeting.

McArthur suggested that a plaque be awarded by selectmen to the winner of the proposed high school essay contest — "Why my parents should attend town meeting."

According to Marks, ten years ago, about 15 percent of Cohasset residents came to town meeting. In 1980, only 6.2 percent of the voters attended town meetings.

Officials agreed to find someone to write a concise brief on the importance of town meetings and how voters can participate in them. The note would be attached to town warrant if possible. McArthur was named to coordinate the task.

'Keep seniors in the budget'

The mailboxes of the Massachusetts congressional delegation will be filling up with Social Security checks, but the legislators will be asked to read the checks before they try to cash them.

An estimated 30,000 simulated Social Security checks will be mailed to Washington, D.C. by Massachusetts elders as part of a "Keep Seniors in the Budget" campaign coordinated by more than three dozen agencies and community groups across the Commonwealth. The checks are actually postcards that seniors are sending with notes on the back urging their senators and congressmen to reject further cuts in programs for the aging.

"You can call this a 'check-in'," explained Eileen Kirby, executive director of South Shore Home Care Services, one of the groups supporting the campaign. "The elderly can use these checks to speak directly with their elected officials regarding a wide range of programs that are supposed to be part of the 'safety net.' The check says right on it that it is non-negotiable," said Ms. Kirby. "Necessary services should be non-negotiable, too. Thousands of elderly people across the state are asking for no more cuts."

Organizers of the 'check-in' campaign point out that they are trying to draw congressional attention to the current 1982 federal budget, which is operating on a continuing resolution that expires on March 31. "Before congress takes apart the administration's 1983 budget," Kirby explained, "we hope they will first look at what was done in 1982 and restore some of the cuts in aging programs." Why use a Social Security check to make the point? "What better symbol is there of the elderly population's insecurity and opposition to the dismantling of their support system," said Kirby. "Many elderly people feel like their programs are being nickeled and dimed. A little more on the Medicare deductible, a higher rent payment, less fuel aid, lowered food stamps, less for transportation. It all mounts up and creates social insecurity."

"We hope money talks," added Kirby. "The Massachusetts delegation has been good to its elderly. We hope these checks will give them the message — no more cuts."

Murray pleased with kick-off brunch

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray R-Cohasset announced her plans for re-election at a Kick-off Brunch, Sunday, March 14.

The affair at the South Shore Country Club was overflowing with her many friends and Murray supporters when she spoke of her decision to seek a fourth term on Beacon Hill.

"I want to thank all present for your support, my family and I deeply appreciate your friendship and all your efforts on my behalf," she also thanked the thousands who have voted for her and those who worked on her campaigns who could not be with them at the brunch.

"I have enjoyed serving the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull and intend to continue serving the concerns of my people. I feel as I have always said, and hope I have proven, that the purpose of politics is to help people. Today I am announcing my candidacy for my fourth term in the State Legislature and I'm asking for the energies and support of the people in the 3rd Plymouth District," she said.

She has served on the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, Committee on Local Affairs and the Committee on Counties.

In between her work and studies, Cheryl also finds the time to take pilot lessons and, last weekend, she soloed for the first time. Looks like Cheryl has the ability to "fly high" with or without a plane.

☐Judging from the number of joggers along the town roads of late, John Tirrell should have a lot of interest in his new Runners Club. The first meeting will be on Monday, March 22 at 8 p.m. at his shop, Village Sports at 9 Depot Court. There will be no fee for joining the club and John is planning some interesting meetings which will include films, clinics, fun runs and information for runners. He's also hoping for ideas from those who attend the first meeting.

☐There'll be an added incentive for the April 4 Roadrace by the Sea which is being sponsored this year by the Cohasset Rotary.

John Tirrell of Village Sports will donate a 10 speed Univega bicycle. Anyone who finishes the race will be eligible to have their number drawn for the bike.

John is also planning a special display window in his shop to highlight many of the different aspects of the race which is fast becoming a very enjoyable tradition.

☐Did you know that National Procrastination Week came and went and no one seemed to take much notice. There really should have been some notice in this column but I kept putting it off and putting it off...

In fact the week would have gone by completely unnoticed if it hadn't been for Barbara Conte's invaluable bulletin board at the Deer Hill School. Barbara, the school's secretary, says she really enjoys collecting information on little known events from almanacs, science journals and other different sources. Judging from the number of people reading the results of her research, her work is well appreciated.

Sweeney will run despite missing filing

Marilyn R. Sweeney, board of health member, will be working for reelection despite the fact her name won't appear on the ballot of the Saturday, April 10, election.

Sweeney said she will be issuing a prepared statement later on but that she missed the deadline for filing her nomination papers inadvertently.

She said that in her three years on the board most of the goals she set for herself have been accomplished.

"But the landfill still isn't resolved," she commented Monday night after the first of three meetings the board of health had scheduled for this week.

The deadline passed last week without any papers being filed for the one, three-year opening on the board of health.

The election promises little debate with only 18 candidates for 16 jobs.

The only decisions on the ballot will be in the positions on the boards of selectmen, school committee and housing authority.

The candidates are:

Selectmen: Incumbent Rocco F. Laugelle will face James W. Lagrotteria, advisory committee vice chairman.

Young voters respond to LWV

A very successful voter registration assembly sponsored by the Cohasset Chapter of the League of Women Voters was held at Cohasset High School on Tuesday, March 9.

During the assembly 52 new voters were added to the local voter lists.

With Edward F. Sheehan, Chairman of the Cohasset High School Social Studies Department serving as master of ceremonies, two town officials and two officers of the League of Women Voters participated in the informative assembly.

Deidre Kulevich, representing the Cohasset Town Counsel, spoke to the assembled 18-year-old students on the legal ramifications of their age group. She stressed new federal and state laws involving the property rights and various professional and occupational rights of 18 year olds.

"Take your right to vote seriously," asserted Chartis Langmaid, Co-President of the League of Women Voters. In her brief talk, Mrs. Langmaid reminded the Juniors and Seniors that in Latin American countries "at this very moment, voting rights are denied all peoples." She remarked that "it is a great privilege to be able to vote in free elections today."

Carol Martin, the Voters Services Representative of the League of Women Voters, urged the 18 year olds to register and to see to it that they use their new privilege. Also present was Patricia Murphy, a member of the Communications Council of the League.

Town Clerk Charles Marks then explained the registration process. Assisted by Mr. Sheehan and members of the League he registered and swore in over 50 new voters. In his closing comments to the new voters he congratulated them and added that "You are by far the largest number of Cohasset students to register in a group."

Brown replies to critics

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to reply in print to Martha Gjesteby's letter of March 8, 1982 which was published in your paper. On February 24, the School Committee voted 4-1, with Mrs. Gjesteby in opposition, to send a letter requesting the Board of Selectmen to consider adjourning the April Town Meeting to May in order to leave more time for receipt of certification of the Town re-evaluation. The last sentence in that letter said that if the Board of Selectmen wanted to discuss the Committee's request, or wanted any further information, that the Committee would be glad to meet with them.

In a telephone conversation with Mr. Arthur Clark on Tuesday, March 2nd, I offered to come to the Selectmen's meeting on Wednesday the 3rd — when they would read the letter — to answer questions and to discuss the Committee's position. As Chairman of the Committee I considered this to be my responsibility — to be as courteous as possible to another Town board. Again, as Chairman, I invited Mrs. Kornet, the Secretary of the School Committee, to accompany me. No vote of the School Committee is necessary for the Chairman to represent the Committee at any public meeting or function. It seems doubtful to me that any comments from Mrs. Gjesteby on this occasion would have been relevant since she opposed the original motion.

Since by law, and by the rules of all Massachusetts School Committees, a School Committee reflects the majority vote of its membership, and its positions are presented in public forums by its Chairman, or delegated spokesman, then it would seem that Mrs. Gjesteby's questions are merely election rhetoric.

Cohasset School Committee

Editorials

Drugs and alcohol

Next week a drug and alcohol policy goes to the school committee. The meeting begins at 8 p.m., at the junior/senior high school.

We agreed with the committee back last summer when members talked about going slow on a policy so serious. And we had quite a few concerns about the draft that was available for public review.

It read like the start of a small police state at the high school. Locker and body searches just somehow seem out of keeping in a vibrant educational garden.

But then that's taking the line out of context and there is reason to get tough on the issue of drugs and alcohol in the schools.

We hope the school committee plans to go over the whole thing line by line, analyzing its meaning, making sure every word says exactly what they think it should.

Last September the school system implemented the beginnings of a curriculum that addresses the problems of drugs and alcohol. That is commendable for everyone involved from the parents who talked about it to the school committee members who voted it through.

The year before the school system hired its first educator specifically charged with dealing with the problem — that's Michael Gill. That too is laudable.

And now it is time to put some direction from above into the whole issue.

The question is: Will Cohasset deal with problems of drugs and alcohol as symptoms or as the disease? Will students who are known to use or more important, rely on either drugs or alcohol be punished with the idea that keeping them out of school will solve the problem?

Or will they be referred to sources of treatment?

Police intervention doesn't necessarily mean the path chosen is the one without needed treatment. The district attorney's office has a special program set up for juveniles designed to do just that. But referrrals from Cohasset have been scarce.

Perhaps that has been due to the absence of a school committee policy on the issue.

Well that vacuum will soon be filled.

We are told that the policy, as worked on by a committee of citizens, is totally different from the draft that came out last summer. That early draft was just a starting place, according to school officials.

We want to commend the school committee for dealing with so sensitive and important a problem.

The Conway congressional campaign

By Patricia Desmond

A wall in Jack Conway's new office holds one picture after another of the Congressional candidate posing with other politicians.

The pictures go back for years. Back even before the Conway-Carlin tax cap effort, back before he became involved with Citizens Against Casino Gambling, back before he took the presidency of the Plymouth County Development Council.

The pictures show Conway and the President. Conway and Gov. Ed King. Conway and so many others. There's a thank you from Joe Moakley, a note from Fr. Robert Drinan, other Democrats are on the wall, so are other Republicans.

Conway's views, which he compares to much of what the Reagan administration stands for, are to the right of those featured here and there.

Conway's attitude is that to be effective you have to work with people whose views differ from your own.

He points to a picture of Ed King. Conway is right there, center camera.

"Studds doesn't know that man," he says. He didn't mean the two had never met. What he meant was the two men don't work together despite the identical D that follows their names.

Conway has ben moderating political events on the South Shore for years now. He was master of ceremonies at a rally for Reagan in Cohasset long before the President's campaign had built up steam.

The only issue that seems to find Gerry Studds and Conway in agreement is about the configuration of the district — now called the 10th Congressional. Studds has three separate offices for the South Shore, the Cape and New Bedford. Conway plans to have three compaign headquarters in those same places.

On the issue of the Coast Guard budget, the men share a measure of agreement. Both believe the budget needs more money. Studds has been attacking Reagan over the issue.

Conway says the Coast Guard is poorly served by Studds, who is chairman of the subcommittee on the Coast Guard and Navigation.

He talks about the increased work the Coast Guard faces — 70 percent more due to its assignment to stop drug traffic off the coast. Yet at a time when the Army and Navy are being built up there is no build up for the Coast Guard.

He quotes Studds on national news saying he's had it with Washington. He calls that statement a self-fulfilling prophecy.

"The business community here doesn't even know him," Conway goes on. "Except for a breakfast before the South Shore Chamber now and then, he's been invisible."

The differences between the two men begin with basic philosophy and go from there. Studds would have no argument with being seen to the left of Conway's position. Conway would have no quarrel at being pegged to the right of Studds.

Conway thinks the Congressman should be a leader in solving the problems of the district. Studds works hard at responding to the requests of constituents.

Conway already had his campaign moving toward the date next fall. He has office space on the third floor of the Columbia Building in Scituate Harbor. The first floor of the building holds the Conway real estate office.

Since deciding to get into the race, Conway has turned the running of the business over to his partner, John Reardon.

But he still holds a position of authority in the local business community. Afterall he's a long time success story as a businessman.

Conway hasn't always been a Republican. He grew up in Democratic politics in Jamaica Plain. He moved to Scituate long ago, more recently he moved to Cohasset. Over the years his views became different from the Democratic Pary line.

He says he doesn't believe problems are solved by throwing money at them. The way to solve social problems is through a strong economy.

"The answer isn't millions of dollars in local aid to cure the problems of Massachusetts and the district. It's good jobs in manufacturing, science, the tourist industry and fishing."

To Conway the role of Congressmen is one of a facilitator. He sees the Congressman looking at all the needs of the district, assessing the situation and coming up with a solution.

The cure to the economy, as Conway sees it, won't come with a single edged solution. The first step is the reduction of the interest rate.

He pointed out that the interest rate early in March was 17.25 percent "one of the highest ever, exceeded only by a rate in 1981 of 19.16 percent."

He says what everybody knows, that the high rate makes it impossible for first time buyers in the housing market.

"There are 44 million war babies out there," he says. "They can't afford the things they expected to get out of life."

The main cause for the skyrocketted interest rate is government borrowing, according to Conway.

Government borrows, at whatever rate necessary, to balance the deficit budgets. Government's borrowing leaves less money available for private sector borrowing and increases the interest rate.

"Government continues to soak up the credit," he says. "Not much is left over for the private sector and what there is is paid for dearly."

It's at this level that Conway's thinking differs from Reagonomics. He doesn't think the President can control the economy, cut taxes and increase spending for defense.

But in general, Conway's view of politics seems to coincide with the President.

Conway points out that in the Presidential election, Reagan carried the district. He expects to do as much.

He says that as Congressman he would keep after local issues like the long awaited grant for a sewer treatment plant in Cohasset, the railroad service to businesses in the Hanover area that Conrail is about to abandon, ship contracts for Fore River in Quincy, and the like.

He has been active in recent years in local political issues.

But his first step into serious politics came in 1978 when he began working on the Conway-Carlin tax cap. That, as you probably remember, was a non-binding referendum on the state election ballot. The idea of the tax cap was favored overwhelmingly. The legislature ignored the vote.

"That was the predessessor of Proposition 2½," Conway says. "The idea was let's put a lid on it. In this state then 18 percent of personal income was going for state and local taxes.

"The idea was let's not let that go any higher. The legislature walked out on a responsibility. Our work set the stage for Proposition 2½."

He adds that he doesn't think 2½ is the right

Drama Club to hold tryouts for 'Strange bedfellows'

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club announces the holding of tryouts for its spring productions, "Strange Bedfellows," a comedy by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements.

The play was first performed at the Morosco Theater in New York on Jan. 14, 1948; it is a comedy in three acts, set in San Francisco in 1896, and it promises to be fun for performers and audiences alike. Performance dates are set for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 23, 24, and 25, at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Tryouts for this production will be held at the Town Hall on Sunday, March 21 at 4 p.m. and again on Wednesday, March 24 at 7:30 p.m. A large cast, 15 characters, is called for, and described briefly, as follows:

Clarissa Blynn Cromwell: (late 20's) Charming, poised, women's suffrage leader. Very much in love with —

Matthew Cromwell: (mid-30's) the Senator's son, full of vitality, a modern Petruchi Western, but well educated.

Julia Cromwell: (60ish) Matthew's mother; the Senator's wife. A salty person, who came across to join her husband in Pioneer days, and has never quite lost that pioneer quality. Under the exterior of the conventional dowager, she is both crisp and tender.

Senator Cromwell: (60-70) A lovable old fellow under a blustering exterior. He never hides his opinions, but trumpets them to the world as eternal truths.

Addie Cromwell Hampton: (40ish) An optionally plump, but definitely pretty, and rather fluttery person. Matthew's older sister, daughter of Julia and the Senator, and married to —

Gifford Hampton: (45ish) one of those charming, but rather useless, Englishmen, who married into rich San Francisco families in the 1890's. An oddly lovable character, never entirely sober, but never really drunk. He and Addie have two children —

Lillian Hampton: (15) pretty, not the tomboy type of today, but able to do quite nicely using her feminine wiles.

Nicky Hampton: (10) A typical, normal boy of the period.

Vincent Pemberton (16-17) from a good San Francisco family; has nice manners and is much under Lillian's thumb.

Mrs. Sparker: (55ish) The manager of a Barbery Coast establishment, who looks most respectable in the daytime.

Mrs. Gimble and Mrs. Worley: (40-70) Members of the anti-Suffrage League. Mrs. Gimble is the somewhat acid wife of a minister. Mrs. Worley is plump, foolish, a little deaf and easily flustered.

Mayor Tibbett: (50-60) a pompous little Napoleon. Dapper and fond of the ladies.

Beulah: A middle-aged maid. Not played for comedy, perfectly natural.

Ling: A typical Chinese servant of about 55 or 60. Speaks with an accent, but not pigeon English.

These are the characters who populate "Strange Bedfellows." Anyone wanting to try out for a role in this highly entertaining show is invited to attend one or both of the tryouts, March 21 and March 24. All are welcome to come to the Town Hall on these days. Scripts are available at the Cohasset Public Library.

Respite care limited but possible

Respite Care is a service to family members with developmental disabilities. It is funded by the Department of Mental Health to provide families with temporary care either in their home or out of their home for short periods of time. Respite providers are paid, trained individuals who work with other professionals in providing these respite services.

Respite Care can be provided for a few hours a day, a full day, or an overnight. In order to provide some relief to as many families as possible, a limited number of respite services can be offered per year to each family. Providers' responsibilities range from babysitting to teaching individuals with special needs self-care skills geared toward independence. The type of service offered depends upon the individual's particular needs. Both children and adults are eligible to receive respite services. A respite provider might go shopping and to a movie with one individual, and teach another how to button a shirt. Another provider might feed, bathe, and put an individual to bed. Every respite service is different, every individual is different, and needs vary greatly. Provider responsibilities are therefore defined on an individual basis.

There are limitations upon the amount of respite a family can receive and upon geographic location, due to the funding source. Currently, we can serve families in Braintree, Weymouth, Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, and Norwell. New respite providers are always needed, particularly as the service becomes more well-known and used. It offers an excellent opportunity for gaining experience and extra money, while providing useful, challenging work.

Conway...

answer either — but he voted for it.

When he worked on the signature drive needed to put the tax cap petition on the ballot, Conway began working with the task of organizing.

"Every Monday morning at 7 o'clock, we'd have a meeting in Boston to go over legislative questions and strategy briefings. It would be over at half past 10. We'd talk about where we weren't getting enough signatures.

"Then we'd send out the kids. They were a great bunch. They were the backbone of the organization. They called them Conway's army — about 30 kids from Marshfield, Hanover, Rockland, Scituate, Cohasset and the South Shore.

"They'd go out in beachwagons to Pittsfield, Lawrence, Lowell, Boston, Roxbury, whereever we needed them.

"If it weren't for those kids the question never would have gotten on the ballot. They made the difference."

In his latest venture into politics, Conway is still at the starting gate. But he's already making use of the philosophy of volunteer involvement.

While he talked in his office in the group of rooms that hold the heartbeat of his campaign, a group of volunteers worked in a nearby room trying to get out a mailing. The group that was working right then was small, perhaps eight women all together.

But already that day 26 volunteers had given some time to the effort and it was just a little after noon.

Legislators against gambling to meet in Boston

Carol Oteri, of Hull, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., is busy preparing for the March 25 meeting of LANCE (Legislators Against New Casino Establishments).

Legislators and leaders of anti-casino grass roots organizations from the six New England states, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania have been invited to attend the 1 p.m. session at Gardner Auditorium in the State House, Boston.

Oteri and Vice-President Fred Moran are C.A.C.G.'s representatives to the group which was organized in Albany last December to provide a regional strike force against casinos. Moran is also chairman of Voices Not Vices of Adams, Mass., the original foes of casino gambling in the Commonwealth.

LANCE's vice-chairman, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) is the official legislative host from Massachusetts for its second meeting.

Featured speaker is Sidney Radner of the Springfield area, formerly with the F.B.I., who is credited with having the largest research library about casino gambling and related topics.

Citing the encouragement C.A.C.G. received at its formation from Concerned Citizens About Casino Gambling of Newport, R.I., and the information provided by C.A.C.G. to a newly formed anti-casino group in Salem, N.H., Oteri explained the importance of cooperation between groups beyond state borders. She said, "The casino promoters are constantly telling Massachusetts to embrace casinos before New Hampshire or New York, etc. do. Then they rearrange the order of the state names and say the same thing somewhere else. I am here to tell you that none of these states want casinos and the supposed competition among them for the dubious honor of being the first to legalize casinos is only a casino promoter's pipe dream."

Oteri touched on her group's contacts in Illinois and Florida, where casinos are also being hotly debated. She commented, "A town south of Chicago recently voted casinos down after receiving a packet of our research material." Oteri is scheduled to meet with the Governor's Anti-Casino Task Force in Florida in April.

Others expected to participate in the LANCE program are its officers, Chairman, Sen. Steven A. Casey, also chairman of Connecticut's Public Safety Committee; Secretary, William F. Passannante, Speaker Pro-Tempore of the New York Assembly; Vice-Chairman, Sen. Frank J. O'Connell of Pennsylvania. Others active in LANCE are Sen. Jerard F. Conley (ME), Sen. Frank Padavan (NY), Sen. Walter Kavanaugh (NJ), Assemblyman John B. Sheffer, II (NY), Rep. Jeffrey J. Teitz (RI), Rep. Christopher Boyle (RI), and Rep. Theresa Feeley, (VT).

Merit Award winners

Competition for the monthly Library Merit Award continues to be keen at the Deerhill School. Classes earn merits during their weekly library visits by completing lessons in library skills.

For a while during the past few months, the sixth grade looked unbeatable. Mr. Becker's sixth grade won the December award and Mrs. Whitley's sixth grade was the January winner. Both classes won themselves a half hour recess as a prize.

In February the fourth grade finally broke the sixth grade winning streak. The large gold Merit Award Medallion now hangs above the door of Mrs. Last's fourth grade. The fourth graders out scored the older children in a variety of activities ranging from listening skills to using reference materials. Congratulations are in order for all the winners. Watch this space for next month's winner.

Lottery and Las Vegas bill hearing

Bills regarding Las Vegas Nights and the State Lottery were heard in committee last week.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, appeared before the committee on several of these bills. Rep. Murray co-sponsored two lottery bills and filed one regarding cutbacks on lottery expenses, advocating the money be returned to cities and towns and the elderly.

The increase of 25 cents for the purchase of a lottery ticket in the Commonwealth would not prove a hardship for those people who purchase the tickets.

People who are over 65 years of age and recipients of Social Security benefits, one who has been declared totally disabled by the Social Security Administration, plus a five-year residence and a certification that he or she will remain a permanent resident in Massachusetts will benefit from the lottery ticket increase with H-354.

"The elderly should be assisted in any way we can make available to them. They have worked, paid their bills, and supported school taxes which educated our children as well as their own. Today's economy has worked hardships on the senior citizens and this legislation could help them a little.

"Advertising the lottery has disturbed many of my constituents. They feel, and I agree, that the advertising costs should be cut. The additional savings could be returned to the cities and towns.

"Lottery advertisements are constantly heard and seen in all of the media. The state should not be involved in promoting and encouraging gambling. This is another factor which disturbs many people in the Commonwealth.

"To increase local aid, we have cut back on the number of state employees as well as in many other areas. Savings on advertising lottery tickets would be beneficial to the state government budget as well as the budgets of the cities and towns.

"Both bills are designed to return more monies to cities and towns. This bill calls for a decrease in the operation costs of the lottery, as well as a decrease in prize winnings."

Rep. Murray wrote to Attorney General Francis Bellotti in April of 1981 calling for an investigation of Las Vegas Nights in the Worcester area and other sections of the state.

"More strict regulations are necessary to prevent present illegal operations of Las Vegas Nights. Non-profit organizations are not receiving the monies under so-called fund raisers in certain areas of our state. The groups in my district such as Little League, other youth activities, bands and other civic groups must be protected against equipment owners who skim the money at these events. I support such bills which will correct the discrepancies. I realize lack of law enforcement has allowed supper clubs and lounges to get away with the illegal Las Vegas Nights in Worcester County," said Rep. Murray.

AFS seeking Cohasset homes for students

The Cohasset Chapter of AFS, an international, intercultural exchange program, is seeking families to host foreign students for the coming school year.

Each visiting student is between the ages of 16 and 19 and lives as a member of a family, while attending classes at Cohasset High School. Cohasset hopes to host two students this year.

A major quality desired in a host family is an openness to new ideas. Although many host families have children of high school age, families with young children or no children are eligible to host and are encouraged to apply.

Host families are not asked to make special expenditures for their AFS student, but they do pay food costs and incidental expenses which they would for any child. Host families may take a monthly tax deduction fo $50 in accordance with provisions made by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service. AFS extends medical coverage to its students and a monthly allowance.

The candidates who apply for a year stay in the U.S. are carefully screened through their own national offices and the international headquarters of AFS located in New York City. There are currently 3,241 students from 55 nations living and studying in American communities across the country.

Families interested in participating in the AFS experience can find out more about the program at a meeting to be held Tuesday, March 23, at 8 p.m. at the home of Jane Goedecke, 374 Atlantic Ave. For more information, call Jane at 383-6935, or Barbara Spooner, 383-0347.

Panaghia Greek Orthodox anniversary

The parishioners of the Panaghia Greek Orthodox in Cohasset would like to extend a special invitation to all their friends from the surrounding communities and to their Orthodox brethren to come and join them on Sunday, April 4, to celebrate the first anniversary of the dedication of their church.

His Eminence, Anthimos, Bishop of New England will be on hand to perform the divine Liturgy. He will also be an honored guest at a luncheon at the famed Golden Rooster Restaurant on Border Street, Scituate, which follows the services at 1 p.m.

Faye Papadopoulous of Scituate, chairman for the day's events is very enthusiastic about the affair. "Oh, it is going to be wonderful. The whole thing is the inspiration of the restaurant's owners, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Zervas. Do you know that they are donating everything, from appetizers to dessert? They want every penny of the proceeds to go to a special fund to pay the church's mortgage. This is the second year that they are doing this for us. Their generosity is simply overwhelming."

There are a limited number of tickets available for a donation of $25 per person. For further information call 545-3670 after 6 p.m.

So. Shore Home Services ready to help

Are you 60 years old or older? Do you live alone? Have you found that you hate to cook for just one person?

Has the high cost of taxes, rent, electricity, heat or telephone got you and your spouse down? Do you feel that you are just not eating adequately anymore because of the high cost of food?

Have you recently been discharged from the hospital or do you have a physical condition that makes food shopping and preparation of meals a chore?

If your answer to any of these questions is yes, it might be that the South Shore Home Care Services Title III-C Nutrition Project can help. This federally funded, five-day-a-week hot lunch program is now operating at eight sites on the South Shore. In Scituate at the Congregational Church's Rice Hall, 381 Country Way, for senior citizens from throughout that town and Norwell and Cohasset.

While any person aged 60 years or older is eligible to participate in the program, the project makes special efforts to reach senior citizens who are not eating well because of finances, lack of skills in selecting and preparing meals, lack of mobility to shop and cook or feelings of loneliness.

In addition to meals, the nutrition project provides supportive services including transportation and personal escort, information and referral, health and welfare counseling, nutrition education, shopping assistance, and recreational activities.

A voluntary donation of 75 cents is asked for each meal, but no one is turned away because of inability to pay and there is no minimum income necessary to participate.

Participation in South Shore Home Care's Nutrition Program is on a reservation basis. Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate seniors interested in taking part should call the Meal Site at 545-5885 and make a reservation through Bill Brooks, site manager.

In addition, volunteers are always needed to help with outreach, transportation, escort service, serving, taking reservations and delivering meals to home-bound elders in their own communities. If you have any questions about the program please call Marilyn Sweeney, Outreach worker or Marge Hall, Home Delivered Meals coordinator, at 383-9790.

DAVE COWENS answers questions from the audience during Sunday's basketball clinic.

Celtic Cowens wows the kids

By Donna Cogliano

To the delight of some 200 onlookers, mostly children from Cohasset, Scituate and Hull, Celtics' great Dave Cowens dunked the basketball at the close of a basketball clinic held at Cohasset High School on Sunday afternoon.

Cowens spoke about basketball and demonstrated many practice drills during the two-hour session. The attentive audience was told, by Cowens, that any style of shooting is acceptable, "as long as you get the job done."

He said, "You're allowed to have your own style as long as the ball goes in."

Cowens, at 6'9", was easily recognized across the gymnasium floor. He was the tall man in a yellow T-shirt with blue sweat pants, which were too short in length for his long legs. His T-shirt read: Special Olympics is good for sports.

Cohasset High School Coach Ed Minelli coordinated the afternoon, which benefited the Boosters Club. Minelli coaches at Cowens' summer basketball school at Regis College in Weston.

Admission to the hoop clinic was $1 and many children (some adults too) posed for instant photographs with Cowens for an additional $1 cost. Cowens didn't seem to mind the photo session. In fact, his easy going manner and brief chats made many individuals feel at ease while posing with the famed NBA star.

Cowens answered several questions from the audience. Though the experts have picked North Carolina to win the NCAA championship, Cowens said, DePaul and Virginia looked good for men's college basketball also. Little did Cowens know, that Boston College was in the process of bumping off the DePaul squad (the tourney's second seed) in the second round of NCAA action.

Cowens played ten years of professional basketball with the Celtics. Why did Cowens retire from basketball? "I got tired of it," he said.

Though Patrick Ewing scored most of his high school points on dunk situations, Cowens said, the freshman at Georgetown, has made significant progress. He's a terrific player, said Cowens, and remember, he only started playing basketball three years ago when he moved up from Jamaica.

Willis Reed and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar are the toughest centers Cowens has faced in his career. Today the Celtics' Robert Parish is the best center in basketball, Cowens said.

Cowens graduated from Florida State and played basketball there. He described himself as a late bloomer and a much stronger player at the professional level.

Danny Ainge, who was acquired by the Celtics this season is a quick and much needed younger guard, said Cowens. "(Tiny) Archibald is as old as I am and (Chris) Ford is a year younger," he said.

Quincy High School boys' basketball coach Joe Amorsino, who is program supervisor at Cowens' summer basketball program, spoke of many basketball skills which were demonstrated by his sons Joe and Paul with Cowens.

At one point late in the clinic, Cowens' two-year-old daughter wandered away from his wife in the bleachers and stole dad's basketball when he wasn't looking. She picked up the ball and brought it to him.

The life of a pro hockey wife: fun, sometimes lonely,with the summer off

The fast paced, yet sometimes lonely life of being married to a professional hockey player seems to agree with Rosemary O'Connell, the wife of Bruin's defenseman Mike O'Connell.

It's really been fun. It's been good for us. As long as we find it fun, it will be good to stay in this lifestyle," said Rosemary.

Though it's been a different lifestyle from others, it has its rewards said Rosemary. Best of all are the summers. From May through September, "We can get away from it all," she said.

Rosemary is more than happy with her husband's job as a Boston Bruin. "I don't think there is any place prettier than New England. After being away and seeing a lot of different parts of the country...they all have their main points...but it's nice to be back," she said.

Rosemary, who works for Jack Conway Realtors in Scituate, is a recent graduate of Boston College with a degree in business marketing. She said, "The road trips do get a little long and the traveling gets to be a bit much, in between the airport and everything, but for the most part it's been fun and we've really enjoyed it."

Rosemary said she doesn't feel isolated during road trips because there are 20 other Bruins' wives or girlfriends in the same boat. "The girls remain pretty close and get together when the guys are on the road," she said.

Rosemary, who is 25 years old, said, "It's a long season from September to May. It's nice that Mike has the summer off. You appreciate your time together. The summertime makes it all worthwhile."

During the summer, the couple enjoys sailing while Mike plays a lot of golf. In fact, Rosemary will probably have to contact Mike at a golf club when she's ready to give birth to their first child. The baby is due on Mike and Rosemary's fifth wedding anniversary, June 5.

Last week the couple started attending child birth classes. Mike is planning to stay with Rosemary during the delivery. "It will just be a matter of which golf course to find him at. I'll have to track down the various phone numbers and I'll find him at one of them — I'm sure," said Rosemary.

Rosemary is looking forward to exercising after the baby is born. She likes to run and swim. Mike said whether their baby is a boy or girl, the child will be encouraged to play sports and participate in youth hockey.

Rosemary goes to all the Bruins home games and sits next to Debbie Milbury, whose husband, Mike, has been out with strained knee ligaments since January 20. "I really like driving in with Mike (her husband). I could sit home and watch them on TV but I'd just as soon be there," said Rosemary.

Usually, the first 10 or 15 minutes of discussion during a drive home or to a restaurant after a home game, focuses on the game. "Mike might talk about it and get it off his mind. But for the most part he doesn't dwell on it that much...with an 80-game schedule you can't get down because some weeks you play four or five games," said Rosemary.

Mike takes criticsm well from his passenger (Rosemary) during the drive home. "I usually throw in my two cents worth...he's very receptive to anything I have to say. I'm sure when it comes right down to it, he does what he feels is right, when he's on the ice. I'm usually supportive and I don't say, 'Boy, you played a brutal game tonight'," she said.

Besides following Bruins hockey this season, Rosemary also cheered on the Cohasset High School team. Her brother, Richard Evans was a junior defenseman for the Skippers who reached the quarterfinals of the Eastern Mass. tourney.

According to Rosemary, Mike isn't superstitious, yet if he has a good game, he might eat that same meal before the next few games. "On the day of a game Mike kind of gets into his own little habits of getting mentally prepared for the game," said Rosemary. "He tends to get kind of quiet and reflective."

No one's on pins and needles the day of a game at the O'Connell home and Mike can be found helping out around the house.

The Bruins' wives recently compiled a cookbook and raised $37,500 for the Children's Hospital. Rosemary's contributions included recipes for spinnach salad, mud pies and oven-baked chicken. The Bruins' wives sold the cookbooks before games and in between periods for $5 each.

Choosing carpeting by yourself or with your designer? There are many variables to consider. Do you prefer wall-to-wall carpeting or area rugs? What is the decor of the rest of the room? Do you prefer patterns or solid colors? Should they be plush or thin? Will there be a lot of traffic? What kind of traffic? Will there be mud tracked over them or food spilled? Will just part of the rug be exposed to the sun? Will it tend to fade? Is the entire rug cleanable? Will it stand up to cleaning? Does it stain easily? Is it flame resistant? Your designer and dealer will have all the answers.

When you decide to buy new carpeting do the same things you would do if you were buying a car. Shop around. obtain prices and ask lots and lots of questions. The odds are pretty good that once you have a carpet color in mind you'll want to repaint or wallpaper your home. This is where BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE can help you. We can custom coordinate your wallpaper to match your rug and mix and match paints exactly. You will find us at 763 Country Way in N. Scituate where we are open Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 or phone 545-3624. Master Card and Visa welcomed.

Mike O'Connell made the big jump...

where we dominated everyone...I think we played with a high intensity for a stretch of 20 games. We've been playing .500 for the last month and a half. We need to get back to that high intensity level, to finish strong and hopefully, go to the Stanley Cup (playoffs)."

Last year, Mike became the fourth player in the NHL to play 82 regular season games. This year with nine games remaining, Mike will play in more than 100 games which includes exhibition contests and Canada Cup competition while playing for Team U.S.A.

He has played in almost 300 NHL games and scored his 100th point, last year, on March 13. The defenseman's performances for the Chicago and Boston hockey clubs, last year, combined for 15 goals and 38 assists for 53 points. He was shooting for 50 points this year but doubts he'll make it, since he had four goals and 33 assists (37 points) as of last week. "I'm happy with the year I'm having," he said, "but I can do better."

The team works hard. "One thing about the Bruins," said Mike, "We might lose our share of games...but there's never a lack of effort. We don't lose a game because we haven't tried."

Mike worked his way up the ranks of youth hockey and attended Archbishop Williams High School for two years where he played on the hockey and football teams. Though Mike is the son of former Illinois and Cleveland Browns quarterback, Tommy O'Connell, he never felt pressured into playing football. Mike played at the linebacker position and said he enjoyed games but hated the practices. "I couldn't stand football practice...I love hockey practice," he said.

After two years at Archie's, Mike, who was born in Chicago, played junior hockey in Kingston, Ontario, Canada. He graduated from Kingston Collegiate Vocational Institute. Following graduation from KCVI, O'Connell played on various farm teams before securing a spot with Chicago in the NHL from 1979-80.

Though Mike went the route of junior hockey, he doesn't recommend it for others. "If I had a kid who had a chance to go to Canada (the juniors) or go to college, I think I'd send him to college," Mike said.

"I had a lot of ups and downs and I stuck it out. Fortunately, everything worked out all right. For every one kid that makes it, there's 50 or 60 who don't make it out of the junior ranks," he said.

Mike's high school hockey schedule at Archbishop Williams was about 20 games per season. In the juniors, he averaged 75 games while life in professional hockey consists of 80 to 100 games each season.

In addition to the challenging schedule of road trips, there is a certain pressure from the fans who pay $11 or $12 a seat to see the Bruins play hockey. "You have to zone out that pressure," said Mike. 'You're playing for money and that's what it comes down to — especially in the playoffs."

Players can earn an extra $15,000 or $20,000 in the playoffs.

Road trips, as described by Mike, seem less than glamorous. Most of the team's time is spent resting, eating or on airplanes. Road trips aren't so bad, said Mike, "It's not like traveling by yourself — you always have 19 other guys to do something with." Some team members go to movies while others play pool or cards.

Mike said it's greast traveling with 20 Bruins...yet I'm sure it's lonely for Rosemary."

Though Mike has no plans for when his hockey career ends, he knows that once something interests him he will work hard to become successful at it.

When Mike speaks to youth groups he tells them: "You've got to believe in yourself. If you lose your confidence, you lose everything...you've got to get over the tough times. You have to keep yourself healthy, get plenty of rest, eat right and you have to have a lot of luck on your side. You also need support behind you, someone to boost you, when you're down.

"Fortunately," said Mike, "I had great parents and a great wife which helped me a lot."

The water treatment plant works...

is slower. Instead of a rapid stirring of the waters, there are long paddles moving with slow paced precision while the chemical action proceeds to bring these tiny pieces of flock into larger groupings.

In step three, the settling tanks, the movement comes only from overflowing waters moving on in the process. The relatively inactive tank is designed to let impurities drop to the bottom.

Along the line, the waste products, heavy matter, pieces of debris are removed.

Next the water, already looking clear enough to drink, moves through three filter beds made from charcoal, sand and porous concrete.

By now the water is biologically inactive. The chlorine is added as the water leaves the plant, just to protect against any problems that might be encountered in the distribution system.

The distribution system in Cohasset is hardly as modern and efficient as the plant. Ben Curley, Water Supervisor, has been looking for ways to get state or federal money to upgrade the places with the most serious problems. So far that money hasn't been available.

Curley says the town has the best surface water in the state. Surface water comes from ponds, reservoirs, and streams as opposed to well water. Well water is always less contaminated in some ways because the soil serves as a filter.

Taylor works at maintaining quality. He continually tests the water at the plant to make sure it meets proper standards. In the lab at the treatment plant, Taylor has test tubes and machines. Complicated devices that belie the relatively simple operation going on within the plant.

He continues his story of water explaining that with the advent of industrialization more pollutants were poured into the water beds.

"People will say things like, 'I've been drinking this same water for 70 years and it's never needed treatment.' Well, it's only been 50 years out of the history of the world that this (type of pollution) has been going on."

One of the problems is acid rain. While it sounds like some newly discovered poison, it's just part of industrialization.

About 70 percent of the rain fall evaporates back into the atmosphere. Eventually it will rain down again into the ponds, wells and ocean. On the way through the atmosphere, the rain picks up particles suspended in the air that have come as the result of heavy smoke. These particles, which may include heavy metals, will stay with the rain water.

Water with these particles will probably have a metallic taste. The color and odor of the water in a pond are more often caused by biological contaminants.

The treatment plant at Lily Pond is three years old. It can process enough water for the town's maximum possible development, water officials say. It cost the town multi-millions to build.

Before the plant went into operation, an out-of-date plant had crews working seven days a week, 24 hours a day just to process 500,000 gallons a day.

The new plant operates an 8 hour day and produces more "potable water," as they call it in the water business.

Bill McAuliffe and Randy Sylvester work with Taylor at the plant, to make sure the water leaving the building is odorless, colorless, almost tasteless and as pure or purer than the state and federal government require.

On the taste question, Taylor is quick to point out that tasteless water is flat.

On the salt question, Cohasset's water is far less a hazard for someone on a salt free diet than one pickle.

Testing over the last year showed the sodium count was high enough to force the town to send out warnings aimed at people on salt free diets. But the level of sodium in the last state test was 17 milligrams per liter. There are more than 100 milligrams in a slice of bread. More than 1,400 milligrams in a dill pickle. A TV dinner has about 1,100 milligrams of sodium.

The men at the plant point out that the salt used by the state on Route 3A eventually seeps through the soil into the pond.

Curley points out that part of the distribution system has pipes that are 75 to 100 years old.

"Water is taken more or less for granted," Taylor says. "When you turn on a tap 99 times out of 100, you'll get clear, colorless, tasteless water."

"That's 99.9 times out of 100," Curley said.

"Problems do arise from time to time but they're due to the distribution system," Curley said.

It will take the town 32 more years to pay off the bond on construction of the plant. Right now the bond cost — principal and interest — amounts to 40 percent of the water budget. In the coming budget year the bill will be $184,200.

Still Curley says the town built the treatment plant just in time. The old plant couldn't handle any more volume. Development of the town continues.

School Board to adopt drug policy

by Patricia Desmond

The school system is about to adopt its first policy on drug and alcohol abuse.

The final draft of a policy worked over by school administrators, parents, students, community leaders and the new health coordinator went to the school committee Monday night. It will come up again for a vote in a month's time.

Among the various provisions of the statement, it spells out that a student's confidences to a teacher about drug abuse cannot remain confidential. The policy requires the teacher to report the information to an administrator for action.

A procedure for searching a student for drugs is outlined.

Copies of the proposal will be given to the students before enforcement begins, according to School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

Assemblies will be held to discuss the package either in the spring or next fall, depending on when the school committee votes on the policy.

The plan has been in the works for about two years now. A draft of the policy was produced by administrators last summer. Since then interested groups have been working on changes.

"It's certainly not set in cement," Crowell said as questions on wording got underway.

He said the idea behind it was to make it a little bit unpleasant for students who use drugs.

"We are trying to intimidate youngsters into not having any drugs or alcohol on the premises," he explained.

Patricia Walsh, former school committee member, said she had been told allegations of kids hanging around who were trying to sell drugs back when she was chairman of the committee.

"I never knew where to go with those allegations. I don't see a place to report allegations in this," she said.

Crowell said the place to start is with the school nurse. The reporting team, set up under the plan, includes principal, assistant principal, nurse, health coordinator, guidance department and sometimes special needs department.

"The principal will be responsible for disseminating pertinent information to the appropriate team member," the regulations say.

"If a student is in possession of or is under the influence of a drug he or she shall be escorted as tactfully as possible to the nearest administrative office.

Town teeters on fiscal uncertainty as revaluation problem remains unsolved

There's a sign on the bulletin board of the selectmen's office that says: "If you're not confused, you don't understand the problem."

That's the best way of explaining the current fiscal crisis.

The town is teetering on fiscal uncertainty — but officials have hope.

The problem came to light last week when the state Bureau of Accounts refused to certify the revaluation figures based on the information available.

The state wants more information than the professional appraisor, Thomas Mahaney, has at this point.

The assessors met twice in emergency session last week attempting to unravel the difficulties.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said she's trying to get information from the state and from other communities involved. One of the other towns she represents — Hingham — is in the same boat.

What the state wants from Mahaney is the equation or formula he used in placing a value on each of the 2,900 properties in town.

Mahaney used the Means method, a traditional standard. But knowing that isn't enough for the state. More mathematical factors should be on the formula.

The bottom line is that unless political pressure is successful in changing the state's demand or unless the data can be reconstructed by June 30, the town will be forced to declare a $400,000 deficit for the present year's spending.

The shortfall is based on the state's equalized valuation for the town — $209 million — being used in the formula for Proposition 2½ on setting a tax rate. The actual number used in budgeting last spring when the budget was calculated was $225 million. That number came from a conservative estimate of the new valuation figures.

The estimate hasn't changed — except to go upwards — but there seems little chance the revaluation program will be in acceptable form by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Meanwhile Town Treasurer-Collector Gordon Flynt was forced to borrow $1 million in anticipation of uncollected taxes. The town has no authority to mail out a second estimated tax bill.

The recent borrowing went out March 8. Eleven banks bid on the notes. Nine were sold parts of the borrowing at an average interest rate of 7.18 percent. The low bid was 7.07 and the high was 7.18.

The borrowing is due May 18. Flynt said he expects it will be rolled over at that time. It takes about a month to mail out tax bills once the rate is finally set.

At present the computer cards with the proposed new valuation figures have been taken from town hall by Mahaney to the Arlington Trust where key punch operators are going to begin putting in infor-

Meet Arthur Meacham, he's 10 and invents

Arthur Meacham, a 10-year-old student at the Deer Hill School, may never have his shoelaces untied again.

Never, that is, as long as he wears his very own invention — electric shoelaces.

"They're not exactly shoelaces," he explains, "they consist of electromagnets, batteries, switches and metal plates."

At an invention convention last summer, attended by several hundred Massachusetts students, Arthur won the prize for the wackiest invention. Although they may sound strange, they really work.

When the button on the toe is pressed, the electromagnet is activated. That holds the metal plate in place and keeps the shoe firmly on the foot.

Cohasset preps for gypsy moth invasion

By Donna Cogliano

The town is ready for the gypsy moths this year.

Selectmen signed a contract with a Hanson company last week for control of gypsy moths through aerial spraying. The C&W Ag-Air Service has been contracted to battle gypsy moths in the spring for approximately $50,000 which was appropriated by voters at special town meeting in December.

So far, Cohasset is the only community in the area which has appropriated funds for an aerial project. Scituate and Hull have no plans for town-wide control while Hingham selectmen favor the spraying, but the advisory committee is recommending "no action" on funding for aerial spraying at town meeting.

According to Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle, a helicopter will spray Sevin (Carbaryl) over the town on two mornings between May 15 and June 1. Though the two dates have not been set, the times of application will be from 5:30 a.m. to 8 a.m.

School openings will be delayed due to the 2½ hour spraying. On those two mornings schools will open at 9 a.m. Laugelle said the delayed school opening is not a scare tactic — just a normal procedure.

It is also recommended that townspeople keep their pets indoors along with their feeding dishes. Laugelle will oversee the spraying operations and will be aboard the helicopter during the spraying, possibly with a local doctor, who has requested to ride in the helicopter.

Many particulars must be arranged prior to the spraying. The contractor must give the town at least seven days notice before the spraying and shall provide pertinent information regarding pesticide precautions and instructions to the public.

The town must notify the Massachusetts Pesticide Board two days prior to the actual spraying. On the morning of each spraying Laugelle will call the contractor at 4:30 a.m. to report the weather conditions. Rain, wind, and fog are factors which will result in postponement of the spraying for another

Dump talk

An official of Barry Bros., new owners of Cohasset Heights Dump, met with Hull's executive secretary last week to talk about handling the town's trash.

Sources indicate the plan being considered would have the contractors already working in Hull bring their trucks to the dump off Route 3A instead of using the present municipal dump in Hull.

Spirit awards

Spirit Awards were given at the annual Winter Sports Banquet held Wednesday, March 10. This award is given to the athlete from each team who most exemplifes the ideals of that sport.

This season's winners are: boys' basketball, Joel Linsley; girls' basketball, Madlene Roy; cheerleading, Maria Curelli; gymnastics, Marcie Brown, hockey, Don O'Neill; and wrestling, J.T. Price.

Town meeting

The town meeting on Saturday, April 3, will consider 46 articles and a budget of somewhere between $7 and $8 million.

The exact budget figure will be determined by the guidelines of Proposition 2½, which means about $7.5 million.

The budget for the coming fiscal year looks to be about what it was two years ago.

New health agent

By the end of this week, the board of health will probably have hired a new agent.

The hiring process was in its final leg by Monday night and interviews with the top applicants were scheduled for meetings later this week.

The board has been working towards a hiring deadline of Friday to give the new agent a chance to gain some experience while the old (relatively speaking) health agent is still working for the town.

Agent Kevin O'Brien gave the board his notice last month.

Election officials

Selectmen approved the following election officers last Wednesday for the Town Election on April 10:

To report to Town Hall at 7:45 a.m.: Warden, Dominic Baccari, 55 Reservoir Road; Clerk, Mary Grassie, 45 Spring Street; and Clerk, Anthony Rosano, 194 King Street.

Inspectors Democrats: Dorothy Bjorkgren, 10 Parker Avenue; Jean Sulvador, 28 Elm Court; Mary Fiori, 5 Schofield Road; Margaret Hernan, 558 Beechwood Street and Janice Rasano, 121 Jerusalem Road.

Inspectors Republicans: Eileen Buckley, 241 Forest Avenue; Maria Pape, 94 King Street; Robert Pape, 206 Sohier Street; Nancy Sladen, 42 Elm Court; and Mary Grassie, 48 Elm Court.

Inspector Independent: Carol Townsend of 11 Hillside Drive.

The following Inspectors will report at 12:30 p.m.: Carol Began, 4 Sankey Road; Mary Migliaccio, 46 Elm Court; Grace Tuckerman, 393 South Main Street; Patricia Walsh, 270 North Main Street; Alice Mersch, 15 Ledgewood Drive; and Patricia Barrow, 283 King Street.

Junk license

Selectmen granted Frank Williams a junk license last Wednesday. The license is for the flea market on 3A and was renewed by a unanimous vote of the board.

Auxiliary police

This week the selectmen plan to talk about the auxiliary police situation with Police Chief John DeBassio.

Eventually the board plans to interview all the auxiliaries — but not this week.

Last movie

The final movie in the Cohasset Community Center's special film series for children will be shown this Saturday at 3 p.m. at town hall. The cost of admission is $1 and refreshments will be sold.

Water detection

The state will give the town $1,653 toward a system-wide leak detection program for the water department, according to Sen. Allan McKinnon.

The initial report from the state was that no money would be available for Cohasset's requested grant which is the first phase of a much larger program.

The overall project will cost $21,000 for leak detection. Cohasset was looking for $10,500 from the state but money ran out before the project was granted its full request.

Town meeting checkers

Selectmen approved the following checkers last Wednesday for the Annual Town Meeting on Saturday, April 3: Margaret Hernan, 558 Beechwood Street; Mary Brennock, 35 Oak Street; Mary Grassie, 45 Spring Street; and Barbara Williams, 48 Stockbridge Street.

Checkers will report for duty at 12:45 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Casino hearing

Casino Gambling bills — Slot Machine and Jai Alai Bills — are scheduled for hearing before the Government Regulations Committee on Wednesday, March 31, in the Gardner Auditorium at the State House.

The hearing is posted for 9:30 a.m. to give legislators an opportunity to testify, and proponents of these bills will testify at 10:30 a.m.

For further information, please call Maria Plante, Cohasset Coordinator, and Director of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., 383-9263.

Cohasset preps for gypsy moth invasion...

day. If spraying is postponed, the fire horn will sound and schools will open at their usual times.

Laugelle said the helicopter will fuel up with the insecticide at an undetermined site in Cohasset. Trucks will transport the Sevin into town while the helicopter will fly from Hanson and fill its tank in Cohasset. Trucks will transport the Sevin into town while the helicopter will fly from Hanson and fill its tank in Cohasset.

The Sevin itself is a very fine white powder which Laugelle said, most people won't notice. Many people don't realize, he said, that gypsy moths won't die until they've eaten a leaf with the insecticide on it.

In addition to the town-wide aerial spraying project, Laugelle recommends that townspeople hire individual contractors to spray their yards. Laugelle said the aerial spraying won't reach small shrubs or under boats, butters and shovels which are hiding places for egg masses.

However, Laugelle cautioned the public to hire only licensed and insured contractors. He said people should check with the state's pesticide board or himself "to make sure you're getting someone qualified and reliable."

Last year, results of a random gypsy moth egg county by the state pesticide board in Cohasset were not encouraging. The board told Laugelle that the town's egg count had increased considerably.

According to studies by Shade Tree Laboratories, an extension service of the University of Massachusetts, the gypsy moth has one generation a year and spends the winter in the egg stage. The eggs hatch in early May — usually by May 1 for most of the state and about May 10 on Cape Cod. The newly hatched caterpillars sometimes lower themselves from tree branches on threads. At this time, they may be blown by the wind. Some might be blown a few miles, but usually the distance is a matter of a few hundred yards.

Egg masses larvae (caterpillars), and pupae often attach to objects such as vehicles and firewood, upon which they may be moved long distances.

The caterpillars hatch in May and feed until early July when they transform into pupae. Moths start to emerge from pupation about July 4, just as people conduct their backyard Fourth of July celebrations. The males (dark brown) are the stronger fliers but the females (nearly white) emerge, mate and lay their eggs near their place of pupation. The eggs are laid shortly after mating and may be deposited at any place of height in the tree or on numerous other nearby objects. Egg masses are covered with tan colored scales from the female's abdomen and each mass may contain 100-1000 eggs.

Gypsy moths may feed on a wide variety of trees and shrubs but oak, willow, linden apple and larch are favored. Large hungry caterpillars will also eat pine, hemlock, spruce and sometimes maple. For the most part, ash, locust and sycamore are not fed upon.

The Shade Tree Laboratory Study reported that Massachusett's forests will not be immediately killed by a typical outbreak of gypsy moths, but they will be weakened. Shade trees will be weakened and possibly killed if they are already weakened by some other factors, such as environmental complications. Healthy deciduous trees should be able to withstand partial defoliation for two or three successive years without being killed but they will be weakened, while conifers may be killed in one season.

Once weakened, trees may become susceptible to death associated by fungi. It is recommended that shade trees, especially partly defoliated ones, be given adequate water, as needed, and fertilizer in alternate years to aid in maintaining or improving trees.

The insecticide Sevin was chosen for Cohasset over the product Bacillus Thuringiensis (BT). Laugelle said BT is three times as expensive as Sevin. He said Sevin is a proven product and Natick had great results from spraying with it last year.

Proposed drug & alcohol statement

I. Policy Purposes:

1. To reduce or eliminate the use, misuse, or abuse of harmful drugs and alcohol from our public school system.

2. To establish and disseminate a realistic set of rules and regulations for the handling of drug-related situations.

3. To present these regulations in a meaningful, concise manner to the Cohasset student body, parents, staff, and citizens of the Town.

4. To suggest methods for the rehabilitation of drug and alcohol offenders by using all the resources available to the School System, including referral and service agencies whose function is rehabilitation.

5. To coordinate with law enforcement agencies in fulfilling the legal responsibilities connected with criminal offenses according to Massachusetts statutes.

6. To provide legal protection to all school personnel and members of the School Committee against any liability claims surrounding the handling of any student drug or alcohol situations. The procedures of this policy will become a part of the staff job descriptions and as such they will represent the wishes of the Town rather than the individual judgments of one person.

II. Philosophy:

The Cohasset School Committee recognizes its responsibility for insuring the safety of all members of the student body and for supporting and assisting in the enforcement of current law. To that end, the Cohasset School Committee holds that it is illegal, and physically and psychologically harmful for students to use, possess and/or distribute any controlled substance or alcohol. Further, the Cohasset School Committee is committed to discouraging such use, possession and/or distribution through the implementation of severe penalties and to educating the students about the potential dangers of drug and alcohol use.

(Procedures go on for 17 typed pages.)

Drug policy...

If drugs are found in the school or on a student, they will be turned over "to the proper authorities" within three days.

In the case of a medical emergency, a student would be taken to South Shore Hospital by the fire department EMTs or some other emergency facility recommended by a doctor. Every attempt would be made to notify a parent.

Otherwise, for a student under the influence, the procedure begins with the student being told the possible outcome, a parent would be notified and a possible five day suspension would begin.

Anyone involved in distribution or sale of drugs in the school, would face a penalty of police notification plus a 10-day suspension and possible expulsion for a specific period by the school committee.

"According to a recent opinion of the Attorney General..., the school has more legal search latitude than does the law enforcement agencies," the regulations say.

A search of a student or the student's belongings must be observed by a witness. One of the parents asked that if a search was to take place the parent be notified first and given a chance to be that witness. The superintendent wrote in that every effort would be made to contact the parent first.

"Common sense directs that the search should be conducted only if hard evidence indicates. Staff members must be sure of their facts before action is taken!!" the regulations say.

"All staff members are involved in this effort. We must guard against making medical-legal-moral judgments and must instead be supportive, showing caring and concern for the student's health and well being."

Families will be referred to rehabilitation programs sometimes, students deemed drug dependent will have special educational plans developed.

The rules apply for all school related activities as well as school time.

Fore river construction plagues commute

If you usually commute to Boston or Quincy on Route 3A, better start early.

The Fore River Bridge reconstruction project will continue until next fall. The current state Department of Public Works' plan calls for only one lane open heading north at rush hour. One lane will also be open heading south.

Sen. Allan McKinnon said he is working to change the plan — but so far he's been unsuccessful.

Since this work will be done at the same time as the Route 3 expressway ramp project is tying up that highway in Braintree, commuters have little hope.

McKinnon's idea for the Fore River bridge is to make it a one-way stretch during rush hour.

Aides to Senator McKinnon and Rep. Philip W. Johnston, D-Marshfield, met last week with Department of Public Works Associate Commissioner Martha Reardon and Horace Delgrosso, DPW Construction Engineer, to discuss highway transportation projects for the coming year.

The Route 3A signalization and the Jug Handle at Neck and Green Streets in North Weymouth are expected to begin this summer.

Both legislators expressed their interest in ensuring that everything possible be done to keep the inconvenience and traffic tie-ups to a minimum for South Shore commuters.

Sen. McKinnon and Rep. Johnston are continuing their effort to encourage a network of communication between all state transportation and planning agencies to improve highway project coordination on the South Shore. Positive changes in transportation for commuters is desperately needed, and as part of that strategy, they are planning a public meeting of their newly-formed South Shore Transportation Caucus the last week in March.

Fiscal uncertainty...

mation of the number of baths, rooms, etc.

After 200 samples are prepared, a new and untested computer formula will try to reconstruct the values. If the results jibe with what Mahaney has already worked out, the rest of the properties would be computed out.

It will be several weeks before anything else is known on whether the program will work.

Several members of the advisory board have already suggested the method is wrong. They do not like the idea of using an untried program. Those several officials suggested the town should look into using a computer program that is proven.

Higher bid taken for pier work

Selectmen unanimously approved the Harbor Study Committee's recommendation that the firm of Anderson-Nichols be chosen as consultant for the preliminary planning for the Government Island pier extension.

Although the bid of Anderson-Nichols was $713 higher than the firm of Tibbetts Engineering Corporation, who the committee believes has the next best proposal, it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that Anderson-Nichols would provide the best service to the town for the following reasons:

1. Previous successful performance — on two previous Coastal Zone Management contracts Anderson-Nichols provided a town-side plan and a harbor master plan which have been invaluable in enabling the town to protect its coastal resources and to plan effectively for the improvement of the harbor.

2. Extensive knowledge of the Town of Cohasset — the work on two previous plans has enabled Anderson-Nichols to gain extensive background knowledge of the harbor and the town's fishing industry. Although much of this knowledge is available in reports the personal contacts and preparatory effort gives an advantage that translates into money saved for the town.

3. Partial completion of required tasks — many of the tasks completed in two previous CZM plans will parallel, and in some instances duplicate requirements of the new study. Since the same personnel at Anderson-Nichols will participate in this new contract the town should benefit significantly from these areas in their proposal.

Selectmen approved the $16,900 bid of Anderson-Nichols subject to town counsel's review of the contract. Chairman of the Harbor Study Committee, Charles Fink, said 12 proposals were submitted to selectmen on March 10 for the preliminary planning project. The proposals were reviewed by the committee on March 15. He said five proposals did not conform to the published request, so that only the remaining seven were considered.

Fink said preliminary plans are scheduled for completion on June 30 with a written report submitted by August 30.

☐There were so many Cohasset residents at Mary Jeanette Murray's kickoff brunch that someone remarked that if a town meeting were to be held, there would be little difficulty in obtaining a quorum.

Many people from Hingham and Hull were there, too, and everyone enjoyed the delicious food prepared by the staff of the South Shore Country Club as well as the opportunity to wish their candidate well in her campaign for re-election.

☐The legacy of last fall's gypsy moths are very definitely with us and anyone who has been out and about town recently must have noticed their fuzzy brown blotchlike egg masses on our trees.

There is a way of destroying some of these masses by scraping them off into a paper cup filled with dishwashing detergent. According to the Boston Museum of Science, each mass can contain up to 1000 eggs and each caterpillar must devour 25 leaves to grow up. Therefore if you destroy 20 egg masses, there's a good possibility of saving 250,000 leaves.

Celebrity's Auction coming...

By David Wadsworth, Curator

The Cohasset Historical Society is preparing to present its second gigantic Celebrity Auction and Sale, scheduled to be held on Saturday, August 7 at the historic Town Hall.

The first Celebrity Auction, held almost two years ago at the Music Circus tent, was a fund-raising event for restoration of the Society's headquarters at the Lothrop House.

This coming summer's Auction has even wider goals. A recent inspection of the Historical Society's unique and valuable old museum buildings at Cohasset Center has shown that immediate and extensive repairs must be undertaken to preserve and protect these fine examples of early New England architecture.

The well known Maritime Museum houses an extensive collection of historical memorabilia from Cohasset's "Age of Sail" as well as a large number of antique artifacts of general nature. This ancient building, dating from 1790, needs attention to repair leaks, repair gutters and to improve its interior.

Next door is the Society's original museum, an 1810 house built for one of Cohasset's seafaring families, the Captain John Wilson House. This fine old building, now furnished with antiques to recreate an early Cohasset home, must have immediate attention. Roofing and siding, chimneys and some structural members have deteriorated to a critical degree. Despite hard work by the Society's willing volunteers, time and climate have taken their inevitable toll upon this worthy structure.

Nearby is the "Independence" Gown Museum, originally the town's first fire station. Containing a superb collection of antique gowns and costumes dating from the early 19th to early 20th centuries, this mid-1800's building requires repairs and improvements to protect the beautiful but fragile exhibits it holds.

Meanwhile, on Summer Street, work goes ahead to restore the Lothrop House. When completed, this classic brick-ended Federal style house built in 1823 by merchant Caleb Lothrop, will house facilities for the Society's library, its extensive archives of Cohasset history, an administration office, and rooms for the display of historical collections. Although the successful end of the Society's Lothrop House project is in sight, much work remains to be done to both the exterior and interior of the building. Delays on the Lothrop House would be costly.

This summer's Celebrity Auction will have a goal of raising funds to meet the needs of these four distinctive and historic buildings.

Work on the Captain John Wilson House at the Center will be starting even before summer. Reshingling of the building's roof is scheduled for this spring, and is a necessity. New fire detection equipment will be added to both the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum, and further safety measures initiated.

The Celebrity Auction is expected to make it possible for the Society to continue its repair and restoration projects.

Serving as the Celebrity Auction Committee are Drexel Gibson (an organizer of the original 1980 Auction), John Mullett, Flora Littlejohn, Eleanor Cooney and John Campbell, assisted by Society Curator David Wadsworth. The Committee is already working to send out the many hundreds of letters to great and near-great celebrities whose contributions are needed to make the Celebrity Auction a success.

In 1980, the response from sports figures, show business personalities, politicians, statesmen, authors and many other well known people were heart-warming and immediate. It is not money, but interesting personal items and memorabilia of significant value that the Society will be requesting from celebrities all across the country. All these items will be auctioned on August 7 by a guest auctioneer to be chosen by the Society.

The Historical Society's coming Celebrity Auction promises to be a gala event, and certainly will be a high point of Cohasset's busy 1982 summer season.

N. Cohasset fire station on an unbuildable lot

The board of health went on record recently stating that the North Cohasset Fire Station is on a non-buildable lot.

Health Agent Kevin O'Brien pointed out that one reason the fire station was closed was because the board of health had condemned the septic system.

He said the septic system on the lot is within five or ten feet of Straits Pond and actually empties into the pond.

Board Member Barbara Kern asked for the vote saying that there are about six people interested in buying the building from the town for business use. She said it was important the board go on record at this time.

Questions remain

It seems from all available reports that the town is on the verge of financial chaos over the issue of revaluation.

If the state makes good its latest word, it may very well be that the town budget needs a butchering. And it shouldn't be that way.

Revaluation has been underway for the past two years. Some 2,900 properties exist in town, according to the assessors' records. That means that if three properties were done each week during the process, we would be finished.

But we're not. And the difference means the town can't develop the tax rate for last year and faces a vacuum in developing the budget for the next fiscal year — that's the money to be voted at the annual town meeting which is scheduled for 1 p.m. Saturday, April 3, at the high school.

The assessors have told their professional appraiser to keep working on figures to appease the state. Some officials believe it will be three months before the state certifies the town's valuation — if it happens that soon.

So the question remains, what should the town do?

We would guess that in the event political pressure fails to change the ruling of the state bureau of accounts, the only answer left is to move ahead with this year's budget based on a radically lower spending level.

We wish we had a better idea. We also wish more information on what the state wanted from the town had been available two years ago when the revaluation process began.

A bouquet

This is a public note of thanks to Jean Cotton.

Mrs. Cotton is the chairman of the advisory board, a group that does it's homework, operates on the best available knowledge and battles for fiscal sanity in a town noted for just that.

(The current state of affairs with the lack of a true valuation figure for the town is none of the advisory board's doing.)

Mrs. Cotton has also been the manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop at Cushing Plaza to the benefit of the Social Service League of Cohasset for the past 16 years.

In that capacity, members of the Social Service League held a tea last week at the home of Mrs. John Wilson on Deep Run.

Members and friends turned out in large number to thank Mrs. Cotton for the work she's donated to the League and the consignment shop over the years.

Her efforts have been appreciated and should not go without proper notice.

Besides her work at the consignment shop, Mrs. Cotton is a past president of the Social Service League and former chairman of the nursery committee.

She was one of the founders of the consignment shop, back 28 years ago.

Andrea Merrill will be the new manager. We wish her success.

Langmaid criticizes Mariner editorial

Letters

To the Editor:

I have been puzzled by your editorials concerning the schools and have been remiss in not commenting on them before. I feel the general tenor of the editorials inspires confusion and controversy, rather than thoughtful public discussion and positive action. Your most recent editorial about a band for the high school is a case in point. The editorial seems based entirely on the remarks of one or two people who either couldn't or didn't choose to present their concerns in an objective and factual way. Discussion of alternatives would have been facilitated by asking me to express an opinion about bands to a member of your editorial staff, or by asking another School Committee member, or the Superintendent. The facts as I see them, are as follows:

As the high school student body has declined in numbers, it has been more and more difficult to offer a full range of instrumental and vocal opportunities for interested students. Fewer and fewer students mean smaller and smaller groups, and this reality hit the marching band the hardest. Students have been very interested in and active in the jazz band and in orchestral opportunities, and have generally indicated by their lack of participation that marching band is not a priority. Students as well as School Committee members have felt that a very small marching band is not useful, not fun, and not practical. Other kinds of bands are active; in fact, our jazz band has been very successful in competitions not only in this area, but also throughout the New England region. Individual musicians have been excelling in competitions also.

It is the responsibility of the School Committee to allocate our resources, that is, students, faculty, and money, to those areas where the need and interest is greatest. I feel we have accomplished much in our music program and have not disappointed very many students in the process. When the time comes that enough student interest is shown in reinstituting a marching band, I am confident the School Committee will support this interest.

The press has a special opportunity and responsibility to foster public discussion. The views of the editor should be based on research and objective thinking, just as mine should. The "one party line" mentality which you comment on in your companion editorial in March 10th's paper, arises from ignorance, doubt, and confusion more often than from a desire for a "closed society."

Nuclear waste legislation needed

To the Editor:

The United States has yet to pass legislation for an effective means of nuclear waste disposal. Action to realize this is currently possible through S. 1662 (The National Nuclear Waste Disposal Policy Act) in the Senate, and the companion bills H.R. 5016 - The High Level Waste Management and Policy Act, and H.R. 3809 (from Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs) in the House.

It is vital that pending nuclear waste legislation be completed now lest budgetary pressures and other concerns again delay action on this high priority issue. It is of special importance to the New England region where nuclear power supplies 30 percent of its electricity compared to 12 percent of the nation as a whole.

Your action and your help are needed in relaying this important message to the people, who, as constituents, are urged to press their Senators and Congressional Representatives for passage of legislation dealing with nuclear waste disposal.

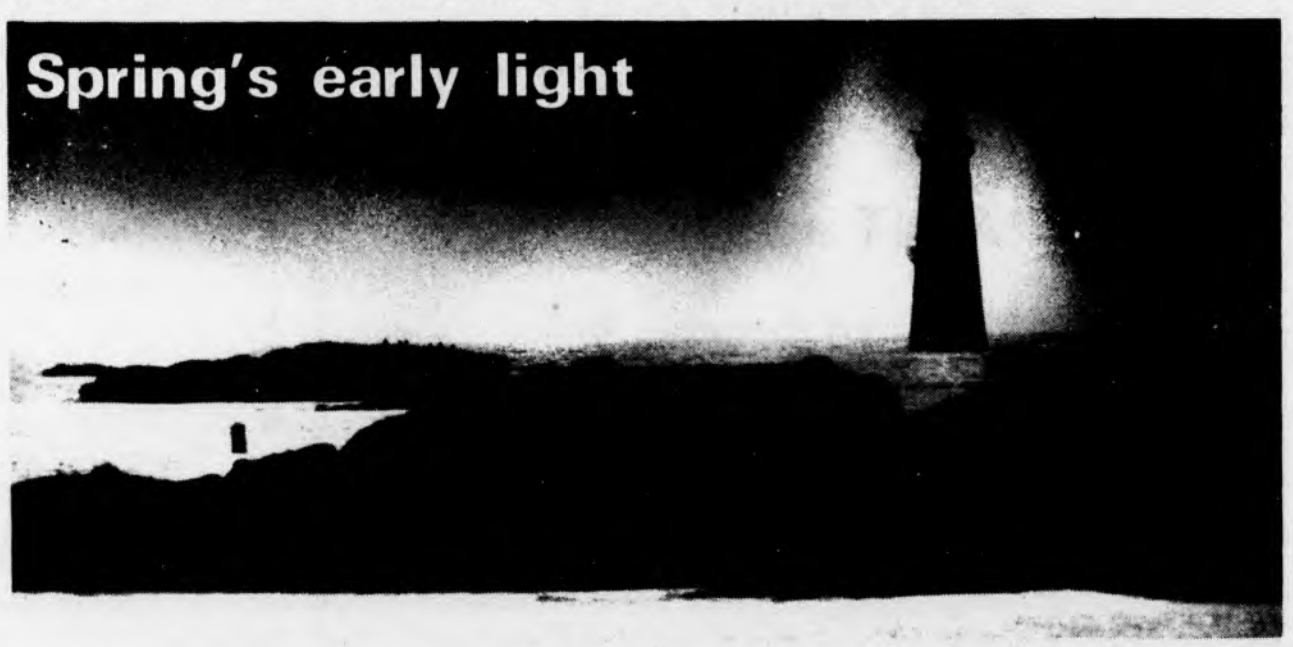
Being needed is a bounteous reward

By Dan Cotton
From First Parish Church Newsletter

In the early days of this Parish, the Town was the Parish. The people were bound to the land and the sea for a living here and now and to the Church for salvation hereafter, the one because they had to and the other from an inner sense of obligation and gratitude; the contrary minded were taxed anyway. Newcomers came and most stayed, bred, passed on their bounty and passed on. In an unpredictable physical world they strove for stability, wandering little in body or spirit. They committed themselves and they have left for us a heritage of commitment to something beyond ourselves.



Some years ago an informal poll revealed that most of our membership had "Come out" from some denonimation other than Unitarian. Only a handful had inherited their faith. Yet it is replenished. It survives, a remnant that helps to preserve the right of private judgment.

We differ among ourselves as we differ within ourselves. "For if men are so diverse, not less disparate are the many men who keep discordant company within each of us" (W.H. Pater). Yet we creatures of paradox come together to celebrate our difference. We labor to explain, to reason, to analyze the meaning of things and, while marginally successful, we continue believing that we are somehow headed right.

While we insist on articulating the reasons why in order to more fully understand, we display an uncommon amount of reasoning loyalty and do a lot of things because we feel we ought. This Parish, in common with Unitarians at large, has a history of participation far in excess of its numbers.

In contrast to our forebears, for they are our forebears whoever we are and from wherever we came, we are gathered by our own choice. We have willed it so.

It is easy to sign the book, sometimes harder not to sign. It is easy to shun commitment, sometimes harder to accept it; the rewards, however, can be great. For whatever reason or non-reason we came and for whatever reason or non-reason we stay, this gathering, this church, does need us, and being needed is reason enough for being and is a bounteous reward in itself.

Peace fighter eyes schools as arena

By Bucky Yardume

For most of his life, Dr. Robert Paterson by his own description was a hawk.

"It's true," the dentist mused in retrospect. "My country was right, no matter what."

On that point, both Dr. Paterson and his wife Betty emphasize that one thing hasn't changed. "We love our country. We do not believe in civil disobedience. We do believe any change must come through established, legal channels. It's because we love our country that we have become involved."

So what turned a hawk to activist in advocating that there be first a halt and eventually an end to nuclear weapons?

It was not an overnight conversion.

"Far from it," relates Dr. Paterson, who now spreads the word of peace for the South Shore Peace Coalition which began at United Church of Christ in Norwell but has expanded to carry the word throughout the South Shore and is looking for more areas in which to meet and talk with people.

"Actually, it really was Betty who became involved first as a member of the World Peacemakers," Dr. Paterson explains. "I was sort of tolerant of her view. Even, I guess, tongue in cheek about it."

Not now! Not after he learned more and heard Dr. Coldicutt and others and messages like 'Eight Minutes to Midnight.'

Dr. Paterson, also a member of Physicians for Social Responsibility which advocates an end to nuclear armament spends much of his time from his practice speaking to any group that will listen. He's addressed groups in Scituate, Duxbury, Hingham and Quincy. He hopes Marshfield, Hanover and others will invite him to speak including high school assemblies. He's already addressed Fontbonne Academy students as well as classes at Tufts University, his alma mater.

He is available and the price is right — a freebie.

"We also show films," Dr. Paterson outlined, including 'The War Games,' 'War Without Winners,' and 'Who's in Charge?'

The Patersons, at their comfortable Main Street, Norwell, home, recalled the film, 'On The Beach,' produced shortly after World War II but frighteningly on target in its forecast of the result of a nuclear war — an eventual wipeout from radiation.

They also recalled Paul Jacobs, investigative reporter, who tracked down reports of leukemia and cancer among military personnel exposed to early nuclear testing in Utah. He probed and found ranchers and livestock also affected. He hit hot spots and himself died from the effects.

"There's so much evidence," Dr. Paterson said. "Portsmouth Naval Shipyard where workers have had serious problems from radiation exposure. One of the things that bothers us is that we aren't told all the facts. If it weren't for the Freedom Act, who knows how little we'd know? I'm disturbed at attempts to curtail even that avenue of information. I'm disturbed by the continuing aura of Joe McCarthyism that accuses anyone who asks questions or questions policies of being unpatriotic."

Dr. Paterson, who served in World War II as a Navy Hospital corpsman, says, "Yes, I used to think my country was right no matter what. Until I realized that we weren't always right."

"I began to recognize that I really hadn't heard about the real medical effects of nuclear impacts... that the ozone layer will be destroyed and daytime animals unable to see and live as they have will die... that bacteria mutations will develop virulent strains against which our medicines will be ineffective...that epidemics we can't combat will result.

"I began to look for more information and found the military talks and thinks only of winning a nuclear battle. But nobody can win a nuclear war. There won't be medical personnel, hospitals or anything left to help any victims who might survive the initial impacts.

"It was Einstein who said when we split the atom it changed everything except military thinking."

Dr. Paterson, who was born in the Panama Canal zone, admits he didn't know but he learned. "The trouble now is much of the public doesn't know," and to change that he and his wife Betty are dedicated.

Dr. Paterson is shocked by our double standards.

"We're subjected to sheer hypocricy whereby the Russians are automatically the bad guys and we the good guys because of what's been and is being done. We're called on to regard the Russian intrusion in Afghanistan as wrong. Yet we do the very same thing. We intrude on El Salvador as we did in Vietnam. We interfere constantly. Many of the areas aren't really Communist but revolutionary. Our nation was born of revolution."

"We are told we can't trust the Russians. Yet in 14 nuclear treaties with them, they never broke one treaty.

"Breshnev expressed willingness to sit down and talk about nuclear disarmament any place, any time. I was tremendously encouraged until the Reagan Administration did nothing to take the opportunity."

Dr. Paterson is dismayed that the U.S. annually spends more on military aid than it would take to eradicate smallpox.

"Our priorities are wrong," he insists. "One half a percent of military expenditures would provide food technology that would make Third World nations self sufficient in 10 years."

He's concerned about the most wasteful government agency — the Pentagon — now with trillions in funding and a record of unbelievable overruns.

He disagrees that the U.S. and Russia can't work together.

"We conferred and agreed to bar above ground nuclear testing," Dr. Paterson points out. "It was a grass roots movement that forced that. It was to mutual advantage. Another such movement can end the madness on which we are embarked."

The Patersons, who met as college seniors — he at Tufts Dental, Betty, a Brooklyn native raised and educated in Massachusetts, at Boston University — urge everyone to write their Senators and Congressmen and the President to freeze nuclear armaments.

"People feel powerless to make government hear them," Dr. Paterson admits. "But it's up to all of us to make government hear us. This is not a partisan political issue...not even a national issue. It's a world issue.

"We want the nation we love and the world to survive. It would be easy for us to go sailing and wait for the end. We don't want that. We must at least try and do what we can to preserve what's good. I think that's real patriotism."

No aid to El Salvador, Studds' poll says

Congressman Gerry Studds' poll shows 78% of 9,000 Southeastern Mass. residents who responded oppose military aid to El Salvador, confirming his conviction the 12th District is in opposition to current Administration policy. Studds has introduced legislation to terminate further military aid to El Salvador and says his mail on the issue has exceeded any other subject, 20-1 against Reagan policies. Other poll results show 75% don't believe Reagan can balance the Federal budget by cutting domestic programs, increasing defense spending and providing big tax cuts which 68% believe unfairly favor the rich. Nearly 69% believe defense should share reductions in spending. "There's serious concern," Studds said, "that the President's recovery program will work." Nearly 71% responded in support of partial funding of Social Security with general revenues. Meanwhile, the House Sub-committee over Studds' opposition, moved to delay the bill to suspend military aid to El Salvador. Studds terms the action "a dereliction of duty," and accused those supportive of Reagan in the past as riding the fence now because the people are opposed. Studds reveals there's an investigation of the Ranger offshore oil drilling mishap that killed 84 men.

☐Roberta Sawyer, Esquire, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McKinnell of Cohasset has returned to her home town to become associated in the practice of law with the office of Charles J. Humphreys, Esquire, 15 Brook Street, Cohasset.

After her graduation from Cohasset High School in 1973, Roberta attended the University of New Hampshire at Durham for her undergraduate work and then went on to Boston College Law School for her graduate study of law. Prior to returning to Cohasset, she engaged in the general practice of law with a Boston firm for a year and a half.

☐Chun Chan of Cohasset recently completed a fine swimming season at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn. The junior was a member of Wesleyan's 200 yard medley relay team which broke the school record at the New England championships. 'Chun is a 1979 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Mrs. Benjamin Blake is on the committee planning the Friends of New England Conservatory's elegant French Cabaret to benefit the scholarship fund. This gala event will take place on Saturday, April 3, and will include cocktails, a Buffet Alsacien, a cabaret show by Conservatory students, and, to top off the evening, dancing — all transforming the ballroom of the beautiful new Hotel Meridien in Boston to a glamorous Parisien "boite."

The cocktail hour, which has been made possible by a generous gift from the Honeywell Corporation, will begin at 7 p.m. with hors d'oeuvres of oysters, prawns and steak tartar. Conservatory students will perform chansons by Debussy, Ravel and Berlioz. Models from Saks Fifth Avenue will show designer fashions from Paris, and the table favors will include French fragrances provided by Saks, plus samples of the famed mineral waters of Evian and other Evian products. The door prizes will feature two bottles of 1967 Chateau La Fite Rothschild; a cabin for two for one week aboard the Mark Twain on a cruise of the Burgundy waterways in France; two tickets to the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert on April 16; a case of wine and more.

The dinner will be prepared by the Hotel Meridien's gourmet French chef. The Buffet Alsacien includes choucroute, tarte oignon, Chicken Riesling, pates, breads and salades, with the Meridien's exquisite sweet table and creperie for dessert.

The cabaret show will complete the Parisien illusion. Four Conservatory singers and two mimes will present an entrancing show of songs from the French cabaret by Jacques Brel, Eric Satie, Edith Piaf and others. The cabaret is under the direction of Mark Aliapoulios, a graduate of the Conservatory.

☐Congratulations to Dan and Becky Young on the birth of their first child, Andrew Edwin Kareem Young, who was born on February 13. Andrew is the grandson of Mrs. Edwin Young of Reservoir Road.

Church to celebrate 1st anniversary

The parishioners of the Panaghia Greek Orthodox in Cohasset would like to extend a special invitation to all their friends from the surrounding communities and to their Orthodox brethren to come and join them on Sunday, April 4, to celebrate the first anniversary of the dedication of their church.

His Eminence, Anthimos, Bishop of New England will be on hand to perform the divine Liturgy. He will also be an honored guest at a luncheon at the famed Golden Rooster Restaurant on Border Street, Scituate, which follows the services at 1 p.m.

Faye Papadopoulous of Scituate, chairman for the day's events is very enthusiastic about the affair. "Oh, it is going to be wonderful. The whole thing is the inspiration of the restaurant's owners, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Zervas. Do you know that they are donating everything, from appetizers to dessert? They want every penny of the proceeds to go to a special fund to pay the church's mortgage. This is the second year that they are doing this for us. Their generosity is simply overwhelming."

There are a limited number of tickets available for a donation of $25 per person. For further information call 545-3670 after 6 p.m.

Sen. Allan McKinnon will have a representative at town hall at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 24.

Short takes

Three firefighter vacancies

There will be three openings on the fire department at the end of this month.

That's three openings on a department of 24 men. There are four men leaving but the department was one above the official compliment.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink's retirement becomes official at the end of this month. Deputy Chief Thomas Hernan retired in February.

Firefighters Ralph Perroncello and Ernest Sullivan are also retiring at the end of this month.

"Being short-handed makes it difficult in a department this size," Acting Chief Roger Lincoln said.

The selectmen will take up the question at their meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 24, at town hall.

The board is expected to ask that the present list be extended.

New trash proposal

This week the board of health met with a representative of MacDonald Brothers of Halifax, a company in the trash business.

According to Barbara Kern, board member, the company made a proposal for supervising the operation of the present dump. She said there was no proposal for hauling the town's trash to a site out of town.

The question of the future of the Cedar Street dump is one of the major issues that will be decided at the town meeting beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, April 3, at the high school.

School board lowers budget

The school budget is down to the figure the advisory board wanted before the problems with revaluation developed.

The school committee voted three to two Monday to cut the budget by $84,109. The new bottom line is $3.6 million.

The opponents were Richard Conley and Diana Kornet.

If the revaluation is certified for the expected amount the school officials would look for the higher figure.

But after meeting with assessors and advisory board members last week, board members don't expect a quick resolution to the problem.

The school committee made no list of cuts. Martha Gjesteby asked that no curriculum, athletics, student activities or special needs be cut. The superintendent took a note on her feelings, which were not part of the motion.

Jillson named tennis coach

Antonette Jillson was appointed boys tennis coach for $856.

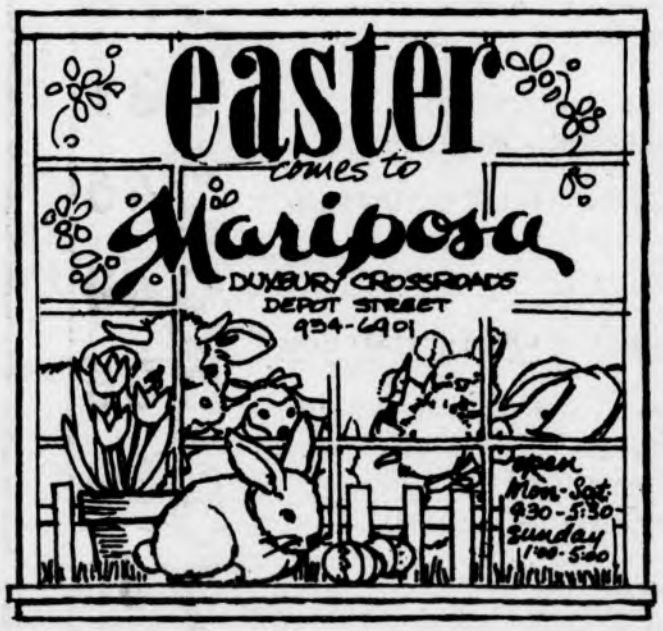
The following resignations were accepted by the school committee this week: Elaine Paradise, aide at Deer Hill; and Richard Hebert, high school custodian.

Kathy Fox was granted maternity leave from October to January next year. She teaches at Deer Hill.

Independence article in warrant

There's an article in the warrant of the annual town meeting that would give the Independence outright to the Historical Society.

The Independence, now housing the society's Gown Museum, is under the control of the society already but a clause giving over the property declared it would revert to the town if the society ceased to use it.



The article before the town meeting Saturday, April 3, at 1 p.m. would eliminate the revision clause.

S. Shore artists compete

Artists from the South Shore have recently built an impressive record of exhibitions in national juried shows in New York.

Margaret Dillon's acrylic painting, "Blue Bottles" was chosen for exhibit at the National Arts Club with the National Society of Painters in Casein & Acrylics.

The current exhibit at the Salmagundi Club in New York features three South Shore artists as prize winners: Constance Flavell Pratt of Norwell won the Jessie Brooke McReynolds award for her pastel portrait; Margaret Dillon of Cohasset won the McConger award for her acrylic "Dean and Deluca's"; Wilfred Loring of Hingham won an award for his print. Exhibiting in the Salmagundi show at the same time are Mary Lizotte and Elaine Wentworth, both watercolorists from Norwell; Virginia Avery, watercolorist from Marshfield; Thompsen Hughes of Cohasset in oils; Sam Barber from the Cape and Betty Savenor from Lexington.

Seahawks win more games

The Seahawk Youth Hockey teams posted victories in four out of the six league contests that they engaged in this week.

Coach Lou DiLorenzo's Bantam A's annihilated Milton 14-3 in a hockey version of the "Valentine's Day Massacre." Jeff O'Neil turned his hockey stick into a "tommy gun" and rifled in four goals to lead the A's "Hit-Men," Charlie Lersch with a "Hat Trick," Joe Finn and Phil Thomas with a pair of markers each, and Chris Tatum, Bobby Salvador and Bobby Weisslinger with singles all drew blood for the victorious Seahawks. Lersch, Tatum, Jamie Chisholm (2), Weisslinger (2), Thomas, Matt Glennon (2), Jamie Kelly and Finn (2) provided the "set-ups."

Netminder Kyle Hublitz won the "Battle of the Goaltenders" as Coach Barry Resnick's Pee Wee A's blanked Milton 1-0. Ned Flaherty netted the winning goal in a game that featured outstanding defensive play by both sides.

Coach Dennis O'Connell's Squirt A's ran into a stone wall against Milton and were crushed 8-1. Leftwinger Michael Meers scored the lone Seahawk's goal after receiving a pass from John Galluzzo.

In a fine team effort, Coach Tom Hingston's Squirt B's edged Milton 4-3. Michael Dundon, Pat Glennon, Jon Mahoney and Dennis Peacock were the "puck-poppers" for the B's while Mahoney, Paul Norton, Dundon and Cole Hughes contributed the assists.

Coach Frank McGovern's Squirt ' "troopers" shifted their "black and white" into overdrive and cruised past Pembroke 7-1. Damon Sparrow led the "offensive patrol" as he fired home a "hat trick." Also shooting their "squirt guns" were Sean Noonan, Terence Shea, Steve Boardman and Dan Cuddahy. Members of the "assist squad" were Shea (2), Noonan, Sparrow, David Orpen and Eric Fitzpatrick.

Coach Tony Ventolieri's Mites lost to Hanover 5-1. Pat Henderson notched the lone Seahawk tally.

Notice to non-tenured teachers

The 15 non-tenured teachers in the school system will be notified that their contracts will not be renewed.

The school committee vote on the notification must go out soon to comply with state law on teacher contracts. The school budget for the coming year indicates two-and-a-half teachers will be eliminated. All are at the elementary level.

Fashion show

The North River Chapter of Friends of the New England Home for Little Wanderers plans a fashion show March 29 at the Barnside Restaurant.

The good news for today is designed to make chocolate lovers rush to the nearest candy counter. Brush aside any guilt pangs, for according to the federal Food and Consumer Services, a chocolate raisin nut bar is not "junk" food, but a perfectly healthful product. The bar consists of cocoa beans, grown on trees; nuts, grown on trees; raisins, grown on vines and cane sugar — all perfectly good, acceptable and nutritious food products. It's one hundred good calories of natural ingredients, containing less sugar then a peanut butter and jelly sandwich on white bread. Nancy Thomas says her children love these cookies and you'll find a lot of nourishment in her

Junk food is a "no-no" to Donna Frugoli's youngsters, but they don't mind in the least, for the snacks she prepares would lure anyone away from Twinkies or Sno Puffs. Donna advises pupils in her health food classes at the Marshfield YWCA that snacks should have some food value and be free from chemicals. Who could turn up their nose at her

BANANAS DIPPED IN CHOCOLATE

1/3 c. butter
1/3 c. peanut butter
2½ c. oats
1/3 c. brown sugar

Melt the two butters together. Add oats and sugar and when ingredients are combined, spread out on a cookie sheet and bake in 350 degree oven for 15 min., or until golden brown. This mixture may be used as a topping over fruit, yogurt, or ice cream or as a coating as follows:

Cut bananas into four inch pieces, placing a wooden skewer in each end before freezing. Melt one cup of chocolate bits with 2 T magarine. While melted chocolate is still warm, dip each frozen banana into it before rolling in the baked peanut butter mixture. Wrap each banana in foil and freeze for snacks.

And now for the bad news. With the coming of warmer weather, we're not going to be able to hide those extra pounds under bulky, down winter coats, so most of us would do well to come to the aid of our waistlines with low-calorie dishes. Donna Poole became so enthusiastic about the program offered by Weight Watchers that after shedding a few pounds as a pupil, she has gone on to join their staff and she got many of us in the right mood when she and her committee served this dish at a Community League luncheon called

The Annapolis years are nearly over for Paul D'Onofrio

It is a tradition at the U.S. Naval Academy for graduates to proudly toss their caps into the air as a signal marking their transition from midshipmen to commissioned officers.

Among those looking forward to this time-honored moment in May is Midshipman First Class Paul D'Onofrio, son of Paul and Catherine D'Onofrio of Fairoaks Lane.

A senior now, D'Onofrio has come a long way since entering the academy after graduating from Cohasset High School in 1978. During plebe summer, the period of rigorous military indoctrination for academy freshmen, he made a smooth transition from civilian to military life and, since then, has gained not only a quality education but a solid understanding of Navy life.

"I wanted to be a naval aviator and serve my country. However, in addition, I wanted to earn a first rate education," the Cohasset midshipman says.

With a choice of 18 majors, the academic curriculum is designed to provide the graduate with a broad foundation in math, science, engineering, and the humanities, as well as a background in leadership, seamanship, navigation, and weapons systems. A resources management major, D'Onofrio takes approximately 18 semester hours of academic courses.

"Academics are intense and put a lot of pressure on the individual to do a great quantity of work," D'Onofrio says. "But if one works hard and makes some sacrifices, requirements can be met."

He is on the dean's and superintendent's lists for academic excellence.

The Naval Academy, however, offers more than just a college education. It also provides midshipmen with an opportunity to exercise their leadership skills and to receive professional training while traveling and seeing the world. Midshipmen generally spend two summers at sea, and another visiting Navy and Marine Corps installations for introduction to career opportunities.

D'Onofrio has traveled to Great Britain, Ireland, Spain, and Italy.

"The cruises are a lot of fun and provide tremendous insight toward our naval careers," he says.

In addition to the academic and professional training, the academy offers a selection of 29 varsity and 26 intramural sports. Midshipmen have carved a reputation for excellence throughout the sports spectrum from football to fencing, sailing to squash, and golf to gymnastics. D'Onofrio is active on the company lightweight football team and was a varsity sailor for three years.

Life at the academy also includes more than 80 extracurricular activities ranging from sky-diving to drama clubs. Midshipman D'Onofrio has been active in the photo club.

D'Onofrio will graduate with a bachelor of science degree and a commission as a Navy ensign in May and will attend Naval Flight School in Pensacola, Fla., upon graduation.

"I look forward to my career as an officer with enough confidence and enthusiasm to tackle any job responsibility," he says.

Insurance reform

Senator Allan R. McKinnon, D-Weymouth, Chairman of the Legislature's Insurance Committee, predicted last week his committee will approve a major auto insurance reform bill he filed this year. The Insurance Committee is holding public hearings this week on several bills proposing changes in the Massachusetts auto insurance system.

McKinnon said the committee has an opportunity to "take a fresh look" at reform this session following the resounding defeat of the insurance industry's bill by the Senate last year, despite a million dollar-plus lobbying effort. That bill was filed for the companies by Governor Edward J. King. McKinnon, its chief opponent, described it as "blatantly anti-consumer."

McKinnon said his reform bill, which he first filed late last year as an alternative to the Industry/King measure, provides the Legislature and the Commissioner of Insurance with the tools needed to bring about true auto insurance reform without discarding the positive elements of the current system in favor of greater insurance company control.

Poetry

This poem is John's response to the novel "House of Stairs," by William Sleater.

By John Kuntz

You will find it, in all your nightmares,
A dazzling array of endless stairs.
Go up, go down.
And down and down.
The stairs engulf you all around.

Twisting, turning,
East and west
Put your sanity to a test.

Hidden faces mock your screams,
Wrapped like candy in a restful dream.

Quite, serene are the stairs with no railings,

Converging, convulsing, never failing
Up a landing, nowhere still,

The somber stairs sway back and forth.

Only stairs, no floor, no ceiling.
They gloat at you without a feeling...

A dazzling array of endless stairs,

Pray it won't happen in all your nightmares.

IT'S STILL THERE — Christopher Smith, 9, stares off into space at his kite during a good wind at Sandy Beach recently. (Greg Derr photo)

Sharing the pie

By Patricia Desmond

Three girls sat at a formica table sharing one large pizza.

Three cans of Tab sat on the tabletop.

Outside the shop window people walked hatless and gloveless in the sunshine, harbingers of spring.

"I got accepted at my least choice," said the girl with Farrah Fawcett hair.

"That's nice, Ellen," said a tall girl with deep dark curly hair.

"Sure it is but I haven't figured out how I can afford to go anyplace next year. My parents don't have the money for anything better than a state school and I didn't apply at one anyway," Ellen complained, holding her piece of droopy pizza with both hands.

"They might change the rules again," said the third girl. Her hair was cut short and straight, a Princess Di look in medium brown. "You think a President's goin' stay popular if he keeps a whole generation from going to college?"

"Be serious, Polly. Time was when college was for the rich," said the tall one.

"You sound like my social studies teacher, Jeanette. She keeps going on about how different it was in the 40's. She's predicting World War III any minute to relieve the strain on the economy," Ellen offered. She fluffed her hair with one hand and reached for another piece of pizza with the other.

"She thinks they'll draft women this time."

The other two stared wide-eyed.

"But how can they, the ERA isn't going to pass the other three states. And besides, they've never drafted women before," Polly gasped. She reached for another piece of pizza but her eyes stated at Ellen.

"They can if they want to," Ellen said simply. "If young people can't buy homes or go to college or find jobs, they'll have to find something for us to do."

"Are you some kind of radical?" Polly asked. "Who's this they?"

"I don't know. I don't even believe it. It's just what my teacher said. I don't remember who they is, anyway."

Jeanette put a piece of pizza crust back on the paper platter.

"Gross," Polly commented, licking her fingers to suck off the cheese.

In the background, the sound of Pak-Man played where once there'd been a juke box. The quarter monster had a line of three youngsters waiting — no one over 12 was in the line.

"Where do those little kids get all the game money?" Jeanette asked no one in particular.

"They steal," Ellen offered.

"Now I know you're crazy," Polly said, sipping her diet drink. "You come up with wild ideas."

"Well, I figure that's the only way to get by in the world. How else can you survive?" Ellen said with a smile. Her silver braces showed with the smile.

"I know some kids who are just putting college off a year," Jeanette said, staring away from the other two. "I think that's what I'm going to do. I'm not sure what I'd study if I did go next year."

"I always expected you'd get a scholarship," Polly said. She seemed wide-eyed again.

"Well, I haven't heard yet but my counselor told me to expect about $3,000 with my family income and all. She said that I might get more but to plan for $3,000," Jeanette said. She watched the people swish by the window.

"Do you know how long I could stay in school on $3,000?"

"Well, I'm counting on them changing the rules again. I've always planned to get through school on loans. My Dad even said he'd help pay the loans back," Polly said, looking at Ellen.

"What are your plans if they don't change the rules?" Ellen asked.

"I don't know," Polly looked out the window.

The beeping of Pak-Man filled the room.

A short story

Memorial fund at Art Center

The Board of Directors of the South Shore Art Center has announced the establishment of the Elizabeth Reddie Memorial Fund.

Elizabeth Reddie was one of the earliest supporters of the Art Center; she served on the Board of Directors as Corresponding Secretary from 1968 to 1969. She gave generously of her time and talents on many Art Center volunteer committees over the years.

The Elizabeth Reddie Fund will be an equal partner with the Mac Ivor Reddie Scholarship Fund which was established 16 years ago. Scholarships or awards will be given in her name and will be dedicated to the spirit of community service which she demonstrated so well.

All donations to the fund are tax deductible. Anyone wishing further information should contact the South Shore Art Center or telephone 383-9548.

Too early in the morning

By Patricia Desmond

"Na na na na na na na na, Bat Man," the sound of the small loud voice pierced her sleep.

Mit bounded slipperless into Supermom's bedroom. The alarm clock would have said 6:30 if it could. Like most things in Supermom's world, the alarm clock no longer worked.

She stared at the handless clock through eyes that longed for more sleep.

The clock was a victim of the three-legged dog. The dog tripped on the cord a week or so ago and the minute hand met its maker. The dog tripped on the cord a week or so ago and the minute hand met its maker. The dog tripped again just two days ago and the hour hand reached its final destination - the trash basket.

Supermom wondered why Beloved didn't just heave the whole clock. (Beloved wondered why Super Mom didn't just heave the whole clock.)

Ordinarily Supermom would cry for a few extra hours of sleep. Ordinarily Mit would agree if only he could have his breakfast "right now."

But the day was special, very special.

"I want my Bat Man cake right now," Mit said loud enough to be heard by the next door neighbors.

"We're having that this afternoon. I have to buy it before you can eat it," Supermom sighed.

"Happy birthday, honey. Do you know how old you are today?"

"I'm three," he said sticking up three fingers, nearly poking her. "And I'm hungry too."

Mit had been talking about this birthday ever since the day after Christmas. Supermom wondered what thought would occupy him by the morrow. She also wondered whether he'd be greatly disappointed by the reality of his third birthday. He didn't seem to be coping badly yet.

Zzzzzz.

The alarm clock went off.

There was some use for the thing after all.

"July, are you ready for school yet," Supermom called out. She tried to wake every day at 7:45 to urge July to catch the school bus.

"It isn't time to go," July screamed from her bedroom, angered at what she took as an insult.

Supermom fumbled with the screw to shut off the ringing alarm. ZZZZZzzzzzz, it kept it up. She pulled the plug.

"Fudge," she mumbled. "What time is it?"

"Quarter of seven, do I have to tell you everything?" July asked with irritation.

"Mit if I give you one of your presents, will you go play with it and let me sleep? she said, unlike what she would have said on a non-birthday morning.

"Okay, I want all of them."

"One for now," Supermom got up and took down a brown paper bag from her closet. On top was a box wrapped in a current issue of a newspaper.

He shredded the paper in record time. The unplugged clock offered no comment.

"Oh boy, puzzles," he yelled. "Let's share. I'll do porky pig and you do Donald Duck."

"You promised I could sleep," Supermom sounded like she was whining. But that doesn't seem possible, how could a super heroine whine?

Conway's six-step success program

Looking for success, happiness, fulfillment in life? One powerful thought to keep in mind is to remember that "It wasn't raining when Noah built the Ark."

Thus did former sportswriter, veteran business leader and Congressional candidate Jack Conway sum up his personal success story in a recent talk with 75 personnel managers at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce sponsored seminar at the Lantana.

Success comes through goal setting and Conway outlined for the group the "thought process I unconsciously went through early in my real estate career" that he has now refined into a formal, six-step program.

Conway's "six steps towards goal setting as a way of problem solving are: Try to analyze the problem, crystallize your thinking. Make a written plan . . . make it specific, realistic and attainable. Developing a burning desire to achieve the goal. Develop confidence in yourself and abilities. Develop iron-will and determination to follow through. Peak towards performance."

Urging the group to "always chart the plan and your goal" Conway told them to "remember Yogi Bera's advice: "If you don't know where you're going, how do you know when you get there?"

"A short while ago I decided to set a new goal. The general objective was to get someone to run for Congress in the 10th district who would present a more moderate and business-like philosophy than the incumbent.

"The goal was to seek the Congressional seat now held by Gerry Studds . . . and accomplish it by November. This is an objective leading to a goal. But is it a reasonable one? How much money will it take? How much energy? How much sacrifice? The answer is much of all of these but I think it is a reasonable goal and an attainable one," Conway said.

Conway, who is campaigning for the 10th Congressional seat, built up his 25-office chain of real estate divisions over the last quarter century. He also owns three insurance companies, a mortgage company and a restaurant.

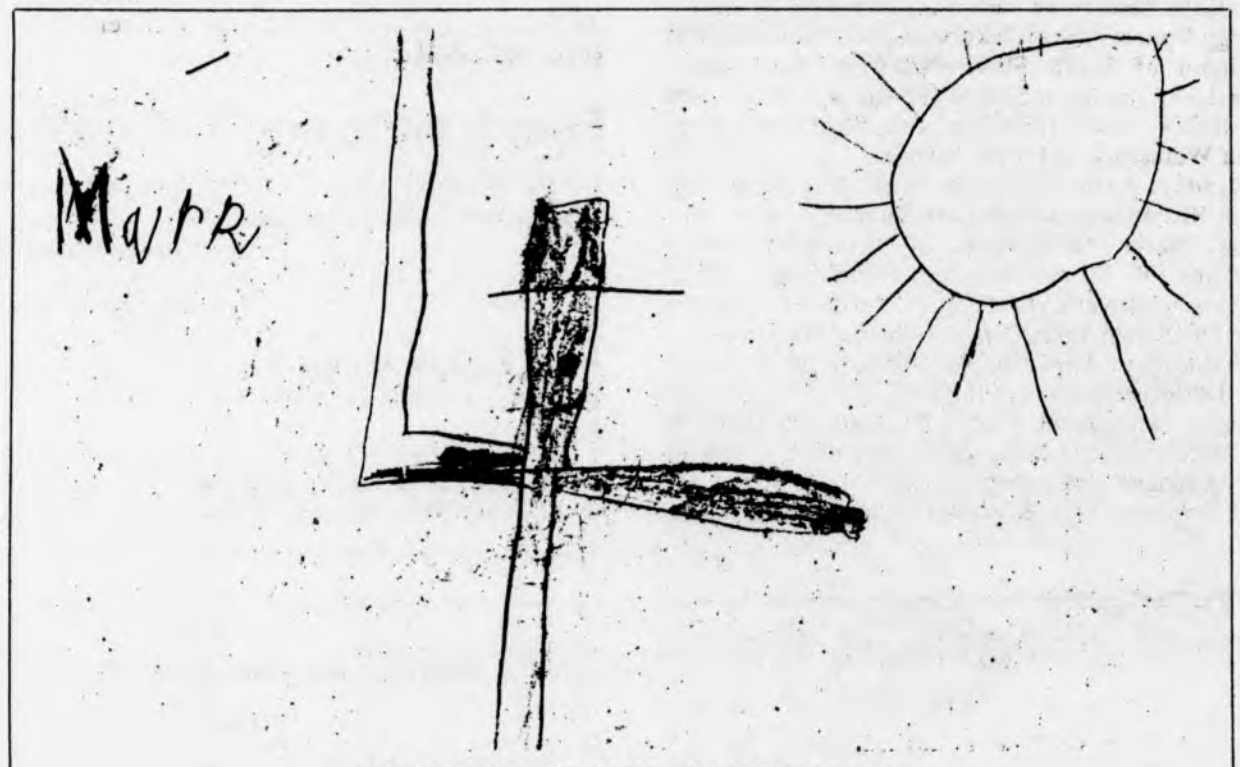
The Marinette Page comes to you courtesy of the school children of Cohasset.

The Mariner hopes to bring samples of the best work of the youngsters in the community through the page.

This week the spotlight is on the Grade 1 students in Marie Price's class at Joseph Osgood School. We only wish space would permit us to bring you more of the ideas and artistry of the students.

My number is ten. Ten is red. Ten has a cat. Ten lives in a treehouse.



Kate Barrett

'The Creative Connection'

A panel discussion entitled "The Creative Connection" will be presented on Sunday, March 28 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

This program will explore the relationship between the artist or author and the market place, in both practical and philosophical terms.

Robert Parker, a novelist recently written up in the Boston Sunday Globe, will be one of the panelists. Mr. Parker was formerly an English Professor at Northeastern University. His most recent work, just released, is called "Ceremony." Other panelists include: Bess Cutler, co-owner of the Cutler-Stavarides Gallery in Boston; Sandi Slone, an abstract painter who exhibits with Harcus Krakow in Boston and Acquavella in New York; and David Replogle, Executive Officer of Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Co. in Boston.

This is the final program in the Sunday at the Center series called "The Creative Process-Part II," made possible by the Huse Memorial Fund. The program will be followed by an informal reception where the audience may meet the panelists. Call the Art Center now at 383-9548 for a reservation as space is limited.

French music and food night

The Hingham Civic Orchestra presents another first...an all French program.

The evening will be filled with light-hearted, sophisticated music.

Included in the evening's festivities will be a pre-concert fete. From 7 until 8 p.m., nibble on French pastry, and learn a bit about the music to be performed at the concert in conversation with the guest soloist.

The Hingham Civic orchestra, conducted by John D. Corley, has just completed one of the most successful children's concerts in the history of the orchestra, and is now set to leap into spring with this delightful program of music of France.

The evening's soloist is Martha Anne Verbit, pianist. Miss Verbit's concert appearances include recitals in New York City, Boston, Washington, and major European cities. She has performed in the Newport, Rhode Island music festivals, and is a frequent soloist with the Boston Pops Orchestra. She has recorded for Genesis Records.

Some of the selections will include the wistful and familiar Pavane by Maurice Ravel: Concertino for Piano and Orchestra by Jean Francaix, a delightful piece rarely heard, and the thrilling finale, Symphonic Variations for Piano and Orchestra by Cesar Franck.

The performance is Saturday, April 3 at 8:30 p.m. at Notre Dame Academy, 1073 Main Street in Hingham. For ticket information, call 749-5862 or 545-5693. Tickets are also available at the door. Please do not call the school.

Concert at S.S. Conservatory

Israeli soprano, Sylvia Shamai with pianist, Darryl Rosenberg, will be featured at the fourth concert in the Chamber Music at Broad Cove House series on Friday, March 26 at 8 p.m. Presented by the trustees of the South Shore Conservatory, this subscription series is held at the historic Hingham home of Mr. and Mrs. Franz Euler III.

Shamai has sung with the major chamber orchestras of Israel and in recitals and concerts throughout Europe and the United States. Her performances have received enthusiastic reviews such as: "...Shamai's singing was beautifully proportioned between instrumental clarity and sensual expression..."from the Nachrichten Aus Bayreuth. She teaches voice in Tel Aviv where she lives with her husband and two sons.

Darryl Rosenberg is familiar to Hingham audiences having given many concerts in the area when he was a member of the South Shore Conservatory faculty. He taught piano and also the popular Great Composers series, a music appreciation class for adults. Rosenberg has appeared in concert at Carnegie Hall in New York City and in Boston at Jordan Hall, the Gardner Museum and at the Fogg Museum. He has also given many concerts in California, his home state. During his two tours of Israel, he played throughout the country. Currently he is a member of the piano faculty of the New England Conservatory's Extension Division.

For this concert Shamai and Rosenberg will offer a program of lieder by Shumann, Wolf and Schubert plus modern Israeli songs and spirited folksongs. A few tickets are available for this concert. Please call the Conservatory office for further information.

Lagrotteria says he'll be available to listen

At a Coffee held Friday, March 19 at the home of Eugenia Syrmopolous of 14 Tad Lane, Selectman candidate Jim Lagrotteria stated several promises.

When elected, Jim says he will be available at the Selectman's office on Monday and Wednesday from noon to 1 p.m. and on Thursday afternoon from 4 to 5 p.m. "I will not be there to read the mail," Jim says, "I will be there to listen to any citizen or town employee who has a problem of any kind."

"I feel that a lot of our citizens and town employees do not care to air their problems or seek advice at a formal Wednesday night Selectman's meeting, but would prefer to do it one on one and I intend to give them that chance. I chose the hours to preclude anyone working from taking time off from their jobs. Times when the town hall will be quiet."

On the casino question, Jim stated that when he is elected he will work as diligently as possible to oppose a casino in Hull or anywhere else in the Commonwealth. "It is clear," says Jim, "that we the townspeople of Cohasset are opposed to casinos and as their duly elected representative it will be my responsibility to carry out their wish. As an example of my dedication to this end I will attend the L.A.N.C.E. sponsored meeting on March 25 at the Gardner Auditorium."

"I must admit," Jim says, "that on a list of my priorities, I had no idea that the casino issue was more important than revaluation, the dump issue, the sewer issue, Prop. 2½, the schools and other town problems."

"However, at every coffee held for me, it surfaced as the number one issue and therefore it has forced me to give it a higher priority."

"At present, top priority must be our revaluation dilemma. For without certification and a tax rate set by June 30, the town budgets including the schools will not survive the cuts necessary to meet the tax levy limits in 1983."

Cable T.V. meeting

The cable television study committee will hold an open hearing on cable T.V. Monday, March 29, at 8 p.m. in Town Hall.

A representative of the state cable commission will attend.

Parental stress line

Unemployment and lack of community resources were cited as specific stress factors in a recent survey of callers to the Parental Stress Line, according to Sarah Belcher, Program Director. Over 17,000 callers to the Line, who have dialed the toll free number, 1-800-632-8188, attest that raising a child is a demanding job which is aggravated by other life stresses. The Parental Stress Line is a 24-hour, state-wide telephone counseling service for parents who are having difficulties with their children.

The lack of money (income) and information (about community resources), two basic material needs in today's world, make parenting especially difficult, according to 30 percent of the callers in this three-month survey. The research also acknowledged a number of additional stresses in parents' lives, including inadequate housing, health services, education and transportation. A further range of related problems identified in the data included isolation, loneliness, alcohol and drugs.

The Line is sponsored by Parents' and Children's Services, a private Boston-based social service agency, member of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay.

Leaving it to whomever

By Paul Steven Stone and Patricia Desmond

TV's favorite sitcom family is back (or perhaps they never really left). In any case, join us now for a brief visit with the Cleavers: Ward, June, Wally and The Beaver.

Tonight's episode: Springtime in Cohasset

Scene opens in entranceway hall of the Cleaver house on South Main Street. Ward, briefcase in hand, comes in.

WARD: (calling) June, I'm home! (seems surprised that there's no answer.) June? Oh June! (starts to look around for June)

JUNE: (entering front door with briefcase in hand) Ward, I'm home!

WARD: (laughing sheepishly) Hi Honey. I'm still have trouble getting used to this new modern lifestyle format.

JUNE: (suspiciously) I suppose that means another pizza from Papa Gino's.

WARD: (getting defensive) Heck June, I just got home myself. And besides, isn't it Beaver's turn to cook?

Cut to Beaver in the kitchen. Now a young adult of 19, Beaver is still as awkward and clutsy as ever. He runs from one boiling-over pot to the next while audience laughs it up in background.

Scene 2 opens at the Cleaver dining room where the family is just finishing off a large pepperoni and anchovy pizza from Papa Gino's. Wally, now 24, looks a little spaced out and alienated, not to mention grubby.

WALLY: So the Beaver blew it again, huh? Some cook!

WARD: Your brother did his best, Wally. That's all your mother and I ever ask of him.

WALLY: (laughing through his teeth) His best! Golly, Dad, he could kill off half of the village with his best, you know.

BEAVER: (to Wally) Well your cooking's not so great either, Wally.

JUNE (changing the subject) Ward, did you see that the Town Meeting's coming up Saturday. They're going to be voting on whether or not to allow the dump to go on. They might change to a new fangled system.

BEAVER: (excitedly) Gee, wouldn't that be great! I don't know why they let all that trash heap up that way.

WALLY: Yeah, and the place is filthy with rabbits and ducks and lots of funny looking birds.

WARD: Now boys, the dump is a sensitive ecological area. Not only that, but it has one of the most historic sites in Cohasset.

JUNE: Your father's right. We really only decided to move here after we saw the sun setting over Cedar Street. Ward, you should go to the Town Meeting.

WARD: (slightly embarrassed) Honey, you know...

JUNE: (suddenly understanding) Oh, that's right. There's a basketball game on that afternoon.

WARD: A big one — really!

BEAVER: Well, let me go to the Town Meeting, Dad. I'll take care of it for you.

WARD: Well, thank you Beaver. That's really nice of you.

JUNE: (beaming) You're really growing up to be quite a good citizen, Beaver.

WALLY: (to himself) Now I'm really going to be sick.

Scene 3 opens with Beaver and Lumpy sitting in the auditorium at Cohasset High School during the Town Meeting.

BEAVER: Gee, Lumpy, I've been listening to these guys for two hours and I still don't understand any of this.

LUMPY: Yeah, I know what you mean.

BEAVER: I got an idea. Why don't we just yell "yes" the next time someone asks us to, then we can

Officials want Cedar Street dump to stay open along with all the options

It was after midnight when the board of health got to the dump question Monday night.

After weeks of discussion that included other town boards, the new owners of the Cohasset Heights dump, engineers and other contractors, the board voted unanimously to go on with work at the Cedar Street landfill.

The board will be asking town meeting (which starts at 1 p.m. Saturday at the high school) to provide money to cap the old dump operation, spend money for a program of expansion at the site, buy bins to help clean up the dump operation and hire two full time workers and two part time workers to insure the plan works.

In the past the dump operated with one full time worker and everyone has heard of the problems at the landfill.

Barbara Kern, board member, said the only way to make the dump operation work is by having enough workers there.

Michael Bliss, board chairman, made the motion on the dump saying he hasn't been able to get the answers he needed from Barry Bros., owners of Cohasset Heights, to go ahead in that direction.

"There's the question of liability," Bliss said. "And over a five year period I think the figures (for operation of the municipal dump vs. transfering trash to the Heights) are comparable. But I think on a 10 year period, the cost to the town would be cheaper to keep the dump open."

He added that the town wouldn't be subjected to limited dumping hours if it kept its own facility.

Under the plan in writing from Barry Bros. the town dump, used as a transfer station, would have to close about noon on Saturday and could not be open at all on Sunday.

The limited hours would be due to the hours of Barry Bros. own operation and the fact they would be needed to haul away bins of trash whenever full.

Bliss said the town might find a better option in the future.

He suggested the future 10 years from now might be either compacting the trash and transfering it elsewhere or using a resource recovery system. There's talk about one being built somewhere in the South Shore.

The vote on the dump was unanimous.

Board member Marilyn Sweeney quickly seconded Bliss' motion on the town dump.

After town meeting the board will hold a special meeting — expected to be sometime in April — to discuss changing the fee structure at the dump, the sticker program for vehicles and the possibility of mandatory recycling.

Kern pointed out the dump will be generating more money next year than it has yielded in the past.

BOOKENDS — Michelle Roycraft and Pam Haase, both nine years-old, read together at the Cohasset Library.

Chemical kill of gypsy moths worries some

There's a group in town working for new strategies on the coming gypsy moth kill.

Martha Hurtig wants people of similar minds to get in touch with her so they can work to stop the aerial spraying of Sevin.

But Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, said this week he sees the plan as cast in concrete.

"That was the vote of town meeting," Clark said. "And we don't have a town meeting coming up with an article to do anything different."

Still there are people in town who see the chemical as too strong to be safe. Some of them attended the meeting on gypsy moth spraying in Hingham this week.

An informational meeting concerning aerial spraying for gypsy moth control was held at Hingham town hall on Monday night.

Cohasset is one of 35 communities in the state that intends to battle gypsy moths through aerial spraying. Some 50 communities have notified the state's Department of Environmental Management (DEM) as to their plans for ground level gypsy moth control.

According to Gilbert Bliss, the state department's director of forests and parks, approximately 135,000 acres in Massachusetts will be treated for gypsy moth control this year.

About $3,000 will pay the costs of chemicals for spraying from the ground level in Scituate this spring. Cohasset will spend about $50,000 for an aerial control project.

"Basically we view the gypsy moths as a nuisance to people. Public control should be considered and public and federal funds should be used," said Bliss.

"We don't view the insect as a serious threat to the forests of Massachusetts," said Bliss, who acknowledged that many people would disagree with his statement.

In a notice sent to all mayors and boards of selectmen in communities throughout the state, the

Cohasset's week ...

Builders & selectmen meet

Three local builders met with selectmen last Wednesday and discussed establishing a set of guidelines to comply with recently adopted legislation which comes under the board of health.

Robert Byrnes, a builder, told selectmen that new rules for obtaining permits for home additions are expensive and time consuming.

Instead of presenting detailed engineering plans of a home's septic system for approval from the board of health at their regularly scheduled meeting, the builders want Hingham's system where the health agent provides a list of guidelines for builders to abide by.

Since a new health agent was recently named, selectmen agreed that now is the time to rectify the situation.

Youth soccer program

The town's spring youth soccer program will be using Milliken field on Saturdays and Sundays from April 3 to June 6. Selectmen unanimously voted last week to allow the group use of the field.

Pitching a truck

A Cohasset concerned citizen, Robert Sturdy, went before selectmen last week suggesting that a hydraulic boom truck be provided for the Tree and Park department.

"You have a hard working group," said Sturdy but their efficiency is handicapped by their outdated equipment. Selectmen should consider getting the tree department back into the modern age, he said.

"It's frustrating to see what the department has to work with," said Sturdy.

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie said they tried to budget a new truck once before but it was too expensive. Although board members were concerned regarding Sturdy's request, they said it was too late to include a new truck in next year's budget.

Children at work

Even school children are working at getting out the vote for Saturday's town meeting.

Eugene Crowell, school supt., said Tuesday a four page packet is going home with the students urging their parents to come out for town meeting.

The material in the packet was put together by school children themselves.

Eliopoulos new health agent

Elaine Eliopoulos is taking over as the town's health agent this week. She's been working with the old health agent Kevin O'Brien in the past week. The new agent attended the meeting of the board of health Monday in the health office.

She graduated with a B.S. from Emmanuel and with a masters degree in public health from Yale. She has been director of public health in Dracut.

Conways donate flags

Jack and Patti Conway recently donated a flag to the town which was accepted "with thanks" by selectmen last week.

The 3 x 5 flag once flew over the Washington, D.C. capitol in memory of the Norfolk County Veterans. Patti Conway won the flag as a door prize at a recent function.

Sweeney stickers available

Marilyn Sweeney will have stickers available for her reelection campaign on the day of the town balloting — Saturday, April 10.

All voting happens at town hall.

Marilyn is running for reelection to the board of health, although her name will not appear on the ballot.

She said donations toward paying for the cost of the stickers would be accepted.
